Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the Chamber Coordinator of the Colton Chamber of Commerce, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to large and small businesses. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Sincerely,

Christina Gaitan

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

My name is Jeff Ruble and I am the CEO of the Columbia Area Development Partnership (CADP) in South Carolina. Our mission is to drive high-impact economic growth by accelerating new industry investment, keeping current employers rooted and ready for ongoing success, and fostering a dynamic, future-ready workforce. With that mission in mind, the CADP emphasizes the importance of a robust transcontinental railroad to these goals.

A transcontinental railroad has the ability to reduce shipping costs, ease bottlenecks, and strengthen regional connectivity. A robust railroad would become the primary freight transportation option for Richland County and abroad.

Production output is central to our region's economic future. Soon, Richland County will be home to a Scout Motors' $2 billion production facility, which is expected to create 4,000 jobs and produce more than 200,000 vehicles annually beginning in 2027. Success for this facility depends on reliable access to national markets – a need that a transcontinental railroad would fulfill. With coast-to-coast rail, Richland County could emerge as a hub for U.S. manufacturing, benefitting Scout Motors as well as the countless other producers that rely on our region.

Our grain processing industry would benefit from access to a transcontinental railroad as well. Although Richland is a key nexus for grain processing and distribution, we depend heavily on imports of raw materials from the Midwest. Without a direct rail line, shipping bottlenecks and high transportation costs have consistently delayed on-time deliveries and driven up consumer prices across the region. A transcontinental railroad could help resolve those challenges.

Richland County is just one of many communities across America that would be changed for the better by a transcontinental rail network. As the leader of its CADP, I have firsthand experience of how a transcontinental railroad can strengthen domestic manufacturing and enhance the overall well-being of the people and businesses in my area.

A transcontinental railroad could provide an unprecedented boost to American manufacturing – an opportunity unlike any our country has seen.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

Columbia Basin College (CBC) is proud to serve more than 12,000 students each year, many of whom are the first in their families to attend college. As a Washington community college, we provide students with affordable access to higher education and career training that leads to strong futures.

Over the last few years, we have partnered with Union Pacific Railroad to increase opportunities into trade-focused workforce programs. These opportunities give our students the skills they need to step into high-demand careers, including those in the freight rail industry. For many, this means stable jobs, good wages, and the ability to support their families while contributing to Washington's economy.

We know one of the greatest challenges for students is finding clear, reliable career pathways after graduation. Union Pacific Railroad has been both a recruiting and funding partner to CBC, making it possible for students to see real opportunities in industry. By working together, we are opening doors for students to succeed in meaningful careers that keep our communities and state moving forward.

In this spirit, I write to express support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Freight rail is vital to Washington's economy, while also creating career opportunities for the students we serve.

Columbia Basin College's success is reflected in the thousands of graduates who join Washington's workforce each year. Our focus on student achievement ensures that graduates are prepared for the jobs of today and tomorrow. With partners like Union Pacific, we can give students not just an education, but a career pathway. The proposed merger offers the promise of even greater stability and opportunity for students entering freight rail and related industries.

re: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

On behalf of Portland's Columbia Corridor Association (CCA), I write to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. CCA represents 3500 businesses of many sizes and industries who collectively employ more than 75,000 in the Portland metro area. The Columbia Corridor is at the nexus of two interstate rail lines, two interstate highways, an international airport and international seaport. Many of our members depend on efficient, reliable, and cost-effective freight service to compete and remain viable in today's economy.

Freight rail is a fundamental component of the Oregon state economy. Rail powers Oregon industry, safely moves our exports and supports our farmers, connecting Oregon communities to markets everywhere. Reliable rail service helps Oregon businesses remain competitive against aggressive overseas competition and remain right here in North America, supporting job stability and growth, and bolstering the long-term vitality of our communities.

CCA believes the proposed merger will strengthen our essential freight rail network and deliver meaningful benefits to Portland businesses and the broader economy, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: The combined network will offer more direct routes across the country and greater flexibility, minimizing the risk of service disruptions.
- Reduced Transit Times: By eliminating handoffs, the combined railroad will shorten delivery times, helping businesses meet customer demand more quickly and efficiently.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology, and equipment, further improving service quality, capacity, and safety.
- Expanded Reach: A broader geographic footprint will open new opportunities for Oregon manufacturers and agricultural producers to access customers nationwide and globally.

We encourage regulatory review authorities to thoroughly consider the economic impacts of this merger; in particular, concern for increased prices. If a customer ships from Oregon to Virginia, it will likely become more difficult to choose the cheapest carrier for the eastern leg.

Thank you for the opportunity to share our perspective and for your leadership on this important matter.

Respectfully submitted,

Subject: Comment on Union Pacific's Funding of Community Programs

To Whom It May Concern,

Though I can not speak to the consequences of a possible merger, I can comment, as a recipient of Union Pacific's generosity and support in our environmental education work, that their contributions have had an outsized impact on improving environmental literacy within the communities we serve.

Over the past several years, Union Pacific has provided consistent funding that has allowed us to expand our field-based learning programs, bring more students into direct contact with Oregon's natural and cultural landscapes, and build partnerships that connect schools, families, and community organizations around shared stewardship goals.

This ongoing partnership has become foundational to our ability to reach youth and adults across the Columbia Gorge region. The reliability of their support has enabled us to plan for long-term impact, deepen relationships with educators, and sustain the staff and materials that make hands-on science learning possible.

I would be glad to speak further with anyone interested in learning more about how Union Pacific's community investment has translated into measurable educational outcomes and a stronger, more connected community.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community leader in Columbus Nebraska, reliable rail service is essential for our local economy, businesses and residents. With more manufacturing per capita than anywhere else in our Federal Reserve district, the importance of reliable rail service is greater than many of our peer communities. Our manufacturing community extensively uses Union Pacific and relies on them to provide reliable and cost-effective rail service to transport product in and out of our community.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to ensure long term reliability for our rail infrastructure and deliver long-term benefits for our manufacturers and our business community at large. The merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion and expanded market reach for our businesses. It also means continued investment in rail infrastructure that will lead to enhanced safety, job creation and ensuring the Columbus community is in a position to grow and succeed economically in an increasingly competitive economic environment.

On behalf of the Columbus Area Chamber of Commerce and our nearly 700 members, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so the Columbus community can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments and opportunities it will bring. Since our community's founding in the 1856, our success and growth has occurred in part to being located on the Union Pacific main line, and we wholeheartedly believe that the proposed Union Pacific Transcontinental Railroad will continue to benefit the Columbus community for years to come.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President and CEO of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, representing the entire Columbus Ohio Region, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

The proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) presents a pivotal moment for American freight policy. I am submitting my attached op-ed, "Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern: A Merger That Strengthens Competition Where It Counts," published in The National Law Review, to contribute to the Surface Transportation Board's public record and to highlight why this merger aligns with the Board's statutory mission to serve the public interest.

Unlike most mergers reviewed by the Department of Justice or the Federal Trade Commission, rail consolidations fall under the exclusive jurisdiction of the Surface Transportation Board. Congress directed the Board to evaluate these transactions not only through the lens of competition, but also with regard to service quality, safety, and system reliability. The central question is whether the merger benefits the public and in this case, the answer is yes.

The facts are clear. Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern operate in largely distinct geographic corridors, with minimal overlap. Their networks are complementary, not competitive. By linking these systems, the merger will create America's first truly transcontinental railroad, offering seamless coast-to-coast service without costly handoffs. This efficiency will strengthen rail's ability to compete with trucking, which has long benefited from massive public investment and route flexibility.

The results of this merger are clear: More choices for shippers, downward pressure on freight rates, and better service across the board. This is competition in its most dynamic form – what economists call a "discovery process," where firms innovate to meet consumer needs.

Some critics argue that the size of the merged entity should raise concerns. But the Board's role is not to judge scale in the abstract. It is to determine whether the merger enhances consumer welfare. In this case, scale brings efficiency, and efficiency brings lower costs and better service.

Overregulation or reflexive opposition to mergers risks dulling the very forces that make markets work. As Friedrich Hayek warned, central planning can undermine the spontaneous order of competition and innovation. The STB should heed that lesson and approve this merger.

Thank you for your consideration of this matter. I hope this perspective adds value to your deliberations and underscores the broader public benefits this merger can bring.

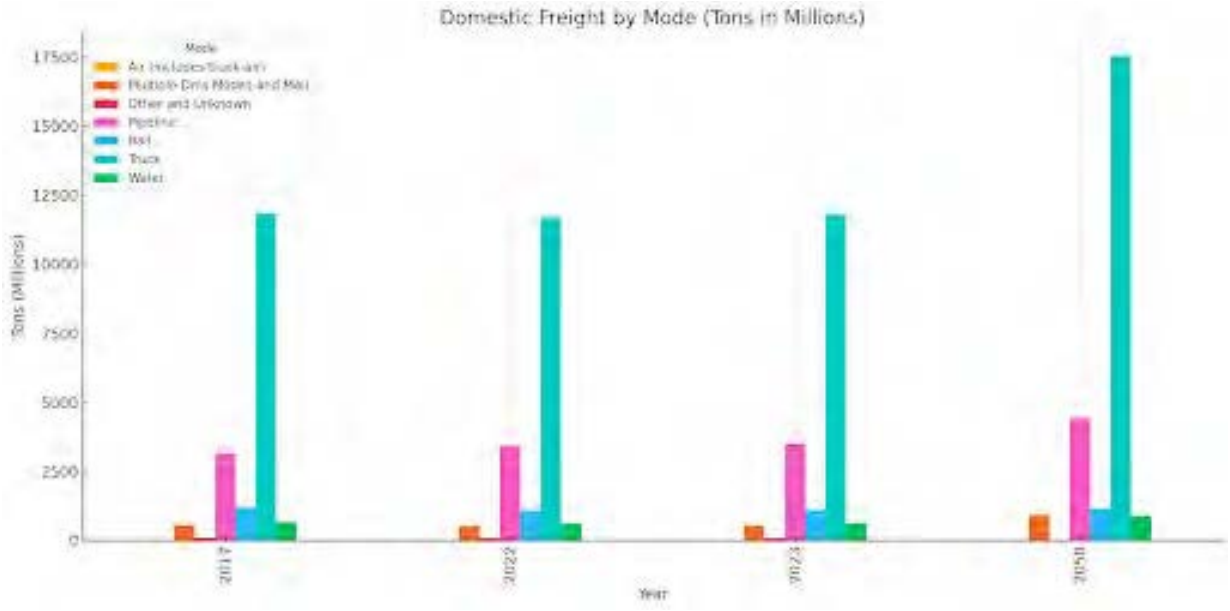
THE NATIONAL LAW REVIEW

Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern: A Merger That Strengthens Competition Where It Counts



by: Ashley Baker The Committee for Justice
Tuesday, September 16, 2025

When evaluating mergers, the law demands a balance: protecting competition while allowing efficiencies that benefit consumers. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger, now before the Surface Transportation Board (STB), will test whether regulators can apply that balance in a fact-driven way.

Unlike most mergers reviewed by the Justice Department or Federal Trade Commission, railroads fall exclusively under the STB's jurisdiction. Congress instructed the Board to approve rail consolidations if they serve the "public interest"—a standard broader than conventional antitrust tests. Competition matters, but so does service quality, safety, and system reliability. At the end of the day, however, the question is simple: will the merger benefit the public?

On the facts, the companies' networks are complementary, not overlapping. Union Pacific covers the western and central corridors; Norfolk Southern is anchored in the east. Their lines rarely compete for the same customers. Rather than removing a rival, the merger would stitch together a seamless coast-to-coast system—America's first truly transcontinental railroad.

That matters because the real competitive challenge affecting transport by rail is not other railroads but trucking. For decades, long-haul trucking has gained market share at rail's expense, aided by massive highway investments and the flexibility of trucks to serve any route. The result has been fewer choices for shippers and higher costs for consumers. Markets flourish when firms are free to compete across modes, each pressured to improve by the actions of the other.

Source: U.S. Department of Transportation Bureau of Transportation Statistics

By linking networks, the merged company could offer direct cross-country service without costly handoffs. That efficiency would force both rail and trucking to sharpen their offerings. Shippers would have more options, rates would reflect increased competition, and consumers would ultimately pay less. Many economists described competition as a "discovery process," where entrepreneurs continually find ways to serve customers better. A Union Pacific-Norfolk Southern merger exemplifies this dynamic: it "discovers" a new way to deliver goods more efficiently across the entire continent. In other words, rail would finally become a real coast-to-coast shipping option.

Critics argue that size alone makes the deal suspect. However, the STB's role is not to decide whether the merged entity looks "too big" but whether it advances consumer welfare. Here, scale means efficiency, and efficiency means downward pressure on shipping costs.

The STB's "new rules," adopted in 2001, require mergers to include provisions for "enhanced competition." This merger does precisely that—not by pitting railroads against each other where overlap is minimal, but by enabling rail to better compete with trucking. Value is determined by consumers' needs, not regulators' abstractions. For shippers, that value lies in reliable, cost-effective service—and the merged system promises to deliver for the consumer.

Overregulation or reflexive opposition to mergers risks dulling the very forces that make markets work. The Nobel Prize-winning economist Friedrich Hayek cautioned against the hubris of central planning, where authorities impose their preferred structures instead of letting rivalry and discovery run their course. The STB should heed that warning. This merger is not about protecting incumbents; it is about empowering competition between modes of transport, giving shippers more leverage, and driving costs down for consumers.

The statutory framework does not ask whether a merger is politically popular or ideologically comfortable. It asks whether the merger serves the public interest. By broadening options, strengthening rail–truck competition, and lowering costs, the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger does exactly that.

All of the views and opinions expressed in this article are those of the author and not necessarily those of The National Law Review.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger (Docket No. FD 36873)

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Community Resources Council (CRC) in Topeka, Kansas, I write to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern, which would establish a truly transcontinental railway system. We believe this merger offers the potential for significant benefits—not just in terms of rail infrastructure and logistics—but for communities across the nation, including those we serve here in Topeka.

CRC is a longstanding community nonprofit, dedicated to linking resources, advocating for equitable access, and advancing initiatives that foster stability and opportunity in our region. Through our CRC*CARES Home Tenant to Homeowner Program, we work to help local families transition from renting to owning—a key pathway to longer-term financial security and rooted community investment.

We were honored to receive recent support for the CRC*CARES Homes initiative through the Community Ties Grant provided by Union Pacific. That grant will allow us to expand services, reach more families, and accelerate homeownership among deserving residents. The investment from Union Pacific makes it possible for everyday Kansans to build equity, strengthen neighborhoods, and grow a more resilient community.

Union Pacific's engagement in Topeka is not merely transactional—it reflects a deeper commitment to civic partnership. That kind of corporate citizenship is rare and meaningful. We see how their giving, volunteerism, and local presence have already enriched the quality of life for many in our city.

We believe the proposed merger would amplify these positive effects in several ways:

- Enhanced capacity and reliability across the national rail network would benefit local economies by improving freight responsiveness, reducing bottlenecks, and attracting new commercial investment to regions along the route.
- Greater operational scale may lead to more efficient resource allocation, allowing Union Pacific to maintain or even expand philanthropic and community engagement in the places where it already operates.
- Wider strategic alignment would enable Union Pacific to more effectively support community-scale investments—like ours—in a broader, interlinked footprint.

As a community organization directly affected by Union Pacific's corporate citizenship, CRC sees this merger as more than an infrastructure transaction. It is an opportunity to expand the social, economic, and civic ripple effects of a company that already invests locally. In Topeka, the benefits will be tangible: stronger neighborhoods, more homeowners, improved local vibrancy, and deeper civic partnerships.

We respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve Docket No. FD 36873 and allow this merger to proceed. We are confident that the merger will preserve—and likely expand—Union Pacific's ability to serve as a positive force in communities across the country.

Thank you for your consideration. Please feel free to contact me if you require any further insights from our perspective in Topeka.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

My name is Connor Wolfe, and I am the owner of Connor Wolfe Thrifts, a small business based in Clemson, South Carolina, that sells curated apparel and lifestyle goods to customers across the Southeast. I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS).

For small businesses like mine, logistics and shipping reliability are the foundation of growth. The UP-NS merger would strengthen that foundation by improving supply chain efficiency and delivery dependability-allowing me to get products to buyers on time and at a lower cost.

This merger would create a more connected and resilient rail network, helping small retailers compete with larger companies that already have access to faster and cheaper distribution systems. With improved freight movement and reduced delays, I could better manage inventory, plan shipments more accurately, and ensure that customers receive their orders promptly.

Additionally, by easing congestion and creating more streamlined transportation routes, this merger would help lower overall shipping costs and improve the consistency of deliveries, giving small businesses like mine the ability to compete and grow on a level playing field.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern, helping small businesses across South Carolina access the logistics reliability and efficiency they need to succeed.

Consumer Support for Union Pacific-Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As an organization that advocates for policies that expand choice and affordability for American consumers, we at the Consumer Choice Center write this letter to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) that will be determined by your agency.

The Consumer Choice Center is an independent, non-partisan consumer advocacy group championing the benefits of freedom of choice, innovation, and abundance in everyday life. We champion smart policies that are fit for growth, promote lifestyle choice, and defend technological innovation.[1]

As our own research on transportation policy has demonstrated, for consumers to benefit from a competitive environment with lower prices and fewer regulatory roadblocks, the Surface Transportation Board must reimagine rail policy to also consider the end effects to consumers and the need for investment.[2]

The Board should foster a competitive environment that engenders more innovation, elicits investment, and expands choice for companies shipping products and the consumers that receive them.

The merger before your agency represents a significant opportunity for more affordable and efficient delivery of goods to benefit manufacturers and the consumers that rely on them. The ability to combine the scale of both private rail firms on opposing coasts will bring dividends that will be passed onto consumers in the form of lower prices for shippers and manufacturers.

Mergers and acquisitions are market-driven agreements that hope to reduce transaction costs and create more value for shareholders, stakeholders, and customers. In this circumstance, the proposed merger would be a net positive to consumer welfare and the broader transportation market, and we believe it passes the test the STB is to consider.

In combining the country's two biggest rail networks, this unified system will streamline shipping and lower logistical costs, translating into a more affordable consumer experience all along the supply chain. This merger will bring real benefits to households and small businesses. It will improve service by linking two disparate rail systems, create more employment opportunities, help improve safety considerations, and bring untold benefits to consumers.

The unification of UP and NS will not only benefit America's consumers through lower costs and faster shipping but have a second-order effect of reducing highway congestion and infrastructure taxes, often footed or passed on to consumers. According to the Texas A&M Transportation Institute, American commuters lost an average of 63 hours in traffic in 2024, the highest level ever recorded. This loss represents a cost of $269 billion per year, underscoring the need to provide affordable alternatives for shippers and logistics companies normally reliant on heavy trucking and other last-mile options.

The unification of UP and NS presents an opportunity to allow more goods to be transported across the country by rail, increasing competition in the transportation sector that will benefit all firms seeking to get their goods to market, as well as the consumers that expect to buy those goods at better prices.

For even more competitive benefits, the STB should work with like minds in Congress to amend the common carrier obligation and restore the STB's remit as a remedial agency, focused on resolving disputes and promoting a competitive environment rather than creating its own policies.

As such, the Consumer Choice Center urges the Surface Transportation Board to approve the merger between UP and NS and help foster a more efficient and competitive freight rail sector in the United States. Doing so will promote a more innovative and cost-effective freight system that benefits all consumers for years to come.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President and CEO of the Council Bluffs Chamber of Commerce, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to large and small businesses. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Sincerely,

Chris LaFerla

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

On behalf of the Council for Quality Growth and our Board of Directors, I am writing to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

The Atlanta region has long been recognized as a transportation hub in the global economy. The merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern aligns with the mission of the Council for Quality Growth - to promote balanced and responsible growth in metro Atlanta and Georgia. Our region houses a world-class airport, strong infrastructure within our highway and interstate systems, and direct rail lines to the Savannah and Brunswick ports, thus showcasing how the metro region is directly connected to national and international markets.

Additionally, we support the combined strengths of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern as it will increase the dependability of service and create seamless coast-to-coast rail access. For Atlanta, a global city that already leads in logistics and supply chain innovation, this expanded network will enhance our ability to support the continued growth of commerce and trade, benefiting not only our city but also the Southeast and the nation.

Norfolk Southern is a very valuable community partner in Atlanta. NS has heavily invested in a strong and talented workforce and generously contributed to many quality-of-life initiatives, including the Council for Quality Growth. It is our hope that these types of investments will continue with the merged companies.

Lastly, this merger is a signal of continued investment in rail infrastructure that will ensure Atlanta remains not only a regional hub, but a true global gateway, connected by rail, road, and air to every corner of the country and the world.

For these reasons, we urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a Northumberland County Commissioner from Pennsylvania, I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Norfolk Southern (NS) and Union Pacific (UP). Norfolk Southern operates several of our short rail railroads and has had a partnership with SEDA-COG, an 11-county community and economic development agency in our region.

Northumberland County is home to manufacturers, farmers, and consumers who depend on safe and reliable rail. By establishing the nation's first seamless coast-to-coast rail network, this merger will enhance the efficiency and affordability of freight rail, encouraging more businesses to choose this safer and more sustainable mode of transportation. The resulting increase in freight traffic through our intermodal facilities will stimulate job growth in the rail sector and strengthen our region.

Beyond economic opportunities, the merger promises meaningful daily benefits for our residents. Increased rail efficiency will reduce the number of long-haul trucks on our highways and bridges — vehicles that place significant strain on shared infrastructure and pose safety risks to our communities.

I strongly support this merger and the economic opportunities it represents for our community. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board will approve it without delay.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Commissioner Joe Klebon

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community leader in the State of Michigan, reliable rail service is essential for our local economy, businesses and residents. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity deliver long-term benefits such as effective rail transportation, job creation and Michigan remains competitive in our global economy.

Covenant House Michigan is a nonprofit organization that operates regional shelters in Detroit and Grand Rapids and provides comprehensive social services to homeless youth ages 18-24. We began our operations in 1997 and have cared for and support more than 86,000 unhoused youth to achieve personal stability, education, career development and job placement, independent housing, and self-sufficiency- ending their homelessness and help them pursue a fulfilling and prosperous future.

Norfolk Southern has been a vital community partner for our organization and their "Thriving Communities" philanthropic support over the past several years has been essential to developing and sustaining our services and operations. Most recently, their funding supported our core emergency shelter and case planning services. This includes mission-critical components of residential programs and their associated individualized case management, including costs for individualized support from our team of experienced counselors, and social workers. We are profoundly grateful to Norfolk Southern for its history of support and hopeful for future assistance that will further our transformative work to end youth homelessness and the conditions that allow it to persist in Detroit and Grand Rapids for good.

Upon learning more about the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger, it will benefit our society in meaningful ways with better service, logistics, and growing regional and national business capacity.

On behalf of Covenant House Michigan, I support the Surface Transportation Board's approval of this merger so we can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments and opportunities it will bring - connecting our communities regionally, nationally and across the globe.

Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a State Representative in New Castle County, Delaware, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses, and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets, providing an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the potential to significantly shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding its geographic reach, and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community, which relies on freight shipments, would benefit from strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency, and access to new markets. Our entire community would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could reduce the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is essential that these changes continue to strike a balance between efficiency and safety, sustainability, and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. And reducing highway congestion decreases the need for highway maintenance spending and improves the quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, the merger could enhance service dependability, support local businesses, and foster opportunities for infrastructure investment and job creation.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe, and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Senator of the 19th District, I recognize the vital role freight rail plays in supporting our economy, businesses, and residents. Reliable rail service connects our region to broader markets, reduces highway congestion, and provides an efficient, sustainable transportation option.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the potential to strengthen this network by offering more direct routes, expanding market access, and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. These improvements would benefit our business community through greater service reliability, supply chain efficiency, and access to new markets, while also reducing truck traffic on our highways.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, ensuring it balances efficiency with safety, sustainability, and long-term community benefits.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community stakeholder and non-profit organization in Denver, Colorado, the Denver Zoo Conservation Alliance cannot speak to the proposed merger, but we do wish to share our firsthand experience with Union Pacific Railroad's longstanding commitment to our mission of inspiring communities to save wildlife for future generations.

Union Pacific has been a valued partner in supporting a variety of Denver Zoo programs that advance wildlife conservation, community engagement, and environmental stewardship. Most recently, Union Pacific provided funding for our grasslands conservation program at Daniels Park in Colorado, which focuses on restoring native habitats, supporting pollinators and prairie species, and connecting local communities to the importance of healthy ecosystems.

Beyond field conservation, Union Pacific's support has also made the Zoo more accessible to families across our community through initiatives such as complimentary memberships and admission opportunities. These connections to nature can have a profound and lasting impact. One guest recently shared that receiving a free Zoo membership on one of the most difficult days of her life—while struggling with postpartum depression—brought her renewed hope and healing. Over the following year, she and her two daughters visited often, finding joy, comfort, and connection through their experiences at the Zoo.

We are grateful for Union Pacific's collaboration and for the chance to highlight the constructive role such partnerships play in promoting education, access, and environmental stewardship.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Executive Director of the Mary L Peyton Foundation, Vice President of the Friends of Sunset Heights Neighborhood Association, and acting board member of El Paso's Downtown Deck Plaza foundation, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Through my leadership roles and community involvement, I fully support any and every opportunity to increase our city's productivity and connectivity.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the community of Fairbury, Nebraska, I write in support of the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Fairbury's identity has been deeply shaped by the history of American railroads, and our heritage gives us a unique appreciation for the evolution of the national rail network and the importance of forward-looking rail policy.

Fairbury emerged in the late 19th century as a significant regional rail center. First as a hub for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad and later as part of a broader competitive corridor that helped define rail freight patterns throughout the Great Plains. Our downtown historic district, brick streets, and century-old depots stand as visible reminders of how profoundly rail transportation influenced our community's economic and cultural footprint. Fairbury's industries, agriculture, and commercial identity all developed around the rhythm and reliability of freight movement.

While Fairbury was never a Union Pacific headquarters town, our community has long understood how major carriers shape the economic landscape of Nebraska. The evolution of neighboring rail lines, the shifts in freight traffic after the Rock Island closure, and the continued vitality of grain, manufacturing, and distribution in our region all underscore a simple truth: the strength of the national rail network strengthens communities like ours.

Because of this, we view the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger as another step in the long arc of railroad evolution, which communities such as Fairbury have witnessed for more than a century. As national markets become increasingly interconnected, rail efficiency, interoperability, and long-range network resilience matter more than ever. A unified system with shared resources and complementary geographic coverage positions Union Pacific to meet modern demands with historic reliability.

Fairbury knows what it means to adapt and grow with the railroads. We have seen firsthand how rail innovation fuels economic possibility, from the early days of westward expansion to today's intermodal and high-efficiency freight networks. For that reason, we are proud to support a merger that aligns with the long-standing national interest in safe, reliable, and integrated freight transportation.

We believe this merger will encourage stronger coast-to-coast service, improved supply chain stability, and a rail system fit for the next century. These are values that resonate deeply with communities rooted in railroad heritage.

Thank you for your leadership and thoughtful review of this matter. Fairbury stands ready to support the continued evolution of American railroading and looks forward to the opportunities this merger may bring.

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President of the Franklin County Area Development Corporation (FCADC), I am keenly aware of the vital role that reliable rail service plays in supporting our local economy, businesses, and residents. Headquartered in Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, the FCADC has a 39-year track record of successfully facilitating community and economic development projects across our region. Many of these "success stories" were made possible through partnerships with Norfolk Southern.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger represents a significant opportunity to build upon these partnerships and deliver long-term benefits for our community. This merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion, and expanded market access for our businesses. Just as importantly, it signals continued investment in rail infrastructure—enhancing safety, creating jobs, and ensuring our region remains competitive in a rapidly evolving economy.

On behalf of the FCADC, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger. Doing so will allow our businesses, workforce, and community to take full advantage of the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities that will flow from a stronger, more resilient rail network.

Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a Commissioner in Franklin County, Pennsylvania, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community that relies on freight shipments would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. And our whole community would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could decrease the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. And reducing highway congestion decreases the need for highway maintenance spending and improves quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Chairman of the Franklin County Metropolitan Planning Agency, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods. Half of all our exits in Franklin County are basically warehouse terminals because of our proximity to Richmond, Baltimore, Washington, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and New York City. Norfolk Southern has looked to the future, invested and built an intermodal facility to partner with our warehouse development here.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community that relies on freight shipments, would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. I feel the entire surface transportation network from coast to coast would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could decrease the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Although highway congestion and emissions would remain the same or tick higher in our county, we must consider the Rail yard to warehouse and warehouse to customer portion of the intermodal chain. Although we applaud the efforts of UP and NS in their attempt to give customers the best service, our corridor has been absent of any real capacity building to grow with our development of warehouses and other commerce over the last 30 years. That bottleneck is multi-state, from the Potomac River Bridge on I-81 between West Virginia and Maryland continuing north 72 miles through Franklin County to the Harrisburg Region. Including Railyard to Customer planning for the final link of the intermodal chain, the merger's intent would improve service dependability, support local businesses and create increased urgency for infrastructure investment and job growth here in Franklin County, PA.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, a comprehensive review of the entire intermodal path from manufacturer to customer makes sense to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally. Having multiple cross country Freight rail corridors is also an important asset for national defense and when regional disaster strikes.

Sincerely,

Samuel Cressler

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the President/Chief Executive Officer of the Fremont Chamber of Commerce, a business organization in the Bay Area, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of the economy, helping California workers, farmers, and businesses move the goods that sustain our communities and connect them to markets around the state and country. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses across California. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities from the Bay Area and beyond.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it is about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development for California and our minority communities, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As President of Frontiers of Freedom, I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern and to share my recent op-ed published in Human Events, "An America First Rail Network: Why the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern Merger Matters." I believe the analysis and perspective presented in my piece may be of value to the Board as it evaluates this important decision.

America's freight rail system has long been a cornerstone of our economic strength. Built by innovators and sustained by hard work, railroads were essential to the growth of American industrial power. Today, our country faces another pivotal economic moment. The question now is whether we will allow our rail network to fall further behind, or whether we will rebuild and reinvest to keep America strong and self-reliant.

The proposed merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern represents a bold step toward revitalizing American rail and restoring our nation's industrial competitiveness. By creating the first unified, coast-to-coast rail network, this merger will enhance efficiency, strengthen supply chains, and reduce costs for American manufacturers, workers, and families. It is the kind of forward-looking infrastructure investment that aligns with an America First vision – rebuilding at home, creating jobs, and ensuring our economy remains globally competitive.

A unified network will deliver immediate and widespread benefits. It will lower shipping costs and strengthen supply chains, helping U.S. manufacturers and small businesses to better compete. It will also reduce highway congestion and taxpayer burdens, as freight shifts from overused public highways to privately funded rail infrastructure. A more competitive rail network will also enhance public safety, with fewer trucks on the road resulting in fewer fatalities and accidents. Most importantly, a reliable rail network will support job creation and community reinvestment, especially in manufacturing regions and small towns that form the backbone of the American economy.

I respectfully submit my op-ed for your consideration as part of the record. It outlines in greater detail why this merger is a vital investment in American national strength. I urge the Board to recognize the transformational potential of a unified transcontinental rail network and to support this pro-growth, pro-worker merger.

Thank you for your time and for your continued commitment to ensuring a safe, competitive, and forward-looking U.S. rail system.

Sincerely,

George Landrith

by: George Landrith | 09/01/2025

America's freight rail system has always been a symbol of our economic strength, built by innovators, sustained by hard work, and vital to expanding American industry. When Abraham Lincoln signed the Pacific Railway Act in 1862, helping to unite America's western railroads, he made a bold bet that a strong rail network would embolden and strengthen American industry and hold the country together.

Today, America is at a similarly pivotal moment. Will we allow our rail system to fall further behind, or will we rebuild at home, putting American workers first and restoring the backbone of our economy?

The proposed merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern offers an opportunity to build on Lincoln's legacy and put the country on the right path, the America First path. By creating the first unified, coast-to-coast rail network, the merger would strengthen U.S. competitiveness, unlock economic benefits, and support the reindustrialization of our nation. It is exactly the kind of bold, pro-American infrastructure investment that can help make our nation strong again.

A unified network would deliver immediate benefits. Manufacturers would enjoy savings on shipping costs, supply chains would grow more resilient, and highways would face less wear and tear from freight trucks. That means more jobs in the heartland, stronger American businesses, and lower costs for families.

Railroads have always been engines of opportunity, linking farms to markets, workers to jobs, and towns to thriving commerce. When we strengthen freight rail, we aren't just moving cargo — we are opening doors for communities that have been left behind in the global economy. Every mile of track represents not only an investment in steel and locomotives, but also in the workers who build, maintain, and operate them. This merger offers a chance to reinvest in those workers and those communities, creating new opportunities in places that too often see jobs outsourced overseas.

Moreover, a coast-to-coast rail system would not simply modernize transportation; it would reaffirm America's commitment to self-reliance and national strength. By reducing dependence on foreign supply chains and cutting costly inefficiencies, the merger would help ensure that "Made in America" once again means competitive, affordable, and world-class. From energy producers in the West to manufacturers in the Midwest and exporters in the East, the benefits would ripple across the entire country —lifting the economy while putting America back in charge of its own destiny.

A unified transcontinental railroad would be on a stronger footing to compete against long-haul trucking, which in recent decades has commanded a growing and dominant share of freight volume in the U.S. Shifting volume back to rail would be a win for America, businesses, and families.

Overdependence on trucking has clogged our roads, cost taxpayers billions in repairs, and endangered lives. In 2023, 5,472 people died in large-truck crashes, while rail freight is associated with far fewer fatalities and injuries than long-haul trucking.

Heavy reliance on trucking also continues to strain our crumbling highways. Long-haul trucks cost taxpayers billions by creating wear and tear on publicly funded highways. Railroads, in contrast, invest in and maintain their own infrastructure, often to the tune of billions of dollars in a year. Rather than costing taxpayers a dime, railroads' private infrastructure investments create jobs and economic activity in communities across the country.

Unifying two complementary rail networks will also streamline coast-to-coast shipping by eliminating costly interchange delays, which are caused by the handoff of railcars from one line to another. These delays often leave railcars sitting for days, driving up inventory costs and creating reliability concerns for shippers. A unified rail network means more cost savings for businesses, confidence for shippers, and the ability to deliver goods to market more quickly.

Some may worry that a rail merger would reduce competition. In fact, instead of eliminating competition, this merger expands it – creating real competition against Canadian railroads, foreign-controlled shipping, and over-reliance on trucking. Ultimately, it increases options for U.S. producers while boosting America's strategic position in global trade.

These benefits are foundational to the American manufacturing renaissance that President Trump is pursuing. Whether it's semiconductor chips and other cutting-edge technological hardware, or apparel and agriculture, a strong rail network will help get those products where they need to be. This merger will give us a freight rail system that is worthy of a modern, America First economy.

This merger is an investment not in Wall Street, but in main streets, factory floors, and small towns across the country. Steel, auto, agriculture, and countless other industries will benefit from faster, cheaper, more reliable freight rail – ensuring factories stay open, workers stay on the job, and communities thrive.

America has always risen when we choose to be bold. Lincoln's railroads knit together a young nation. Today, a coast-to-coast network can do the same for a modern America First economy. It is time to seize this opportunity, support this merger, and put American workers, businesses, and families back on track. It is time to put America First, and one of the important places that starts is with rail.

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Chairman Fuchs,

As Georgia's 17th Commissioner of Agriculture, I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of Georgia's economy and our state's agriculture industry, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farm families and production agriculture, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth—it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Georgia-made products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail

Norfolk Southern's deep integration into Georgia's manufacturing and agricultural ecosystems ensures that this merger will amplify—not diminish—economic opportunity across our state:

- NS serves iconic Georgia manufacturers including Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA, moving everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer goods.
- Rail shipments support everyday life in Georgia at extraordinary scale—enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons.

- NS's rail network connects Atlanta to key Southeastern markets and links Savannah and Brunswick ports to global trade routes, giving Georgia businesses a competitive edge.
- Over 1,000 miles of NS track in Georgia ensure statewide access for both multinational corporations and local businesses.
- Rail operations in Georgia help avoid over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 annually—equivalent to removing nearly 4 million trucks from highways.

Industrial Development and Community Growth

Norfolk Southern's REDI-certified industrial sites and strategic logistics solutions are also helping Georgia communities attract transformational investments that need the global scale of a transcontinental railroad.

- Recent NS-served projects include:
  - Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
  - Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
  - Valdosta: Two new manufacturing facilities totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These projects demonstrate how rail-enabled development drives both economic growth and community resilience. The merger will further empower Georgia to compete in the next era of U.S. manufacturing.
As someone who helped recruit Norfolk Southern's headquarter operation to the state of Georgia, I'm also pleased to see the companies commit to maintaining Atlanta as a critical hub for innovation, technology, and operations.

This merger is about more than just railroads—it's about securing the future of Georgia's transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to Georgia-based employees, companies, and the American economy.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Mayor of a city with over 200 police and fire men, I see firsthand how vital dependable infrastructure is to the safety of our neighborhoods. In 2024, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern trained more than 10,000 first responders, equipping them with tools and knowledge to act fast when every second counts. The training isn't just helpful – it's lifesaving. Strong coordination between railroads and emergency services ensures we're ready to protect our communities when it matters most.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger builds on our community partnerships and brings continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing public safety, strengthening neighborhood resilience, and creates continuity amongst first responders from coast to coast.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger swiftly – unlocking the investments, collaborative safety benefits, and broader economic opportunities it will bring.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the Executive Director of the Gadsden-Etowah Industrial Development Authority, I recognize that reliable rail service is vital to the continued growth and prosperity of our region's economy, businesses, and residents. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger represents a significant opportunity to strengthen these connections and deliver long-term benefits for both local and regional industry.

Norfolk Southern Rail has played a pivotal role in our economic development efforts, particularly at the Northeast Alabama Regional (NEAR) Megasite. The site's direct access to Norfolk Southern rail service is one of its most compelling advantages for recruiting new industries. The NEAR Megasite's location along the A-USA Corridor further strengthens its position as a strategic industrial hub, connecting Etowah County to major southern markets and logistics networks. Enhanced rail service through the merger would only amplify these advantages, promoting growth not only within our county but across the broader region.

Norfolk Southern's impact is already evident in Etowah County through its support of existing employers such as Koch Foods, whose feed mill depends on consistent and reliable rail service for the delivery of grain and other essential inputs. The company's continued success underscores the importance of maintaining and improving freight rail infrastructure in our area.

On behalf of the Gadsden-Etowah Industrial Development Authority, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger. The efficiencies, investments, and expanded connectivity it will bring will ensure our communities remain competitive, resilient, and well-positioned in the economy.

Subject: Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Georgia Agribusiness Council, I am writing to provide comment regarding the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. The Council represents a broad cross-section of Georgia's agricultural and agribusiness industries, which depend heavily on efficient and reliable freight rail service to transport agricultural inputs, raw materials, and finished products to domestic and international markets.

Freight rail is an essential component of Georgia's transportation infrastructure and economic framework. It supports the movement of agricultural commodities, manufactured goods, and critical supplies that sustain both rural and urban communities. Norfolk Southern has played a significant role in this network, providing key connections between Georgia's production areas, manufacturing facilities, and the ports of Savannah and Brunswick.

The Georgia Agribusiness Council recognizes that the proposed merger presents potential opportunities to enhance the efficiency, reliability, and competitiveness of the freight rail system. Anticipated benefits include:

- Improved Service Reliability: Network integration may reduce congestion and improve schedule consistency.
- Reduced Transit Times: Streamlined routing could accelerate freight movement and strengthen supply chain performance.
- Increased Infrastructure Investment: A unified system may enable greater long-term investment in safety, technology, and modernization.
- Expanded Market Access: Broader connectivity could create new opportunities for Georgia's agricultural producers and agribusiness exporters.

Georgia's agricultural sector relies on dependable rail service to maintain competitiveness and meet the demands of both domestic and international markets. Rail shipments support everyday life in Georgia at extraordinary scale. During peak season, rail moves enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms.

Ensuring that this merger results in improved network performance, fair access, and reasonable rates will be essential to sustaining the state's economic vitality and supporting continued growth in the agribusiness sector.

The Georgia Agribusiness Council appreciates the Surface Transportation Board's thorough review of this proposed transaction and encourages consideration of its potential benefits for Georgia's economy, supply chain stability, and the broader U.S. transportation network.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide these comments.

Re: Support for the Proposed Merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a Member of the Georgia House of Representatives and Chairman of the House Governmental Affairs Committee, I write to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of Georgia's economy—powering our industries, supporting our farmers, and connecting our communities to national and global markets. Norfolk Southern has long been a trusted partner in Georgia's economic success, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective freight service to businesses large and small. Rail remains one of the most sustainable modes of transportation, reducing both highway congestion and greenhouse gas emissions.

Benefits of the Proposed Merger

The combination of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern presents a unique opportunity to strengthen our national freight network and bring tangible benefits to Georgia's businesses and citizens:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will reduce delays and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, enabling Georgia companies to reach customers more efficiently and competitively.
- Increased Investment: The merged railroad will be better positioned to modernize infrastructure, adopt advanced technologies, and enhance safety systems.
- Expanded Market Reach: A broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Georgia-made products and improve overall supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail

Norfolk Southern is deeply integrated into Georgia's manufacturing and agricultural economy. Its rail service supports leading employers such as Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA, transporting everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer goods.

The scale of this impact is extraordinary: rail shipments move enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, supply tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and provide pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons. With over 1,000 miles of Norfolk Southern track across the state, Georgia's industries—from ports to factories—benefit from seamless access to national and global markets. Rail operations here also prevent over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 emissions annually, equivalent to removing nearly 4 million trucks from our highways.

Industrial Development and Community Growth

Norfolk Southern's commitment to industrial site development and logistics innovation continues to bring transformational investment to Georgia communities. Notable recent projects include:

- Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
- Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
- Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 jobs

These projects demonstrate how rail-enabled growth fuels both economic development and local prosperity. As one of the state leaders who helped recruit Norfolk Southern's corporate headquarters to Georgia, I am pleased that the merged company plans to maintain Atlanta as a vital hub for innovation, technology, and operations.

Conclusion

This merger represents more than a corporate transaction—it is an investment in America's transportation future. A unified Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern system will strengthen our freight network, expand opportunity for Georgia communities, and ensure the U.S. rail industry remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this merger proposal, recognizing the broad economic and operational benefits it will deliver to Georgia's businesses, workforce, and the national economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Chairman of the House Transportation Committee for the State of Georgia, I am writing you to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and our Norfolk Southern railroad companies.

I personally think this is a win win for the transportation system of our country. We are an integrated country knowing no barriers within the United States with roads and air. This merger will include rail to that list. In looking into this merger, I know it will help my state's business environment grow.

Freight rail has been the cornerstone of Georgia's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth—it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability

- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Georgia-made products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail

Norfolk Southern's deep integration into Georgia's manufacturing ecosystem ensures that this merger will amplify—not diminish—economic opportunity across our state:

- NS serves iconic Georgia manufacturers including Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA, moving everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer goods.
- Rail shipments support everyday life in Georgia at extraordinary scale—enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons.
- NS's rail network connects Atlanta to key Southeastern markets and links Savannah and Brunswick ports to global trade routes, giving Georgia businesses a competitive edge.
- Over 1,000 miles of NS track in Georgia ensure statewide access for both multinational corporations and local businesses.
- Rail operations in Georgia help avoid over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 annually—equivalent to removing nearly 4 million trucks from highways.

Industrial Development and Community Growth

Norfolk Southern's REDI-certified industrial sites and strategic logistics solutions are also helping Georgia communities attract transformational investments that need the global scale of a transcontinental railroad.

- Recent NS-served projects include:
    - Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
    - Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
    - Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 jobs
    - Valdosta: Two new manufacturing facilities totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These projects demonstrate how rail-enabled development drives both economic growth and community resilience. The merger will further empower Georgia to compete in the next era of U.S. manufacturing.

As someone who helped recruit Norfolk Southern's headquarter operation to the state of Georgia, I'm also pleased to see the companies commit to maintaining Atlanta as a critical hub for innovation, technology, and operations.

This merger is about more than just railroads—it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to Georgia-based employees, companies, and the American economy.

Subject: Support for the Proposed Merger Between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As the State Representative for Georgia's 17th House District, I want to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a backbone of Georgia's economy. It keeps our industries running, supports our farmers, and connects our communities to markets across the country and around the world. For decades, Norfolk Southern has been a trusted partner to Georgia businesses—moving goods safely, efficiently, and at a cost that keeps us competitive. Rail service doesn't just drive economic growth; it helps reduce highway congestion and lowers emissions, which makes it one of the most sustainable forms of transportation we have.
This merger represents a chance to make that network even stronger creating a more efficient, modern, and resilient freight system that benefits Georgia and the nation as a whole. Key advantages include:

- More Reliable Service: Streamlined operations and better routing will help minimize service disruptions and make schedules more dependable.
- Faster Transit Times: Eliminating bottlenecks and unnecessary interchanges will allow freight to move faster, giving Georgia businesses a stronger competitive edge.
- New Investment: A unified transcontinental rail system will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology, and safety improvements.
- Expanded Market Reach: A larger footprint means new opportunities for Georgia-made products and stronger supply chain resilience for our state.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail
Norfolk Southern's presence in Georgia runs deep—it's tied directly to the success of our largest employers and to thousands of jobs statewide. From Coca-Cola and Home Depot to Georgia-

Pacific, Fieldale Farms, and Argos USA, freight rail moves the raw materials and finished goods that power our economy.
Every year, Norfolk Southern helps move enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, enough tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for billions of consumer products. Its 1,000 miles of track connect our ports in Savannah and Brunswick to major domestic markets, giving Georgia companies a gateway to the world. Rail operations also keep nearly 4 million trucks off the road each year—preventing over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 from entering our atmosphere.

Industrial Development and Community Growth
Norfolk Southern's work with Georgia communities has helped attract major new investments, including:

- Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
- Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
- Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 jobs
- Valdosta: Two new manufacturing projects totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These are transformative investments that create long-term opportunity for Georgia families—and they're possible because of strong rail partnerships.

Having personally been involved in efforts to help recruit Norfolk Southern's headquarters operation to Georgia, I'm encouraged that the company intends to continue making Atlanta a major hub for innovation and rail operations.

This merger isn't just about railroads—it's about strengthening the foundation of American commerce, supporting job creation, and ensuring our infrastructure keeps pace with the demands of the future. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger and recognize the clear benefits it will bring to Georgia's workers, businesses, and economy.

Subject: Formal Support for the Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a Member of the Georgia House of Representatives and Chairman of the Technology and Innovation Committee, I am writing to express my strong and unequivocal support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a foundational pillar of Georgia's economy. It facilitates the safe, efficient, and sustainable movement of the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the United States and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been a trusted transportation partner for our state—providing reliable service to businesses of every scale, from global manufacturers to local enterprises. The American freight rail system is indispensable not only to our economic growth but also to our environmental stewardship, helping reduce highway congestion and greenhouse gas emissions.

The proposed merger presents a unique opportunity to strengthen this national network and deliver tangible benefits to shippers, consumers, and communities alike, including:

Enhanced Service Reliability: More direct routing and improved operational flexibility will minimize disruptions and increase schedule dependability.
Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating interchanges will accelerate the movement of freight, enabling Georgia businesses to serve customers more efficiently and competitively.
Increased Capital Investment: A unified transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technologies, and state-of-the-art safety systems.
Expanded Market Reach: A broader geographic footprint will provide Georgia-made goods greater access to domestic and global markets while strengthening supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Strategic Reliance on Freight Rail

Norfolk Southern's extensive presence within Georgia's manufacturing and logistics ecosystem ensures that this merger will amplify—not diminish—economic opportunity across our state. The company serves many of Georgia's most iconic employers, including Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA. Through these partnerships, Norfolk Southern transports everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer products—supporting industries that define our economic identity.

Rail operations in Georgia also provide extraordinary public benefits: moving enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons annually. The network's reach—over 1,000 miles of track statewide—ensures accessibility for both multinational corporations and small businesses, while avoiding more than 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 emissions each year, the equivalent of removing nearly four million trucks from our highways.

Driving Industrial Development and Community Growth

Norfolk Southern's investment in industrial development and logistics infrastructure has helped Georgia communities attract transformative private investment. Recent examples include:

Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 new jobs
Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 new jobs
Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 new jobs
Valdosta: Two new manufacturing facilities totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These projects illustrate the critical role rail-enabled infrastructure plays in fostering economic development and community resilience. The merger will further enhance Georgia's ability to compete in the next generation of advanced manufacturing and logistics. Further, I am encouraged by the companies' commitment to maintaining Atlanta as a strategic hub for innovation, technology, and operations.

This merger represents far more than the consolidation of two railroads—it is an opportunity to strengthen America's transportation backbone, sustain economic growth, and position U.S. freight rail to remain globally competitive for decades to come.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to grant full and favorable consideration to this merger, recognizing the substantial benefits it will deliver to Georgia's economy, its workforce, and the broader American supply chain.

- NS's rail network connects Atlanta to key Southeastern markets and links Savannah and Brunswick ports to global trade routes, giving Georgia businesses a competitive edge.
- Over 1,000 miles of NS track in Georgia ensure statewide access for both multinational corporations and local businesses.
- Rail operations in Georgia help avoid over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 annually—equivalent to removing nearly 4 million trucks from highways.

This merger is about more than just railroads—it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to Georgia-based employees, companies, and the Ameican economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a member of the Georgia House of Representatives, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of Georgia's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to large and small businesses. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth—it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Georgia-made products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail
Norfolk Southern's deep integration into Georgia's manufacturing ecosystem ensures that this merger will amplify—not diminish—economic opportunity across our state:

- NS serves iconic Georgia manufacturers including Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA, moving everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer goods.
- Rail shipments support everyday life in Georgia at extraordinary scale—enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons.
- NS's rail network connects Atlanta to key Southeastern markets and links Savannah and Brunswick ports to global trade routes, giving Georgia businesses a competitive edge.
- Over 1,000 miles of NS track in Georgia ensure statewide access for both multinational corporations and local businesses.
- Rail operations in Georgia help avoid over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 annually—equivalent to removing nearly 4 million trucks from highways.

Industrial Development and Community Growth
Norfolk Southern's REDI-certified industrial sites and strategic logistics solutions are also helping Georgia communities attract transformational investments that need the global scale of a transcontinental railroad.

- Recent NS-served projects include:
  - Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
  - Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
  - Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 jobs
  - Valdosta: Two new manufacturing facilities totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These projects demonstrate how rail-enabled development drives both economic growth and community resilience. The merger will further empower Georgia to compete in the next era of U.S. manufacturing.

As someone who helped recruit Norfolk Southern's headquarter operation to the state of Georgia, I'm also pleased to see the companies commit to maintaining Atlanta as a critical hub for innovation, technology, and operations.

This merger is about more than just railroads—it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to Georgia-based employees, companies, and the American economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger
Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a Member of the Georgia House of Representatives, I, Yasmin Neal, am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.
Freight rail is a cornerstone of Georgia's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth—it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.
The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Georgia-made products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail
Norfolk Southern's deep integration into Georgia's manufacturing ecosystem ensures that this merger will amplify—not diminish—economic opportunity across our state:

- NS serves iconic Georgia manufacturers including Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA, moving everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer goods.
- Rail shipments support everyday life in Georgia at extraordinary scale—enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons.
- NS's rail network connects Atlanta to key Southeastern markets and links Savannah and Brunswick ports to global trade routes, giving Georgia businesses a competitive edge.
- Over 1,000 miles of NS track in Georgia ensure statewide access for both multinational corporations and local businesses.

In terms of Industrial Development and Community Growth, Norfolk Southern's REDI-certified industrial sites and strategic logistics solutions are also helping Georgia communities attract transformational investments that need the global scale of a transcontinental railroad. Recent NS-served projects include:

- Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
- Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
- Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 jobs
- Valdosta: Two new manufacturing facilities totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These projects demonstrate how rail-enabled development drives both economic growth and community resilience. The merger will further empower Georgia to compete in the next era of U.S. manufacturing.

As someone who supported the recruitment of Norfolk Southern's headquarters operation to the State of Georgia, I'm also pleased to see the companies commit to maintaining Atlanta as a critical hub for innovation, technology, and operations.

Norfolk Southern's REDI-certified industrial sites and strategic logistics solutions are also helping Georgia communities attract transformational investments that need the global scale of a transcontinental railroad.

- Recent NS-served projects include:
    - Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
    - Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
    - Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 jobs
    - Valdosta: Two new manufacturing facilities totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These projects demonstrate how rail-enabled development drives both economic growth and community resilience. The merger will further empower Georgia to compete in the next era of U.S. manufacturing.

As someone who helped recruit Norfolk Southern's headquarter operation to the state of Georgia, I'm also pleased to see the companies commit to maintaining Atlanta as a critical hub for innovation, technology, and operations.

This merger is about more than just railroads—it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to Georgia-based employees, companies, and the national economy.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a member of the Georgia House of Representatives, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of Georgia's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth—it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Georgia-made products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail

Norfolk Southern's deep integration into Georgia's manufacturing ecosystem ensures that this merger will amplify—not diminish—economic opportunity across our state:

- NS serves iconic Georgia manufacturers, including Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA, moving everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer goods.
- Rail shipments support everyday life in Georgia at an extraordinary scale—enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons.
- NS's rail network connects Atlanta to key Southeastern markets and links Savannah and Brunswick ports to global trade routes, giving Georgia businesses a competitive edge.
- Over 1,000 miles of NS track in Georgia ensure statewide access for both multinational corporations and local businesses.
- Rail operations in Georgia help avoid over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 annually—equivalent to removing nearly 4 million trucks from highways.

This merger is about more than just railroads—it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive. Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

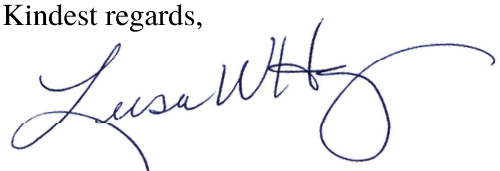
As a member of the Georgia House of Representatives, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Freight rail is a vital component of Georgia's economic foundation, connecting rural producers, industrial manufacturers, and global markets through an efficient, sustainable network that keeps our economy moving. This merger presents a rare opportunity to modernize and strengthen that network while ensuring that Georgia's role in national logistics continues to grow.

Georgia relies heavily on rail to move timber, agricultural products, energy materials, and finished goods. Norfolk Southern's presence, particularly its extensive operations in Atlanta, Macon, and Savannah, has helped local businesses reach domestic and international markets with cost-effective, dependable service. Partnering with Union Pacific, whose western network reaches every major port and distribution hub to the Pacific, would create a truly transcontinental rail corridor. That system would give Georgia industries faster access to western markets and ports, reduce bottlenecks in national freight movement, and reinforce our state's position as a logistics leader in the Southeast.

The merger's projected benefits align directly with Georgia's long-term economic priorities:

- ·Improved Service and Reliability: Coordinated scheduling and unified routing will minimize interline handoffs, reducing delays that often affect agricultural and manufacturing shipments.
- ·Investment in Infrastructure: The combined company would channel greater capital into track upgrades, yard modernization, and digital logistics systems. These are investments that support both major shippers and small rural businesses.



- ·Environmental Efficiency: By improving routing and reducing highway truck traffic, this merger will further decrease carbon emissions and roadway wear.·
- Expanded Economic Reach: A unified system will allow Georgia producers, especially in agriculture, forestry, and manufacturing, to move products coast-to-coast without interruption, enhancing export competitiveness through the Ports of Savannah and Brunswick.

Norfolk Southern has a strong record of partnership with Georgia communities from industrial site development to logistics training and job creation statewide. The merger will expand that foundation, supporting rural development and giving new life to smaller industrial corridors that depend on reliable freight access.

This proposal is about more than corporate consolidation. It is about strengthening America's supply chain, advancing rail safety, and positioning the United States for a new era of industrial competitiveness. The combined expertise and capital of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern will help ensure that freight rail remains a cornerstone of national infrastructure and a reliable partner for states like Georgia.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to the proposed merger. It represents not only a sound business decision, but a strategic investment in the future of Georgia's economy and America's transportation network.

- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Georgia-made products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail

Norfolk Southern's deep integration into Georgia's manufacturing ecosystem ensures that this merger will amplify—not diminish—economic opportunity across our state:

- NS serves iconic Georgia manufacturers including Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA, moving everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer goods.
- Rail shipments support everyday life in Georgia at extraordinary scale—enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons.
- NS's rail network connects Atlanta to key Southeastern markets and links Savannah and Brunswick ports to global trade routes, giving Georgia businesses a competitive edge.
- Over 1,000 miles of NS track in Georgia ensure statewide access for both multinational corporations and local businesses.
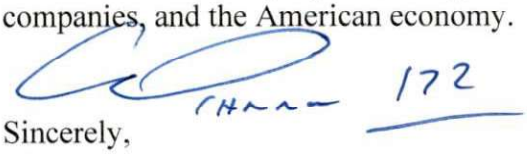
- Rail operations in Georgia help avoid over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 annually – equivalent to removing nearly 4 million trucks from highways.

Industrial Development and Community Growth



Norfolk Southern's REDI-certified industrial sites and strategic logistics solutions are also helping Georgia communities attract transformational investments that need the global scale of a transcontinental railroad.

- Recent NS-served projects include:
  - Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
  - Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
  - Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 jobs
  - Valdosta: Two new manufacturing facilities totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These projects demonstrate how rail-enabled development drives both economic growth and community resilience. The merger will further empower Georgia to compete in the next era of U.S. manufacturing.

As someone who helped recruit Norfolk Southern's headquarter operation to the state of Georgia, I'm also pleased to see the companies commit to maintaining Atlanta as a critical hub for innovation, technology, and operations.

This merger is about more than just railroads—it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to Georgia-based employees, companies, and the American economy.

PUBLIC POLICY FOUNDATION

The Honorable Patrick J. Fuchs
Chairman
Surface Transportation Board

Subject: Support for Norfolk Southern & Union Pacific Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President and CEO of the Georgia Public Policy Foundation, I spend a lot of time thinking about what helps Georgia grow. One of the biggest drivers of growth is how we move the goods that fuel our economy. Transportation and logistics are the connective tissue of Georgia's success, and freight rail is a vital part of that system.

Norfolk Southern has been a crucial transportation partner for our state for decades, helping manufacturers, farmers and small businesses get their products to markets across the country and around the world. Freight rail isn't just reliable and cost-effective; it's also one of the cleanest and safest ways to move freight, easing congestion on our highways and reducing emissions.

That's why I believe the proposed merger between Norfolk Southern and Union Pacific deserves strong support. This partnership represents an opportunity to strengthen America's freight rail network in ways that benefit shippers, consumers and communities. Among the advantages:

- More reliable service: Greater flexibility and more direct routes mean fewer disruptions and better on-time performance.
- Faster transit times: By reducing interchanges, goods can move more quickly and efficiently—helping Georgia businesses stay competitive.
- More investment: A stronger, transcontinental network will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology and safety.
- Broader market access: A wider footprint opens new markets for Georgia's producers and enhances supply chain resilience nationwide.

This merger isn't simply about combining two railroads. It's about ensuring that our transportation system keeps pace with the needs of a growing, dynamic economy. A more integrated freight rail network will help secure our state's economic future and keep America's supply chains strong in an increasingly competitive world.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal.

Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the Georgia State Senator representing District 2, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community that relies on freight shipments would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. And our whole community would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could decrease the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail use helps to reduce highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. And reducing highway congestion decreases the frequency for highway maintenance spending and improves quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, this merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger
Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Senator of the State of Georgia, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.
Freight rail is a cornerstone of Georgia's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth—it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.
The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Georgia-made products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail
Norfolk Southern's deep integration into Georgia's manufacturing ecosystem ensures that this merger will amplify—not diminish—economic opportunity across our state:

- NS serves iconic Georgia manufacturers including Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA, moving everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer goods.
- Rail shipments support everyday life in Georgia at extraordinary scale—enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons.
- NS's rail network connects Atlanta to key Southeastern markets and links Savannah and Brunswick ports to global trade routes, giving Georgia businesses a competitive edge.
- Over 1,000 miles of NS track in Georgia ensure statewide access for both multinational corporations and local businesses.
- Rail operations in Georgia help avoid over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 annually—equivalent to removing nearly 4 million trucks from highways.

Industrial Development and Community Growth
Norfolk Southern's REDI-certified industrial sites and strategic logistics solutions are also helping Georgia communities attract transformational investments that need the global scale of a transcontinental railroad.

- Recent NS-served projects include:

- Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
- Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
- Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 jobs
- Valdosta: Two new manufacturing facilities totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These projects demonstrate how rail-enabled development drives both economic growth and community resilience. The merger will further empower Georgia to compete in the next era of U.S. manufacturing. As someone who helped recruit Norfolk Southern's headquarter operation to the state of Georgia, I'm also pleased to see the companies commit to maintaining Atlanta as a critical hub for innovation, technology, and operations.

This merger is about more than just railroads—it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to Georgia-based employees, companies, and the Ameican economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a Georgia State Senator, I'm writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is vital to Georgia's economy with moving goods for our industries, supporting farmers, and connecting us to national and global markets. Norfolk Southern has long been a reliable and efficient transportation partner. This merger strengthens our freight rail system, which is not only essential for growth but also a sustainable transport solution.

Key benefits include:

- Improved Service Reliability through more direct routes and greater flexibility
- Reduced Transit Times by eliminating certain interchanges
- Increased Investment in infrastructure, technology, and safety
- Expanded Reach to new markets, boosting Georgia's supply chain resilience

Georgia's Reliance on Rail

Norfolk Southern is deeply integrated with Georgia's manufacturers like Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, and more. It supports massive rail shipments—from fertilizer for 15 million farms to pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons. Its network links Atlanta to the Southeast and connects ports in Savannah and Brunswick to the world, supporting businesses statewide and avoiding over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 emissions annually.

Industrial Development and Community Growth

NS's logistics capabilities attract transformative investments to Georgia. Recent rail-served projects include:

- Aurubis (Augusta): $800M, 230 jobs
- Irving Tissue (Macon): $600M, 100 jobs

- Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5M, 617 jobs
- Valdosta: $200M in new manufacturing, 175 jobs

These demonstrate how rail supports both economic growth and community resilience. The merger will further strengthen Georgia's role in the future of U.S. manufacturing.

Having helped bring Norfolk Southern's headquarters to Georgia, I welcome the commitment to keeping Atlanta a hub of innovation, technology, and operations.

This merger is about securing our transportation future, supporting development, and keeping American freight rail competitive. I urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal. Thank you for your time and consideration on this important matter.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a State Senator of Georgia, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of Georgia's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth—it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Georgia-made products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

Georgia's Reliance on Rail

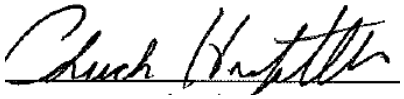
Norfolk Southern's deep integration into Georgia's manufacturing ecosystem ensures that this merger will amplify—not diminish—economic opportunity across our state:

- NS serves iconic Georgia manufacturers including Coca-Cola, Home Depot, Georgia-Pacific, Smurfit/WestRock, Fieldale Farms, Wayne-Sanderson Farms, and Argos USA, moving everything from pulpboard and cement to poultry and consumer goods.
- Rail shipments support everyday life in Georgia at extraordinary scale—enough fertilizer to treat 15 million farms, tires for 1.4 million vehicles, and pulpboard for 38 billion egg cartons.
- NS's rail network connects Atlanta to key Southeastern markets and links Savannah and Brunswick ports to global trade routes, giving Georgia businesses a competitive edge.
- Over 1,000 miles of NS track in Georgia ensure statewide access for both multinational corporations and local businesses.
- Rail operations in Georgia help avoid over 930,000 metric tons of CO_2 annually—equivalent to removing nearly 4 million trucks from highways.

Industrial Development and Community Growth

Norfolk Southern's REDI-certified industrial sites and strategic logistics solutions are also helping Georgia communities attract transformational investments that need the global scale of a transcontinental railroad.



- Recent NS-served projects include:
    - Aurubis (Augusta): $800 million investment, 230 jobs
    - Irving Tissue (Macon): $600 million investment, 100 jobs
    - Solar Cycle (Cedartown): $344.5 million investment, 617 jobs
    - Valdosta: Two new manufacturing facilities totaling $200 million and 175 jobs

These projects demonstrate how rail-enabled development drives both economic growth and community resilience. The merger will further empower Georgia to compete in the next era of U.S. manufacturing.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

On behalf of the Golden Spike Tower & Visitor Center in North Platte, Nebraska—overlooking Union Pacific's Bailey Yard—I write to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

The Golden Spike Tower is a private, 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization operating independently of the City of North Platte and Union Pacific. We sustain our mission through admissions, memberships, donations, and earned revenue. We are also supported by a USDA loan and hotel occupancy tax, with payoff scheduled for February 2029. This independent structure keeps us accountable to our community and visitors while aligning our programming with education, safety, and regional economic vitality.

As a nonprofit education and tourism organization welcoming thousands of guests annually, our mission is to inspire curiosity about railroading, share the "Canteen Spirit" of our community, and promote rail safety for all ages. Our vision is a thriving, future-ready rail community where visitors, families, and the next generation of the workforce understand how freight rail powers America. We believe the UP–NS combination can advance that vision and deliver meaningful public benefits:

• Growing our educational reach and visitor base.
A more seamless, reliable transcontinental network will sustain interest in railroading and increase travel to North Platte and other rail communities. Increased visibility and confidence in rail operations translate into more school field trips, family tourism, and STEM engagement at our site.

• Expanding rail safety education.
By reducing interchange complexity and improving network fluidity, the merged railroad can dedicate resources to community outreach and collaborative initiatives (e.g., Operation Lifesaver partnerships, public demonstrations, and curriculum support). That helps us bring more hands-on safety programming to students, drivers, and pedestrians across the region.

• Strengthening local and regional economies.
Tourism tied to rail heritage and modern operations is a vital economic engine. More dependable service, shorter transit times, and coordinated investment across the combined system can support stable freight flows through key hubs like Bailey Yard—supporting jobs, small businesses, lodging, and hospitality in our rural community.

• Enabling long-term investment and innovation.
A unified capital plan can accelerate projects in infrastructure, technology, sustainability, and training. Those improvements enhance safety and service quality while giving community partners like ours new opportunities to showcase innovation in rail—from greener locomotives to smarter yards—to the public we educate.

We recognize the importance of rigorous regulatory review. From our vantage point as an educational institution and community anchor, we encourage the Board to consider how a well-executed combination—paired with clear service commitments and community engagement—can advance public interests: safer communities, a stronger supply chain, and durable economic benefits for rail towns like North Platte.

Thank you for considering our perspective. We look forward to continued partnership with the freight rail industry as we teach visitors from around the world about safety, innovation, and the essential role of railroading in America's past and future.

Sincerely,

To the Members of the Surface Transportation Board:

On behalf of Greater New Orleans, Inc. (GNO, Inc.), I write in support of the proposed merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. America is entering a new industrial era defined by reshoring, strengthened supply chains, and renewed investment in domestic manufacturing. Realizing this vision requires infrastructure capable of meeting modern demands.

By uniting two of the nation's largest rail networks into a single transcontinental system, this merger will enable faster, more reliable, and more cost-effective movement of goods — strengthening the foundation of American economic growth.

The transaction will eliminate bottlenecks, streamline carrier handoffs, and accelerate freight movement. A unified coast-to-coast system will lower transportation costs, reduce consumer prices, and enhance supply chain resilience. It will decrease reliance on foreign competitors and deliver lasting benefits to American families and the broader economy.

Just as the first transcontinental railroad united the nation in the 19th century, this merger offers a 21st-century opportunity to connect America's farms, factories, energy producers, and retailers with the speed and efficiency modern commerce demands.

Global competition makes this imperative. China is investing heavily in logistics dominance, and Canada already operates transcontinental lines. Approving this merger will ensure American goods move on American rails, by American workers — strengthening our economy and protecting national interests.

Foreign opposition underscores what is at stake. A stronger U.S. rail network means less freight routed through foreign-controlled systems and greater control over our economic future.

The UP–NS merger is more than a business decision; it is a strategic investment in America's competitiveness. It will create quality jobs, bolster manufacturing, and position the United States to lead in a rapidly changing global economy. GNO, Inc. strongly supports this proposal and urges the Surface Transportation Board to approve the merger.

Sincerely,

Michael Hecht

Subject: Support for Union Pacific-Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As Executive Director of the Greater Ottumwa Partners in Progress, I represent a community that has long understood the critical role rail plays in driving local and regional economic growth. Our businesses—across manufacturing, food processing, logistics, and beyond—rely on reliable, efficient rail access to compete, expand, and succeed in today's economy.

The proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern presents a meaningful opportunity for Ottumwa. By streamlining rail operations, reducing handoffs, and opening direct routes to more markets, the combined network will enhance service reliability and lower transit times—factors that are critical for industries in a just-in-time supply chain environment.

Ottumwa's access to rail services plays a major part of our communities' success. One of our key assets, the Helgerson Flats industrial site, is an example of this connection. While the site is not directly connected, having potential community access to this site is critical to its future development.

Stronger rail infrastructure can be a catalyst for business retention, industrial expansion, and new investment in our community. These are not abstract economic benefits—they translate directly into job creation, increased tax base, and long-term sustainability for Ottumwa and communities like ours.

On behalf of the Greater Ottumwa Partners in Progress and the business community we serve, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger. Enhanced rail connectivity and capacity will bring tangible advantages not just to Ottumwa, but to the broader national economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Executive Director of the Greene County Development Corporation in Iowa, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect both our rural and urban communities to markets across the nation and to the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to large and small businesses. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Surface Transportation Board (STB) - Chairman

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As President & CEO of Grow Clinton, I write to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

A merger of two railroads will allow for greater efficiency within the supply chain, reducing costly handoffs that occur when freight transitions between separate lines. Each switch adds time, expense, and complexity. By creating a seamless transcontinental network, redundancies such as crew changes and maintenance delays can be minimized.

Lower fuel costs and reduced spoilage of time-sensitive goods will aid industries across our region. Because rail is more fuel-efficient than trucking, a streamlined coast-to-coast line will shrink highway congestion, limit unnecessary truck idling, and lessen the strain on our nation's already overstressed roadway infrastructure.

Key industries within our communities, including value-added agriculture, chemical processing, pet food manufacturing, and food additive production, rely heavily on freight rail. These businesses will benefit from faster, predictable deliveries and lower transportation costs, thereby improving competitiveness and contributing to stronger economic growth throughout the Greater Clinton (Iowa) Region.

We recognize that merging two large rail systems presents challenges, including aligning safety practices, corporate cultures, and operational standards. However, we are confident that with your evaluation and oversight, these challenges will be resolved. Ultimately, a unified Union Pacific & Norfolk Southern system will provide a stable, safe, and reliable coast-to-coast rail service that supports business partners throughout the Midwest and beyond.

On behalf of Grow Clinton and the businesses we represent, I urge the STB to approve this merger as a future-focused effort to enhance America's freight network and undeniable economic competitiveness.

Respectfully,

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

I am writing today to advocate for the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS). As the former Administrator of the U.S. Energy Administration, I have a strong understanding of the importance of the role that rail can play in sustaining our nation's energy and industrial supply chains. A connected American rail network offers a new vision for the future of energy transportation, one that prioritizes efficiency and reliability above all.

The merger will be judged on its ability to prove that it is in the public interest and increases competition, and its profound effect on energy will satisfy both of these conditions. The UP-NS deal spans much further than a business transaction; it's a building block of a more resilient logistics network.

One of the key logistical effects of the UP-NS merger is a shift to a more efficient rail network. Current rail operations face interchange delays that lead to increased costs and missed delivery windows. UP and NS currently exchange 1 million shipments per year – each other's largest inventory partner. The consolidation of these two rail titans would alleviate bottlenecks, as less freight would need to be switched from one carrier to another.

Additionally, with fewer interchange points, bulk transportation faces fewer obstacles in coast-to-coast shipments. The energy sector would benefit from this enormously. Petrochemical shipments can travel across the country on a single rail line. Additionally, by increasing the number of available ports, products can flow quickly to market. Take, for example, the Port of Houston, which handles the majority of the Gulf Coast's exports. It's overtaxed right now. This merger will help to relieve some of this pressure east, further strengthening America's energy export capacity.

Energy is a crucial component of the future of America. As energy markets evolve, ensuring that the nation can handle the transportation of a continually increasing and diversified product is key to the resilience of America's supply chain networks. In times of disruption, whether they are natural disasters or global supply chain shocks, a resilient and secure domestic network makes the difference.

I urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the merger between UP and NS. It is never too late to invest in the future of American energy.

Best,
Guy Caruso

Subject: Rail Merger Could Create Opportunity for Communities and Industry in Iowa

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

For many years, rail transportation has been a cornerstone in Iowa's manufacturing and agricultural industries. Just as our communities rely on these industries, many of these industries rely on reliable transportation to move products to market and to import materials. One mode of transportation some industries here in Hampton rely on is the railroad.

As mayor of Hampton, Iowa, I was excited to hear about the merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Union Pacific has been present in Hampton for many years and provides crucial rail services business here in town and the surrounding areas. The merger would connect the two railways offering increased access for communities like Hampton to different markets. It would also reduce shipping times allowing businesses to work more efficiently and reliably.

In addition to offering increased reliability and efficiency to our existing business partners, the merger would give Hampton and communities like ours a competitive edge in attracting new business partners and create new opportunities for economic development.

Beyond just the benefit to our communities, the merger would strengthen American rail connectivity supporting American industry and our ability to bring manufacturing back from overseas.

For these reasons, on behalf of the City of Hampton, Iowa, I urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger. The benefits to smaller American communities and America's effort to reindustrialize are important for the future of our country's economy.

Sincerely,
Mayor Steve Birdsall

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Executive Director of Hale Centre Theatre in Sandy, Utah, I want to recognize the important role Union Pacific plays not only in supporting our local economy but also in strengthening the cultural and educational fabric of our community.

Union Pacific has been one of our most steadfast corporate partners—supporting Hale Centre Theatre, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, for more than 15 years. Their commitment has extended well beyond financial contributions. They have consistently supported our education programs, which serve thousands of youth in high demand across Salt Lake City. This coming year alone, we anticipate welcoming 700,000 patrons through our doors, 150,000 of them young people ages 5 to 18. Union Pacific's ongoing investment has helped ensure these students have access to meaningful, life-shaping arts education.

Equally important, Union Pacific has maintained an active presence on our Board of Trustees throughout this time. Their representatives have not been members in name only—they have contributed ideas, energy, and personal service, reflecting a genuine dedication to the community they serve.
The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the potential to extend this kind of impact on a broader scale. By improving service reliability, enhancing supply chain efficiency, and expanding market access, the merger could strengthen the same kind of infrastructure—economic, cultural, and community—that we see Union Pacific investing in locally. As Union Pacific moves freight essential to our productions, from set materials to technical equipment, we are reminded that infrastructure is not only about moving goods but also about enabling creativity, commerce, and connection.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal. With thoughtful planning, it could improve dependability, support local businesses, expand cultural opportunity, and deliver long-term community benefits—just as Union Pacific has consistently done for ours.

It is with great confidence and appreciation that I recommend Union Pacific. Their track record of stewardship, community engagement, and investment in the future makes them a valued and trusted partner.

Sincerely,

RE: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As Council President for Harford County, MD, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community that relies on freight shipments, would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. Our entire community would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could decrease the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. And reducing highway congestion decreases the need for highway maintenance spending and improves quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Thank you for your time and consideration of this request.

Dear Chairman Fuchs-

As the Economic Development Director of an emerging 4000-acre industrial park on the Mississippi River served by rail, I understand the vital role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses, and residents. Reliable rail service connects our region to broader markets and provides an efficient means of transporting goods–from Helena to Memphis to the rest of the country.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger could significantly influence the network by providing more direct routes, extending geographic coverage, and promoting investments in infrastructure and technology. Our business community stands to benefit from improved service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency, and increased access to new markets. However, it is crucial to ensure that these developments maintain a balance between efficiency, safety, sustainability, and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, thereby serving as a vital component of sustainable transportation. Through judicious planning, the merger has the potential to enhance service reliability, support local enterprises, and generate opportunities for infrastructure development and employment expansion.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to thoroughly evaluate this proposal, taking into account both the potential benefits for communities like ours and the importance of ensuring equitable, secure, and sustainable rail services on both a national and international scale.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a community leader and the representative of a community-based non-profit in Helper, Utah, I am writing to you today on behalf of our entire community. Helper was founded on the rails, and our very existence is a testament to the railroad's importance to small Western towns. The diversity that once defined our town, which was home to people from over 20 ethnicities, and was made possible by the railroad's presence.

A successful merger will lead to a more dependable and efficient transportation system. For Helper, this means a stronger local economy, which will benefit our businesses through faster, more reliable service and reduced congestion. It also means the potential for significant, continued investment in rail infrastructure—enhancing safety, creating well-paying local jobs, and securing our community's future. We recognize that this merger primarily addresses freight service, not passenger service, which could offer broader benefits to Helper. However, we believe that the improvements to freight rail will still have a tangible positive effect on our community.

On behalf of the greater Helper, Utah region, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger. We ask that you ensure the approval includes a commitment to the specific investments and opportunities that will allow us to leverage these efficiencies to connect our communities regionally, nationally, and globally.

Specifically, we urge you to work with the merging companies to commit to:

- Investing in local infrastructure and safety enhancements.
- Ensuring Helper's local businesses have access to expanded market reach.
- Creating local jobs through continued investment in the railroad network.

Thank you for your time and consideration. We look forward to your favorable decision.

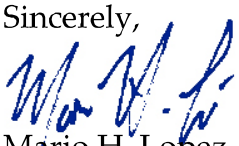
Docket No. FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the President of the Hispanic Leadership Fund, I am writing to share my recently-published op-ed, "Rail Merger Holds Promise for the Economy," which appeared in The Fulcrum on October 9. I am submitting this piece for the Board's consideration in support of the Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) rail merger.



This historic merger will strengthen American supply chains and boost local markets by combining eastern and western freight networks. America's prosperity depends in part on the materials transported by long-distance freight carriers. Increasing the number of seamless connections from the Pacific to the Atlantic will provide underserved communities with efficient and consistent access to freight service, expanding market access for small businesses, generating new economic opportunities, and driving down prices for consumers.

The merger will be particularly beneficial for the Hispanic community, especially in rural areas. Hispanics and other minorities are irreplaceable members of the transportation workforce. If this merger is approved, communities across the country will be freer to efficiently contribute to markets, without being constrained by delays or inefficiencies.

I strongly urge the STB to approve the UP-NS merger because of the support it will provide to freight rail—an essential component of the American economy—along with the workers who keep freight rail efficient and operational.

Please find a copy of the op-ed attached. Thank you for the consideration and your diligence in ensuring America's rail system remains strong and competitive.

Rail Merger Holds Promise for the Economy

OPINION

By Mario H. Lopez
Oct 09, 2025

Boosting domestic industry and manufacturing continues to be a key economic theme. A recently proposed merger between two major railroad companies could advance those goals—and it carries particular promise for underserved communities who are often on the front lines of America's workforce.

The merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern would create the nation's first transcontinental freight rail system, a vision pursued since 1869, when the "golden spike" famously connected the east and west.

By combining Union Pacific's western network with Norfolk Southern's eastern routes, the deal would create a unified freight web linking communities across the country and strengthening America's supply chains.

A coast-to-coast network is more than a logistical achievement. It could be a needed boost for communities too often left behind. Too many communities, particularly in rural America, struggle to access reliable freight service. When products can't move efficiently, businesses stall and workers lose opportunities. A seamless national rail system would help close those gaps, ensuring that economic growth reaches more corners of the country.

Minority communities stand to benefit as well. For example, Hispanic Americans now make up nearly 20% of the U.S. population, and they, along with African Americans and other minorities, form a vital share of the industrial and transportation workforce. These workers bear the brunt of supply chain disruptions, but they also stand to benefit most when systems become faster, cheaper, and more reliable.

Notably, the merger would reduce the number of interchanges—points where rail cars are transferred between operators. Fewer handoffs mean shorter transit times, potentially cutting days off cross-country shipments. That efficiency would lower supply chain costs for shippers and, ultimately, prices for American families.

Those savings would be important for small businesses, as well as lower transportation costs, open doors to new markets, and make growth more viable. Small businesses are another key area where minority entrepreneurs contribute greatly to the economy. A recent report found that "the U.S. Latino cohort was responsible for 28.3% of total additions to national GDP between 2017 and 2022," for example.

While not as immediately visible to the average consumer as other elements, rail continues to be a critical pillar for the American economy.

Rail Freight may not always capture headlines, but it is a backbone of the U.S. economy. Each year, railroads move about 1.5 billion tons of goods—everything from agricultural products, where Latino workers are especially prominent, to chemicals, construction materials, vehicles, and energy.

The American Association of Railroads (AAR) released a report earlier this year looking at the industry's contributions to jobs, trade, investment, and other areas. A succinct and eyebrow-raising highlight from the report notes that "rail is a major driver of economic activity, generating $233.4 billion in total economic output in 2023."

In fact, railroads carry more long-distance freight than any other mode of transportation in the U.S.—about 40% of the total volume. And that demand is likely to increase, with the Federal Highway Administration forecasting that total U.S. freight movements will rise about 30% by 2040.

The combined networks would span 50,000 route miles across 43 states and connect nearly 100 ports across North America, and help meet that demand.

Such integration would bolster American manufacturing and industry by expanding intermodal services, shortening routes, and opening new trade corridors.

In the coming months, the merger will go before the Surface Transportation Board (STB) for review. UP and NS do not compete with one another, with minor overlaps in their respective networks. That preserves options for rail customers and is expected to help assuage any antitrust concerns that will undoubtedly be on regulators' minds.

The timing is significant. Tariffs, inflation, and workforce shortages continue to be a drag on the American economy. Various business sectors are stagnating or on the verge of contraction. Hispanic and minority workers, who fill essential roles in a variety of critical areas like agriculture, transportation, and services, often feel these pressures most. And anti-immigrant policies are undermining the very labor force that sustains American growth.

The merger will not be a magic wand fix for the economy. But by modernizing supply chains, improving logistics, and expanding opportunity, it offers something increasingly rare: a step forward that strengthens the broader economy while directly benefiting the communities most invested in its success.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a leading nonprofit organization serving survivors of domestic violence in the Kansas City region, Hope House understands the critical importance of strong, stable, and engaged corporate partners in building healthier and safer communities. Union Pacific has been one of those partners. Their philanthropic support has directly strengthened our ability to provide life-saving services, shelter, and advocacy for individuals and families escaping abuse.

Union Pacific's sustained commitment to community investment is not symbolic, it is impactful and essential. Their contributions help advance our mission, expand access to vital services, and reinforce the infrastructure of support that vulnerable families rely on. When companies like Union Pacific prioritize community wellbeing, the entire region benefits.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger presents a significant opportunity to expand this positive impact. By strengthening operational capacity, improving rail service, and enhancing infrastructure, the merger would position Union Pacific to continue and grow the meaningful contributions it makes to local organizations. A stronger Union Pacific means stronger community partnerships, greater stability for nonprofits, and improved quality of life across the country.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger. Allowing Union Pacific to increase its reach and resources will not only bolster the nation's transportation network but will also support the vital community organizations that depend on corporate leadership and investment to meet rising needs.

Thank you for your consideration and for recognizing the importance of corporate–community partnerships in strengthening communities nationwide.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a member of the Houston City Council, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern railways. This merger represents a strategic opportunity to strengthen our national rail network and deliver significant economic and logistical benefits to the City of Houston.

Houston is one of the nation's most important transportation and logistics hubs. Our economy depends on efficient rail service to move goods to and from our ports, refineries, and manufacturing centers. The combination of Union Pacific's western network with Norfolk Southern's eastern routes would create a more seamless, coast-to-coast rail system—enhancing connectivity for Houston's industries, reducing supply chain bottlenecks, and improving overall service reliability.

Additionally, the merger is expected to generate local economic growth through increased freight efficiency, job creation, and reduced congestion on our highways as more goods move by rail. This is a win for our city's economy, our environment, and the millions of Texans who benefit from a stronger transportation infrastructure.

For these reasons, I urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger. It is an investment in the future of American commerce and a clear benefit for the people of Houston.

Employers Advocating Economic Opportunity in Idaho

The Honorable Patrick J. Fuchs
395 E Street, SW
Washington, DC 20423

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Idaho Association of Commerce & Industry (IACI), I write to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Corporation and Norfolk Southern Corporation, now under review by the Surface Transportation Board.

Union Pacific has been an engaged member of IACI's Board of Directors for decades. During that time, we have observed firsthand the company's commitment to safe operations, efficient freight movement, investment in critical infrastructure, and meaningful partnership with the states and communities it serves. For Idaho, a state whose economy is profoundly shaped by agriculture, food processing, advanced manufacturing, timber, mining, and intermountain logistics, the reliability and performance of the national freight rail network are essential.

The proposed UP-NS combination offers several significant advantages for shippers, producers, and consumers. The merger would reduce interchange delays and improve overall network efficiency. Idaho shippers would benefit from faster transit times, more predictable routing, and stronger access to both national and global markets. A unified UP-NS system would strengthen supply-chain resiliency. By expanding freight capacity and improving reliability, the combined network would provide Idaho businesses, especially those operating in high-value or time-sensitive sectors, with more dependable logistics options. In addition, a seamless coast-to-coast rail option would enhance competitiveness with long-haul trucking.

We appreciate the seriousness with which the Surface Transportation Board reviews major rail mergers. We recognize the importance of robust safeguards for competition, safety, service quality, and labor. Based on our long experience with Union Pacific, we believe the company is well-positioned to meet those expectations and deliver the operational and economic benefits it has outlined.

IACI respectfully requests the Board to consider the advantages this merger offers to shippers, producers, and regional economies nationwide. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the State Senator for the 3rd Senate District, I write to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Corporation. Subject: Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a State Representative in the Indiana General Assembly, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President of the Institute for Liberty and Director of CPAC Foundation's Center for Regulatory Freedom, I am writing to share my recently published op-ed, "Transcontinental Railroad Can Power Trump's America First Economy," which appeared in Real Clear Market on September 9, 2025. I am submitting this op-ed for the Board's consideration in support of the proposed Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) merger currently under review.

This merger is a critical step toward strengthening domestic infrastructure to support President Trump's America First agenda and the revitalization of U.S. manufacturing. The President's agenda is clear: rebuild America's industrial strength, cut reliance on foreign supply chains, and reclaim our place as a global leader in production and commerce.

In support of this agenda, the UP–NS merger will create America's first coast-to-coast rail system, streamlining shipping and strengthening supply chains across key industries. This unified network will boost reliability, lower costs, and deliver goods more efficiently for American families and businesses.

For too long, American manufacturers have been burdened by a fragmented rail network that stalls freight at congested interchanges and slows production. A transcontinental system will end these inefficiencies, creating a seamless flow of goods that powers a stronger, faster, and more competitive U.S. economy.

This merger comes at a pivotal moment for America's future. As global competitors race to dominate supply chains, the United States cannot afford to fall behind. China is investing billions in its "Belt and Road" Initiative to control global logistics, and Canada already operates a transcontinental railroad. Approving this merger will ensure that America, not foreign rivals, leads in moving goods across our continent and around the world.

This merger serves the public interest and will strengthen America's infrastructure, economy, and global competitiveness. I urge the Surface Transportation Board to move forward expeditiously to approve this merger.

Sincerely,
Andrew Langer

Transcontinental Railroad Can Power Trump's America First Economy

By Andrew Langer
September 09, 2025

President Trump's focus on reshoring industry and putting American workers first is laying the foundation for a long-awaited manufacturing revival. His agenda is clear: rebuild the industrial might of our nation, cut dependence on foreign supply chains, and make America the world's undisputed leader in production and commerce once again.

To achieve this, America needs not only new factories, but also the modern infrastructure to connect them and to quickly move goods between them. The proposed merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern, two of the nation's largest railroad operators, is a critical step toward bolstering our domestic infrastructure to support the manufacturing revival.

The combined network would stretch from coast to coast, simplifying cross-country shipping, reducing costly delays, and strengthening the supply chains that feed our farms, power plants, factories, and retailers. For key industries like agriculture, steel, energy, and consumer goods, a unified rail system means faster delivery times, lower costs, and more reliability. That translates directly into lower prices for American families and more competitive conditions for American businesses.

For decades, American manufacturers have been forced to rely on disjointed rail connections where freight must switch from one operator to another at congested interchanges, where railcars can remain halted for days. Each delay adds costs and uncertainty. By eliminating these bottlenecks, a transcontinental American railroad would dramatically cut waste, improve efficiency, and get products to market at the speed demanded by tomorrow's economy.

The merger brings our country closer to the America First vision. President Trump has rightly emphasized that a strong industrial base depends on strong infrastructure. Just as Pres. Lincoln's transcontinental railroad in the 19th century unified the country and unlocked a new era of growth, this 21st century version will supercharge the new industrial revolution already underway under Pres. Trump's leadership.

Before the companies can consecrate the merger and deliver on those benefits, regulators at the Surface Transportation Board (STB) must sign off. In the coming months, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern will need to prove to the STB that the merger is in the public interest. It is, and the STB should move quickly to approve it.

At a time when global competitors are racing to dominate supply chains, America cannot afford to fall behind. China has invested billions in its "Belt and Road" initiative to control international logistics, and Canada already boasts its own transcontinental railroad. Approving this merger will ensure that America, not foreign rivals, leads in moving goods across our own land.

It's no surprise that Canadian Pacific Kansas City (CPKC), which already operates a Canadian transcontinental system, has been among the first to criticize the Union Pacific-Norfolk Southern merger. CPKC understands that an American transcontinental competitor would take freight volume back from foreign operators and put it where it belongs – on American rails, moved by American workers, serving American communities.

Critics claim this merger could cause problems, but the truth is that opposition is often driven by self-interest, not concern for American consumers. Canadian competitors want to keep their advantage. The STB should see through this and act swiftly to approve a deal that benefits the United States above all.

Dave Fellon, owner of Progressive Rail Inc., put it well: "Today's business environment demands precision efficiency, real-time supply chain solutions, and a speed-to-market tempo that counts seconds, not days. By design, the UP–NS combination will deliver all of that—reviving American manufacturing, creating high-quality careers, and using commerce as a powerful conduit to connect people like never before."

This is a moment to think big. Just as Pres. Lincoln's transcontinental railroad was a defining achievement of American ambition, this merger could mark a turning point for America's new industrial era. If we are serious about reshoring jobs, cutting costs, and competing with the rest of the world, then building an American-owned transcontinental railroad should be at the top of the list.

RE: SUPPORT – Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs and Members of the Board:

On behalf of INVEST Fresno, a coalition of residents, businesses, and community organizations committed to building a diverse and sustainable economy in Fresno, we write to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of both California's and the Central Valley's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Nowhere is this more evident than in Fresno, where agriculture, manufacturing, and logistics depend on efficient freight connections to sustain growth and competitiveness.

Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for Fresno and the surrounding region. Its extensive rail network supports thousands of local jobs, provides reliable service to growers and food processors, and anchors the city's expanding logistics and warehousing sectors. The company's continued investment in track improvements, rail safety, and technology has strengthened the region's economic infrastructure and helped local businesses reach national and international markets.

The American freight rail network is not only critical to economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available. By moving freight efficiently and taking trucks off our highways, rail helps reduce congestion on State Route 99, lower emissions in the San Joaquin Valley, and support the region's broader environmental goals.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads—it's about strengthening the economic backbone of regions like Fresno, supporting sustainable transportation, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

We respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the long-term benefits it will bring to Fresno, the Central Valley, and the national economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

On behalf of the Iowa Association of Business and Industry (ABI), I write to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. ABI represents businesses of all sizes and industries across Iowa that collectively employ more than 330,000 Iowans. Our members depend on efficient, reliable, and cost-effective freight rail service to compete and grow in today's economy.

Iowa is a state that makes and moves things—from advanced manufacturing and agricultural products to chemicals, building materials, and food ingredients. Freight rail is a critical link in these supply chains, enabling Iowa companies to deliver products safely and efficiently to markets across the nation and the world. Reliable rail service also helps Iowa businesses remain competitive, supports job growth, and sustains the vitality of our communities.

ABI believes the proposed merger will strengthen this essential network and deliver meaningful benefits to Iowa businesses and the broader economy, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: The combined network will offer more direct routes and greater flexibility, minimizing the risk of service disruptions.
- Reduced Transit Times: By eliminating handoffs, the combined railroad will shorten delivery times, helping businesses meet customer demand more quickly and efficiently.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology, and equipment, further improving service quality, capacity, and safety.
- Expanded Reach: A broader geographic footprint will open new opportunities for Iowa manufacturers and agricultural producers to access customers nationwide and globally.

We understand that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on businesses and the broader economy.

Thank you for the opportunity to share our perspective and for your leadership on this important matter.

Subject: Union Pacific Merger Will Support Growth for Iowa Industry

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

Iowa Falls is a community with deep and longstanding ties to the railroad. Many of our local business partners depend on rail transportation to move products to markets across the United States. This access has allowed our community to attract businesses that might otherwise have located elsewhere. Though Iowa Falls is a small community, we take great pride in the strong and resilient business environment we've cultivated.

For these reasons, I was encouraged to learn of the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. This merger has the potential to bring meaningful benefits to Iowa Falls and our business community. By expanding direct access to new markets, it would reduce the time required to move goods into and out of our region—helping local companies operate more efficiently. Fewer interchanges would also increase reliability and reduce associated fees.

Improved direct access to a broader rail network would strengthen Iowa Falls' ability to attract new businesses and support the confident expansion of our existing partners. Additionally, a more unified national rail system would enhance the competitiveness of American manufacturing and agriculture by providing more streamlined service from coast to coast.

On behalf of the Iowa Falls Area Development Corporation, I would like to express my support for the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger. A stronger rail network will help build a stronger Iowa—and a stronger America.

Subject: Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community leader in the Southwest Iowa and greater Omaha area, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

Our business community would benefit from faster, more reliable rail service, a more efficient and resilient supply chain, and access to new markets. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to deliver those benefits by providing single-line service and more direct routes that increase transportation options, expand each railroad's geographic reach and encourage investment in infrastructure and technology. At the same time, it is important to ensure these benefits are achieved in a manner consistent with the need for safety, sustainability and long-term benefits to communities like mine, and I trust that the Surface Transportation Board will safeguard those benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Board to take these comments into account in its consideration of the proposed transaction.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President and CEO of the Jefferson City Regional Economic Partnership, I am writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Jefferson City is centrally located in Missouri and serves as a hub for commerce, industry, and public service. Our region depends on safe, reliable, and efficient freight rail to connect local manufacturers, agricultural producers, and distributors to markets across the country. Union Pacific has long played a critical role in our regional supply chain, supporting economic development efforts and enabling businesses in Jefferson City and surrounding areas to remain competitive.

This proposed merger stands to strengthen our local economy by providing:

- Greater Service Reliability: More direct and streamlined rail service will improve the dependability businesses in Jefferson City rely on to manage production schedules and meet customer needs.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating key interchange bottlenecks will help products move faster to and from our region, giving Jefferson City companies a competitive edge.
- New Market Opportunities: The expanded network could open additional trade routes, giving local exporters broader access to customers across the U.S. and beyond.
- Long-Term Investment: A stronger, more unified rail operation willo bring greater investment in infrastructure and technology that will benefit communities like ours for decades to come.

We believe this merger is not just a business decision, it's an opportunity to enhance economic connectivity for mid-sized regions like Jefferson City. The efficiencies and improvements made possible through this partnership can help secure our long-term economic vitality while maintaining the sustainability advantages of freight rail over other forms of transportation.

On behalf of our organization and the regional businesses we represent, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposed merger.

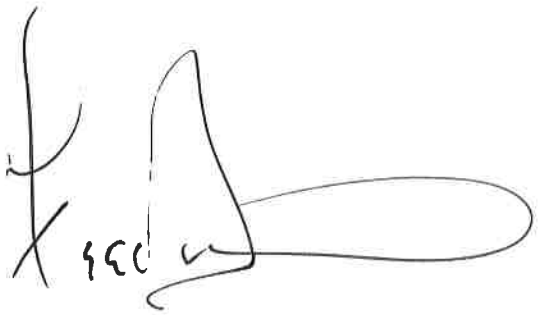
Subject: Support for Union Pacific-Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Jefferson County Board of Supervisors, we are writing to express our support for the proposed rail merger between Norfolk Southern and Union Pacific.

The merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion, and expanded market reach for our businesses. It also means continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing safety, creating jobs and ensuring our community remains competitive in a growing economy.



Railroads have been an important part of Jefferson County's story since the mid-1800s. When the first trains came through, they connected our farms, small towns, and businesses to the rest of the country. The railroad helped shape Fairfield into a thriving community and gave local manufactures and farmers new ways to move their products to market.

Just as railroads helped build Jefferson County's foundation more than a century ago, the combined networks of Norfolk Southern and Union Pacific represent an opportunity to strengthen the Midwest' s role in the future of American commerce.

On behalf of the citizens of Jefferson County, we urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so we can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities it will bring – connecting our communities regionally, nationally and across the globe.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a candidate for Jefferson County Executive, I am writing to express my steadfast support for the merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Once approved, this landmark proposal will create the first actual transcontinental railroad in our nation's history – linking the East and West coasts for the first time ever and helping usher in an economic Golden Age for our country.

Freight rail serves as the foundation for Missouri's economy. With Kansas City and St. Louis serving as major national hubs for freight rail transportation in the country, Missouri ranks fifth in freight rail employment. Missouri is home to twenty freight railroads and thousands of highway-rail crossings, making it one of the most freight-heavy states in the country.

This historic merger will directly benefit Missouri's businesses and workers. Our manufacturers will gain access to streamlined, efficient transcontinental rail service connecting them to new markets and ports across North America. With access to nearly 100 ports and expanded routes, manufacturers will enjoy lower shipping costs, greater competitiveness, and stronger links to global trade – all of which ultimately benefit Missouri consumers.

Just as significantly, this merger can strengthen rail's ability to compete with long-haul trucking, which strains our roads and bridges. Freight rail is safer, cheaper, and far more efficient: a single railcar carries the equivalent of four full trucks, and a single train can move the load of hundreds. Shifting freight back to rail will ease the burden on our infrastructure, reduce taxpayer costs, and enhance safety on our highways.

Another direct benefit of this merger is gaining the expanded corporate partnership and philanthropic giving that Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern bring. Both companies have long been recognized as exemplary employers that support their workers and give back to the communities they serve. Together, they have committed $300 million between 2020 and 2025 – funding initiatives that strengthened families, supported local economies, and built more resilient communities.

This merger also carries historic resonance. In 1862, President Abraham Lincoln signed the Pacific Railway Act, creating Union Pacific and laying the foundation for America's first transcontinental railroad. Today, President Trump is honoring and building upon that legacy by voicing his support for this new coast-to-coast connection. This achievement will stand as a modern milestone in our nation's economic history.

For these reasons, I ask that the Surface Transportation Board approve the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger. Doing so will strengthen Missouri's economy, protect our infrastructure, and help usher in a new economic Golden Age of America.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

I am writing you this letter in support of the proposed merger of the Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern railroads.

As a former elected official in city, county and state government from Franklin County, Missouri, I have had a keen interest and have been a railroad enthusiast for over four decades. In fact, both the Union Pacific and Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railroads and the short-line Missouri Eastern Railroad provide service to Franklin County and its citizens.

I have followed both the successful and unsuccessful railroad mergers of the past. Through thorough discussions and negotiations, I truly believe that this merger will result in improved service and hopefully lower costs for the customers and ultimately, the consumer. I also truly believe that the historic merger between the Union Pacific Railroad and the Norfolk Southern Railway Company, becoming the first transcontinental railroad, will benefit not only both our local citizens but those of the State of Missouri and the United States of America.

I humbly request and encourage your support and look forward to the approval of this historic merger proposal.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As President of the Rainey Center, I write to strongly urge the Surface Transportation Board (STB) to approve the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) without delay. The Rainey Center is dedicated to advancing common-sense policy solutions to address our nation's most pressing challenges, and this merger aligns squarely with that mission. At a time when the U.S. faces significant infrastructure constraints and supply chain inefficiencies, the union of UP and NS offers a pragmatic path forward, enhancing modern infrastructure, enabling cleaner and more efficient freight movement, and strengthening the resilience of America's industrial supply chain.

The combined UP-NS network would create a seamless, integrated freight corridor stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific oceans. By linking ports, inland hubs, and key industrial regions into a unified national system, the new network would optimize routes, reduce redundancies, and eliminate costly interchange delays. The result would be faster, more reliable, and more cost-effective movement of goods—delivering tangible benefits to consumers and businesses alike.

A stronger, more connected nationwide rail system will also reinforce domestic manufacturing by anchoring production in the U.S., reducing supply-chain bottlenecks, and improving responsiveness to shifting demand. By combining the complementary strengths of NS and UP, the merger would create a carrier uniquely positioned to serve the full spectrum of American industry—from agriculture and mining to automotive and high-tech manufacturing. The outcome would be greater supply-chain agility, enhanced reliability, and fewer disruptions—qualities essential to sustaining U.S. industrial leadership in a competitive global economy.

The benefits of this merger will extend beyond economics. Freight rail is already among the most energy-efficient modes of heavy transport; however, the current fragmentation of our nation's rail lines discourages businesses from choosing this sustainable option. By uniting these two carriers, the merger would ensure greater reliability and speed, encouraging a shift away from higher-emission truck traffic. The environmental benefits of this switch are significant: fewer miles traveled, fewer starts and stops, better utilization of assets, and ultimately lower greenhouse-gas emissions per ton-mile moved. The merger, therefore, offers an environmental upside that aligns with broader goals of decarbonization and cleaner infrastructure investment, without sacrificing U.S. energy security.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger without delay. This forward-looking partnership represents a vital step toward building a more competitive, sustainable, and resilient American economy.

Respectfully,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As members of JC 1st, a coalition of private business leaders representing Junction City and Geary County, Kansas, we write in strong support of the proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger.

Our business community depends on reliable freight and logistics access to remain competitive. Located along the I-70 corridor and adjacent to major north–south routes, Junction City serves as a key connection point for manufacturing, agricultural, and distribution operations throughout central Kansas. The proposed merger will strengthen this network by enhancing service reliability, reducing transit times, and improving coordination between rail and highway systems.

This merger also represents a strong signal to private investors. When major transportation firms like Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern choose to invest in expanding and modernizing their systems, it demonstrates confidence not only in large metro markets but also in the economic potential of rural regions like ours. That confidence helps attract private capital by showing that smaller communities are valued participants in the national logistics and supply chain network.

For our region, improved rail performance and expanded capacity will make it easier to attract new industries, retain local employers, and support continued growth near Fort Riley and the surrounding area. The efficiencies and coordination that will result from this merger will help strengthen our long-term competitiveness and position Junction City–Geary County as a strong partner in regional and national commerce.

We urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the merger, allowing our businesses and communities to benefit from the investment, efficiency, and opportunity it will create—supporting continued growth and prosperity across Kansas and the heartland.

Sincerely,

Mickey Fornaro-Dean

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Speaker of the Kansas House of Representatives, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a vital component of Kansas' economy. It efficiently and safely transports agricultural products, manufactured goods, and raw materials throughout the rest of the nation. Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a community non-profit leader in Utah, I recognize the vital role freight rail plays in supporting our economy, businesses, and residents. A reliable rail service connects our region to national and global markets while offering an efficient and sustainable way to move goods.

Union Pacific has consistently demonstrated its commitment to strengthening communities not only through freight operations but also by investing in people. Its "Put Youth on the Right Track" program and workforce development efforts exemplify this commitment. In Utah, Ken Garff for Good is proud to partner with Union Pacific to expand these opportunities by creating technology pathways for students through esports, cybersecurity, and digital innovation programs. These initiatives prepare young people for future careers in coding, data analytics, game design, and other high-demand fields and skills that directly align with the rail industry's growing reliance on advanced technology and data-driven operations.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the potential to enhance freight efficiency, expand geographic reach, and encourage continued investment in infrastructure and workforce training. With careful oversight, it can also ensure safety, sustainability, and meaningful long-term benefits for communities like ours.

I respectfully urge the Board to evaluate this proposal with a focus on strengthening service reliability, supporting workforce development, and creating lasting value for the communities served.

Subject: Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

Kentucky's city governments recognize the critical role freight rail plays in sustaining and growing our local economies. Reliable and efficient rail service is essential to the success of our businesses, the mobility of goods, and the overall quality of life for our residents. It connects our cities, state, and region to broader markets and supports the continued economic vitality of our communities.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the potential to significantly shape the future of this network. A well-structured merger could provide more direct routes, expand geographic reach, and promote investment in infrastructure and technology. These developments could yield tangible benefits for many of Kentucky's cities through improved service reliability, strengthened supply chain efficiency, and expanded market access.

By all accounts, this proposed consolidation would continue to maintain a strong focus on safety, sustainability, and long-term community benefits. Freight rail's contribution to reducing highway congestion and emissions already makes it a key component of sustainable transportation and this merger could further enhance those outcomes while also creating opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully evaluate this proposal, weighing both the potential benefits and opportunities it may provide for local and regional economies and the need to ensure fair, safe, and reliable rail service nationwide.

Thank you for your consideration of these comments and for your continued attention to ensuring a strong and balanced national freight rail system.

Subject: Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a State Senator, from Kentucky, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a city councilwoman in Keokuk, IA, reliable rail service is essential for our local economy, businesses, and manufacturing. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to strengthen these connections and deliver long-term benefits.

The merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion, and expanded market reach for our businesses. It also means continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing safety, creating jobs and ensuring our community remains competitive in a growing economy.

The City of Keokuk has a long history of being a manufacturing hub for in the region. Just this year, the city is redeveloping an 80 acre industrial area that has sat vacant for decades. With access to a transcontinental rail network, manufactured goods in Keokuk will be price-competitive in global markets and will ship out of U.S. ports faster than ever before.

On behalf of the City of Keokuk, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so we can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities it will bring - connecting our communities regionally, nationally and across the globe.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

My name is Dan Tillman, and I serve as a City Councilman representing the Fifth Ward of Keokuk, IA. I am writing to express my support for the proposed rail between Norfolk Southern and Union Pacific.

This potential partnership goes far beyond expanding the railroad industry and connecting our country's rail network. For my fellow citizens of Keokuk, this is a chance to strengthen our manufacturing base, connect our community to new consumers, and create additional jobs that will drive sustained economic growth. By doing so, this merger would help solidify Keokuk's role as a vital nexus in the flow of Midwestern manufacturing and commerce.

Although few know of our small city tucked in Iowa's southeast corner, everyday people across the nation depend on goods that pass through our central waterway and rail system. Situated at the confluence of the Des Moines and Mississippi rivers, Keokuk was proudly nicknamed the 'Gate City' in the early 1900s for its integral role in facilitating riverboat trade. While the river shaped much of our history, railroads have been equally vital to our economic development and remain critical to our future.

Keokuk's rail infrastructure, first developed in the 1850s, has long kept our local economy connected to national supply chains, allowing goods to move seamlessly between trains and riverboats. The proposed merger would build on this legacy by expanding the reach of our city's manufactured goods – such as steel castings, grain and minerals – while reducing costs. Because trains are four times more fuel efficient than trucks and a single train can carry the equivalent of 300 trucks, rail improvements like this merger will directly strengthen our competitiveness in today's just-in-time economy.

Furthermore, the combined networks of Norfolk Southern and Union Pacific would give Iowa manufacturers and farmers faster, more reliable access to ports and global markets. This expanded reach would not only strengthen Iowa's role in national commerce, but also generate new jobs and economic growth across the state, benefiting communities well beyond Keokuk.

While Keokuk possesses robust manufacturing capabilities, its competitiveness could be greatly improved by modernizing rail infrastructure and reducing both shipping times and costs. Current upgrades to the Keokuk Junction Railway are a step in the right direction, but they cannot match the long-term advantages of a NS-UP merger. Revitalizing Iowa's economy needs an all-hands-on-deck approach, and prioritizing rail projects is key to that effort.

On behalf of the citizens of 'Gate City' Keokuk, I urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so our city can reestablish itself as a hub for manufacturing and commerce. Just as railroads transformed our economy in the late 19th century, we now face a modern opportunity to deliver equally transformative growth for our community.

Thank you for your time and consideration of our interests.

Sincerely,
Dan Tillman

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Kirkwood – Des Peres Area Chamber of Commerce, I am writing to express strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail has always been vital to Missouri's economic strength. It moves the goods that sustain our industries, serve our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the country. Union Pacific has been a reliable partner to our region, providing efficient, affordable, and sustainable transportation that helps local businesses grow and thrive.

In Kirkwood, the story of rail is personal. The town was established in 1853 as one of the first planned railroad suburbs west of the Mississippi. The railroad did not simply pass through—it created Kirkwood. Our historic train station remains among the busiest in Missouri—third after St. Louis and Kansas City—and operates on Union Pacific lines. The station is more than a stop; it's a gathering point, a civic landmark, and a symbol of how rail investment strengthens communities and drives local economies.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community member and former leader in Idaho, reliable rail service is essential for our local economy, businesses and residents. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to strengthen these connections and deliver long-term benefits.

The merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion and expanded market reach for our businesses. It also means continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing safety, creating jobs and ensuring our community remains competitive in a growing economy.

During my 30-year career in state service with the Idaho State Police, I witnessed firsthand the devastation and loss of life that increased congestion can bring, especially in a state with very adverse weather conditions. Work such as this merger can greatly assist in roadway safety. In addition to reduced roadway congestion, mergers such as this proposal can greatly increase rail safety by identifying and streamlining best safety practices. Both these and many other issues can and will save lives of both the railway workers and the public. This is in addition to the many other benefits that are identified. I currently work at the international level in roadway safety and have seen the benefits that good safety plans and practices bring to a workforce and as well as the public and I strongly believe based on my experience, that this is merger will provide a safer workplace and a more effective and efficient transportation system for all users. In short, I believe these types of merges will save lives.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so we can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments and opportunities it will bring - connecting our communities regionally, nationally and across the globe.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President and CEO of the Lincoln Presidential Foundation, I am writing to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. We are proud to have a longstanding partnership with Union Pacific which has benefited the Lincoln Presidential Foundation's nonprofit work for decades. It was President Abraham Lincoln who signed the Pacific Railway Act that created Union Pacific. It is out of this shared historical connection and decades-long association that we strongly support this merger and believe it will be beneficial for our state and nation.

Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network has been critical to our nation's economic growth since its inception. It is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

We understand the proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for communities, shippers, consumers, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

President Lincoln recognized the crucial role that improved infrastructure plays in our regional and national economic success. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the tremendous, historic benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Sincerely,

Erin Carlson Mast

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As the President and CEO of the Little Rock Regional Chamber, we're responsible for the existing and current economic development work for the Little Rock Port Authority. Our intermodal transportation facilities provide national and international companies with seamless and nimble logistic channels from the heart of the United States. Economic development is significantly impacted by access to customers and new markets. We understand the vital role freight rail plays in supporting our regional economy, businesses, and residents.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger could significantly enhance the network by providing more direct routes, extending geographic coverage, while promoting investments in infrastructure and technology. Our regional rail community stands to benefit from improved service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency, and increased access to new markets. However, it is crucial to ensure that these developments maintain a balance between efficiency, safety, sustainability, and long-term community benefits.

The use of freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, thereby serving as a vital component of sustainable transportation. This merger has the potential to enhance service reliability, support local industries, and generate opportunities for additional infrastructure development and employment expansion.

We respectfully request the Surface Transportation Board thoroughly evaluate this proposal, taking into account both the potential benefits for communities and regions like central Arkansas along with expanding secure and sustainable rail services on a national and international scale.

Sincerely,

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of Louisiana Economic Development (LED), I am writing to express our full support for the proposed merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Louisiana's robust infrastructure assets power global and domestic commerce and supply chains, supporting the movement of our state's agricultural, energy, petrochemical commodities, and more, to the world. Strong freight rail networks are a crucial component of our success in driving regional, national, and global market connections, and Union Pacific has long served as an integral partner in maintaining Louisiana's competitive edge in the logistics sector, a core industry that fuels our global market connections and serves as one of the state's largest sectors by employment.

The Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger presents an opportunity to strengthen this ongoing partnership and harness Louisiana's existing logistics advantages to grow economic opportunity. LED is confident that the proposed merger will enhance reliability and speed-to-market within Louisiana's freight rail system by enabling more direct transit routes, reducing congestion and service disruptions, accelerating advanced technology, and enhancing safety systems. Enabling these improvements to overall system performance will cement our state's reputation as an ideal location for businesses involved in shipping, manufacturing, and distribution, and further catalyze the creation of jobs and economic opportunity for the people of Louisiana.

LED respectfully urges the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger that will grow Louisiana's global leadership in energy, agribusiness, trade, and beyond, and support enduring economic opportunity for businesses and citizens across our state and nation.

Sincerely,

As a community stakeholder in the New Orleans region, I am writing to offer the Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities' support for Union Pacific. The Union Pacific Foundation has long been an important community partner in our work to improve educational outcomes across Louisiana.

The Union Pacific Foundation has supported our Prime Time family literacy programs since 2012. Prime Time programs promote school and reading readiness while creating a lifelong connection to - and love of - reading for our most economically and educationally vulnerable children and families. Union Pacific Foundation has helped LEH grow this important program, which received the 2025 Library of Congress Literacy Awards American Prize. With sustained support, we have also introduced innovative at-home literacy supports like Prime Time Boxes and family workshops. Union Pacific is also a regular supporter of our Bright Lights Awards Dinner, which recognizes and preserves the legacies of Louisianans who have made significant contributions to our state's culture.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Governor of the great state of Louisiana, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Here in Louisiana, freight rail isn't just a line on a map; it's a lifeline for our economy. It moves our sugar, rice, soybeans, and timber. It delivers the steel, fuel, and chemicals that power our plants, ports, and refineries. And it keeps our farmers, workers, and small businesses connected to markets across America and around the world. Union Pacific has been a trusted partner in this work for generations, providing reliable, cost-effective service that helps Louisiana compete and grow.

This merger represents an opportunity to strengthen that partnership and deliver clear benefits for Louisiana families, communities, and industries, including:

- Improved Reliability: More direct routes and flexibility to avoid service disruptions.
- Faster Transit: Cutting out interchanges so our products get to customers more quickly and competitively.
- Stronger Investment: A more resilient transcontinental network with modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and stronger safety systems.
- Broader Reach: Expanding access to new markets for Louisiana's goods while boosting supply chain resilience.

This is about more than two railroads. It's about securing Louisiana's place as a leader in energy, agriculture, and trade. It's about strengthening America's transportation backbone and keeping freight rail globally competitive.

For these reasons, I strongly urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal and the benefits it will bring not only to Louisiana but to the entire country.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger,
Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a Senator of the State of Louisiana, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Sincerely,

Subject: Comment on Union Pacific's Community Support, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community stakeholder and non-profit organization in Salt Lake City, Utah, Loveland Living Planet Aquarium (LLPA) cannot speak to the proposed merger, but would like to share firsthand experience with Union Pacific Railroad's commitment to our mission of inspiring people to explore, discover, and learn about Earth's diverse ecosystems.

LLPA is a 501(C)(3) nonprofit committed to educating our community, especially through our groundbreaking outreach program, which visits every fourth-grade class in the state, at no cost to students or their families. In this program, our educators transport Ambassador Animals, which are trained specifically for these presentations, directly to students as real-life examples of the lessons on adaptations and biology that they are already learning in school. Our outreach curriculum aligns with state standards and ensures that every child in Utah, regardless of their location or economic status, has access to our innovative education initiatives. LLPA animals and habitats provide a well-rounded STEAM education that inspires students to care for the world around them. Bringing this education directly to classrooms ensures that no child is left behind.

This past spring, we applied for, and were later awarded, a grant through the Union Pacific Railroad Community Ties Giving Program to further our outreach initiatives. By approving this funding, Union Pacific demonstrated their community support and dedication to enriching the lives of Utah's children. Through this support, LLPA is able to fund travel expenses and educational resources to expand our reach to even the most remote communities, many of which are also served by Union Pacific railroad lines. As Union Pacific employees often reside in rural areas with limited educational resources for their children, the extension of our outreach education program is a direct benefit to them, their families, and their community. Together, we are fostering stewardship for the environment and for life on Earth by furthering equitable innovations in educational opportunities. Of which, our outreach program is just the beginning.

On behalf of Loveland Living Planet Aquarium, I respectfully request the Surface Transportation Board consider the significant positive impact Union Pacific has had on our community. Their dedication to those they serve is shown through the impact LLPA has on its students. Together, we are breaking barriers by bringing an impactful STEAM education to each of Utah's students, and thus promoting brighter, more sustainable futures for them.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As we look at the progress we have made in our community to preserve our historic architecture through economic development and aesthetic revitalization, the strides we have made can in a large way be attributed to the support we have gained from the Union Pacific Community Ties Giving Program grant.

The funds Union Pacific has continued to provide us allows our support of downtown Trenton property owners with renovations of their buildings through our facade grants. The facade program is a versatile matching grant that can be used for the many improvements to the exterior of downtown properties.

The economic impact has been not only increased revenue for downtown businesses, but an increase in developer confidence that has lead to more properties being invested in. The increased investment in property infrastructure has also furthered our preservation goals and initiatives.

On behalf of Main Street Trenton, I respectfully ask the Surface Transportation Board to consider approving this merger so that this support of our community and so many like ours can not only continue but also grow.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the Director of Economic Development for the City of Marion, Arkansas, I am writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail plays a vital role in Marion's economy and throughout the Delta region, connecting our industries, supporting our farmers, and ensuring efficient access to national and international markets. Union Pacific has long been a trusted partner in our region, providing reliable and cost-effective services that enable our businesses to compete and thrive.

Rail transportation also provides significant environmental and community benefits by helping to reduce highway congestion, lower roadway maintenance costs, and reduce emissions. Every carload of freight moved by rail keeps trucks off the highway, reducing traffic and making travel safer for our residents and visitors.

The proposed merger presents a significant opportunity to strengthen America's freight rail system and enhance service to communities like ours. Key benefits include:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and operational flexibility will help minimize disruptions and ensure consistent service for our shippers.
- Reduced Transit Times: Streamlined interchanges will enable goods to move more efficiently, enhancing competitiveness for local and regional industries.
- Increased Investment: A unified network will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology, and safety improvements that benefit communities along the line.
- Expanded Market Reach: A broader geographic footprint will open new opportunities for Arkansas products and strengthen overall supply chain resilience.
- Sustainability Gains: Rail remains one of the most fuel-efficient and environmentally friendly modes of freight transportation, supporting national goals for cleaner, more sustainable commerce.

This merger represents more than just a business transaction—it's an investment in the future of America's transportation network and in the continued economic growth of communities like Marion.

We respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing its importance to regional and national commerce.

Subject: Proposed Merger Between Union Pacific - Norfolk Southern Will Benefit Marion County

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As the Marion County Board of Supervisors, we have had the privilege of working with numerous communities throughout south-central Iowa. Many of these communities rely heavily on the manufacturing jobs that sustain our local economies. The merger between Norfolk Southern and Union Pacific promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion, and expanded market reach for our businesses. It also means continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing safety, creating jobs and ensuring our communities remain competitive in a growing economy.

Railroads have been an important part of Marion County's history since the 1800's, transforming the local economy and connecting its towns to regional trade. The Des Moines Valley Railroad was one of the first lines to connect Des Moines to Keokuk – moving our agricultural products to market.

Just as railroads helped shape Marion County's towns, the combined networks of Norfolk Southern and Union Pacific would not only strengthen Iowa's networks in national commerce but also generate new jobs and economic growth across the state, benefitting communities well beyond Knoxville and Marion County.

On behalf of the citizens of Marion County, we urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so we can take advantage of the efficiencies and opportunities it will bring – strengthening the Midwest's role in the future of American commerce.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I am writing to share my recently published op-ed, "America's Economy Needs a Robust Freight Network," which appeared in the DC Journal on August 19, 2025. I am submitting this op-ed for the Board's consideration in support of the Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) merger that is currently under review. As a long-time policy expert, I believe that I have the qualifications to speak to the benefits of a revitalized freight system for America's economy.

This merger will strengthen America's economy by creating a seamless transcontinental network that moves goods more efficiently across the country. A coast-to-coast will also help rebuild domestic manufacturing by improving supply chains, allowing American producers to source materials and ship products more efficiently and at lower costs. This productivity will make American goods more competitive globally while reducing transit times, minimizing interchanges, and presenting shippers with a more cost-effective freight option, benefiting both business and consumers.

An investment in a unified rail network is also an investment in the future of good-paying American jobs. With UP and NS committing to retaining and growing their workforce, train crews, engineers, mechanics, and signal technicians will continue to play critical roles. As traffic increases on a more efficient rail system, the demand for skilled workers will grow, with job growth particularly benefiting America's overlooked communities and overall economy.

While arguments have been made regarding the effects of rail consolidation, the ultimate outcome of this merger is the enhancement of competition. From reclaiming freight from Canadian rail, to offering a better alternative to trucking, a more competitive rail network will drive national economic growth.

I believe that this op-ed adds a well-reasoned argument of support to the UP-NS merger, highlighting the various ways in which a unified rail network can strengthen America's economy through greater emphasis on rebuilt domestic manufacturing.

Please find a copy of the published piece attached. Thank you for your consideration of the matter and efforts to ensure a competitive transcontinental rail network, and I encourage you to approve this merger.

Best,
Charles Sauer

America's Economy Needs a Robust Freight Network

Posted to Finance August 19, 2025 by Charles Sauer

Revitalizing American manufacturing has become a political priority. However, there is widespread agreement that the U.S. should reduce its dependence on foreign supply chains, rebuild domestic industrial capacity, and compete more effectively with economic rivals.

We can't just play defense by using trade policy and tariffs; we also need to go on the offensive by building the U.S. economy. That means the government needs to get out of the way — reduce regulations, strengthen property rights and allow businesses to make their decisions, particularly regarding freight, the suppliers of the supply side.

Unfortunately, parts of our freight system haven't kept pace with modern economic demands. While American railroads remain essential to long-distance shipping, the current network at times suffers from inefficiencies that slow commerce and raise costs. Regulations, labor issues, fragmentation, handoffs between carriers, and bottlenecks in cities like Chicago and St. Louis can create delays for shippers and undermine the global competitiveness of U.S. producers.

Meanwhile, Canadian railroads and trucking companies have gained a competitive edge by offering more integrated, coast-to-coast service while also enjoying fewer regulations.

The government's thumb is firmly on these markets and driving the move to trucking. We need less regulation to remove the government's thumb. Less regulation would put these industries on equal footing, increasing innovation in both markets and allowing businesses to make better decisions. For instance, while trucks will always be essential for short-haul and final-mile delivery, rail is four times more fuel-efficient than trucks, making it a more efficient option for large-scale freight movement.

The government also needs to allow the players in these markets to make the decisions they believe would make their companies better and more competitive.

For example, there is a proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. The merger offers a practical step toward addressing structural challenges in rail to help ensure our country remains competitive on a global scale. While it doesn't reduce the regulations harming these companies or reduce labor pressure on the companies, it does create a seamless, transcontinental network. The merger could enable goods to move more directly and reliably across the country, cutting costly interchanges and simplifying logistics for manufacturers, farmers and retailers.

These efficiencies could deliver not just a more efficient rail system but one that supports the broader goals of strengthening domestic industry and making American businesses more globally competitive.

Beyond its transportation benefits, establishing a coast-to-coast railroad through the Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger supports a key national objective: rebuilding the U.S. manufacturing base. Supply-chain disruptions in recent years have shown how critical dependable logistics are for keeping plants running and shelves stocked. Every day saved in transit, every reduction in shipping cost, and every improvement in network reliability directly affects whether American-made goods can compete with foreign alternatives.

A more unified rail system will reduce transit times, cut the number of handoffs, and provide shippers with a more predictable and cost-effective freight solution. That's good for businesses and consumers, who benefit from lower prices and fewer shortages.

And a good way to create even more innovation in trucking and rail.

A stronger domestic rail network also supports good-paying American jobs. The combined company has committed to retaining and growing its skilled workforce, including train crews, engineers, mechanics and signal technicians. With increased traffic on a more efficient network, demand for these jobs will grow, especially in regions that stand to gain from improved access to rail infrastructure. That means new opportunities for workers in communities that have long been overlooked in national economic planning.

Some perennial critics of rail consolidation have raised their past concerns about consolidation, but this merger is not about reducing competition. On the contrary, it enhances it. It allows American railroads to compete more effectively with their Canadian counterparts and offers shippers a stronger alternative to trucking. It's a pro-competition, pro-growth approach that addresses immediate logistical challenges and long-term national priorities.

At a moment when policymakers are focused on reshoring industry, stabilizing supply chains and reducing our reliance on fragile international networks, this merger arrives at the right time. It strengthens U.S. freight capacity, supports industrial growth and reinforces American competitiveness in a demanding global economy.

The regulators at the Surface Transportation Board, who are charged with reviewing this proposal, should approve the merger, not just as a sound business move but as a strategic investment in the country's economic future.

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President & CEO of the Marshalltown Area Chamber of Commerce in Marshalltown, Iowa, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Marshalltown is home to a diverse economy rooted in advanced manufacturing, agriculture, and food processing. Global companies such as Emerson, Lennox, and JBS, along with countless small businesses and family farms across central Iowa, depend on efficient, reliable freight rail to move products to customers and markets across the nation and world. Freight rail is not just a cornerstone of Iowa's economy, it is the backbone that connects our businesses, sustains jobs, and supports growth in our communities. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state and businesses, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth, but also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads, it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive. For communities like Marshalltown, where employers depend on rail to connect with markets and where our workforce depends on those employers for stability and opportunity, the stakes are high, and the benefits are clear.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

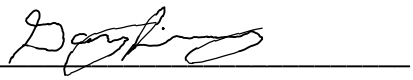
Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a State Delegate in Anne Arundel County, District 12b, I write to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern, which would create America's first transcontinental railroad. This historic partnership represents a forward-looking investment in our nation's transportation future—one that can strengthen Maryland and the United States economic competitiveness while enhancing safety, efficiency, and sustainability.



Freight rail has long played a critical role in supporting our regional economy, connecting Maryland's businesses, ports, and industries to national and global markets. The integration of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern promises to expand this network through more direct routes, modernized infrastructure, and coordinated operations that will deliver greater reliability for shippers and communities alike. These improvements would not only support local businesses but also encourage continued investment and innovation in rail technology and workforce development.

Importantly, this merger would preserve and strengthen union jobs—ensuring that the skilled workers who have powered America's rail system for generations continue to be part of its future. By fostering collaboration between labor and management, the combined network could set a new standard for safety, operational excellence, and economic opportunity.

Communities across Maryland would further benefit from reduced highway congestion, lower emissions, and decreased road maintenance costs as freight shifts from trucks to rail. A stronger, more resilient rail network supports both environmental goals and quality of life, providing a model of sustainable growth that other industries can follow.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give this proposal full and fair consideration, recognizing the broad benefits it offers to Maryland, to our national economy, and to the long-term health of the U.S. transportation system. With careful oversight, this merger can be a milestone in building a safer, greener, and more competitive America.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a Maryland Delegate representing Harford and Cecil Counties, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community that relies on freight shipments would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. And our whole community would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could decrease the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. And reducing highway congestion decreases the need for highway maintenance spending and improves quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a the State Senator representing the 32nd Legislative District of Anne Arundel County, Maryland, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community that relies on freight shipments, would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. And our whole community would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could decrease the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. And reducing highway congestion decreases the need for highway maintenance spending and improves quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President & CEO of the Greater Mason City Chamber of Commerce, I write to express my strong support for the proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger. Reliable rail service is essential to Mason City and the North Iowa region, enabling our manufacturers, agricultural producers, and distributors to efficiently move goods to regional, national, and global markets.

Rail is particularly critical to some of our region's largest employers, including CURRIES, Cargill, Smithfield, and Kraft Heinz. These companies rely on rail for both raw materials and finished products, and dependable service is vital to keeping them competitive, sustaining jobs, and supporting the broader supply chain that drives our local economy.

The merger presents an opportunity to strengthen rail operations with faster, more reliable service, reduced congestion, and expanded market access. Continued investment in rail infrastructure will enhance safety, create jobs, and help Mason City remain a strong, competitive community for business and growth.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so that Mason City and the North Iowa region can fully benefit from the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities it will bring—connecting our community locally, regionally, and across the globe.

Subject: Economic Development Support for Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern Merger (Docket No. FD 36873)

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As Executive Director of the Matagorda County Economic Development Corporation, serving a rural county, I am writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a critical driver of economic growth in Matagorda County and across Texas. Our industries — including agriculture, petrochemicals, manufacturing, and energy production — depend on efficient, reliable rail service to move products to domestic and global markets. In Matagorda County alone, freight rail directly supports hundreds of jobs and enables the movement of millions of dollars' worth of goods each year, making it an essential component of our regional economy.
This proposed merger has the potential to significantly enhance the competitiveness of our businesses and position our county for future growth. Specifically, it would:

- Strengthen Supply Chains: More direct routing and greater operational flexibility will reduce bottlenecks, improving reliability for shippers and manufacturers that rely on just-in-time deliveries.

- Accelerate Market Access: Reduced transit times will allow our agricultural producers, energy companies, and manufacturers to reach key markets faster, increasing their competitiveness.

- Stimulate Investment & Job Growth: A stronger, more efficient transcontinental network will encourage investment in new facilities, warehousing, and distribution centers — directly supporting local job creation and expanding our tax base.

4000 Avenue F, Suite A, Bay City, TX 77414
Phone: (979) 245-8913, Cell: (979) 476-4334

- Enhance Infrastructure & Safety: Increased capital investment in rail infrastructure and advanced technology will further improve network safety and efficiency, benefitting both businesses and communities.

This merger is not simply a corporate transaction — it is an opportunity to secure a more resilient transportation network, expand economic opportunity for rural and industrial regions like ours, and keep American freight rail globally competitive. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal and recognize its potential to deliver lasting economic benefits to our county, our state, and the national economy.

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As President of Metropolitan Community College, I see every day how strong industry partnerships drive opportunity and economic growth in our region. Reliable rail service has long been a cornerstone of that growth, and Union Pacific has played a key role in advancing not only commerce but also workforce development.

Through our partnership with Union Pacific, MCC has been able to connect students with career pathways that prepare them to contribute to Nebraska's economy. By aligning classroom learning with real-world applications, this collaboration equips students with the technical skills, confidence, and readiness to step directly into high-demand careers.

The merger represents an opportunity to build on this foundation. A stronger, more resilient rail network not only ensures reliable service for businesses and communities but also strengthens the workforce pipeline by creating new opportunities for students and future employees. Investments in infrastructure and innovation will translate into more jobs, safer operations, and enhanced competitiveness for our region.

On behalf of Metropolitan Community College, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so that our community can continue to benefit from Union Pacific's leadership in both transportation and workforce development.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I am a lifelong resident of Kirkwood and grew up on Fillmore two blocks north of the UP tracks. The railroad is why we are here as a community, founded in 1853. We are named after the Chief Engineer of the Missouri Pacific at the time the railroad was built, James P. Kirkwood. For us in Kirkwood, railroads are of critical importance for the movement of goods and people, as we have the most active passenger rail station in Missouri after St. Louis and Kansas City.

I understand that both companies have already shown a strong, long-term commitment to the communities they serve, investing a combined $300 million in philanthropic initiatives over the past five years. I know first-hand that the UP has been a generous donor to the renewal of our historic train station and we appreciate their support.

The railroad has been interwoven in this community since the beginning. I was a City Council Member, State Representative, and State Senator for this area, and served as the Senate's Majority Floor Leader and President Pro Tem for 6 of the 8 years I was in the Senate, and throughout that time believed, and still believe, that a strong, successful railroad is important for the people I represented. The UP-NS merger offers tangible, long-term benefits for Missouri's economy. For whatever it is worth, I support its approval.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a State Senator in Michigan, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

The Permian Basin produces 76% of the crude oil in Texas and just over 50% of natural gas production. The area literally fuels energy production for both our state and nation. Rail service is critical to that endeavor. We believe that this merger will help improve service, reduce delays, and improve reliability to our supply chain and greatly aid us in producing that energy that is so needed here at home and abroad.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

We write to underscore the importance of a reliable and efficient rail system to Minnesota's economy, energy sector, and small business community. Rail plays a critical role in moving goods, supporting economic development, and ensuring that our state remains connected to regional and national markets.

Because of that importance, we believe that any proposed changes to the rail network—including the potential merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern—should be given fair consideration through the Surface Transportation Board's established review process.

The issues at stake, from supply-chain reliability to infrastructure investment and long-term competitiveness, deserve a thorough evaluation based on the facts. The STB's process is designed to provide exactly that: a structured, transparent review that weighs potential benefits, risks, and impacts on stakeholders across the country.

We are confident that by allowing this process to move forward as intended, the Board will be able to determine the outcome that best supports a strong and stable transportation network. Minnesota's businesses, consumers, and energy innovators depend on a system that works, and a careful, deliberate review is essential to ensuring that outcome.

Thank you for your attention to this matter and for your continued commitment to overseeing a fair and comprehensive evaluation.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

At the Missouri Retailers Association, our mission is to support retail businesses and the customers they serve. I am writing today because I believe the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) would be extremely beneficial for the countless brick-and-mortar retailers I represent. Given that, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to consider these benefits and approve the merger.

Most retailers I advocate are not large multinational corporations. They are owned, operated, and staffed by local residents who depend heavily on freight rail for their products and supplies. With already thin margins, these small businesses are highly vulnerable to supply chain disruptions. A single delay or missed shipment can quickly put these retailers at financial risk. What they need is reliable, efficient rail systems – and that is exactly what this merger promises to deliver.

Today, UP and NS operate two major but separate networks. Their combination would create the first true transcontinental railroad, connecting more than 50,000 route miles and nearly every major U.S. port. While large industries utilize America's rail networks, retailers in particular rely on it to move inventory that is the backbone of their business. After employee wages, inventory is often the largest cost for Missouri's small businesses, which are constantly looking for ways to lower expenses and bring greater predictability to their operations.

Currently, retailers must often work with multiple rail carriers when transporting goods over long distances, and with each handoff comes delays, inefficiencies, and added costs. Every interchange and transfer consumes valuable time and resources – commodities already in short supply for the retailers I serve.

Approval of this merger would change that. A unified, coast-to-coast rail network under one operation would eliminate inefficiencies, lower logistics cost, and provide greater stability. For retailers, this means reduced expenses on one of their largest cost drivers and stronger foundations for the businesses that form the backbone of our local communities. Approving this merger is not only sound economic policy – it is prudent and necessary.

The broader impact on Missouri's economy will be substantial. Retail alone supports roughly 27% of jobs in the state. Put another way: lowering costs for an industry that sustains more than one quarter of Missouri's workforce translates directly into more hiring, higher wages, and stronger communities. And this benefit is not limited to Missouri. Nationwide, retail is the largest private-sector employer. This merger would boost retailers in every single state.

Manufacturers and suppliers that retailers rely on would also benefit. A streamlined transcontinental rail operations would connect local manufacturers to new markets, communities, and ports across the country. Retailers would gain access to a wider range of products and more resilient supply chains. Retailers would gain access to a wider range of goods and greater opportunities to grow, ultimately serving more customers with improved reliability.

Given the scale of these benefits, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger. In more than 40 years of advocating for the retail community and common-sense policy, I have rarely seen an opportunity of this magnitude – one that can simultaneously strengthen local businesses, create jobs, and drive long-term economic growth statewide and beyond.

Sincerely,

David Overfelt

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the State Representative for Missouri's District 5 – which includes the city of Hannibal and surrounding communities along the Mississippi River – I write to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS). This partnership represents a valuable opportunity to strengthen economic activity in Missouri and across the nation.

Hannibal is a river town where rail, truck, and barge traffic converge to move goods efficiently along the Mississippi. Our city has a proud and historic connection to the railroad. Early industries such as pork packing, soap and candle making, and lumber milling all relied on rail service to transport raw materials and finished products. That long-standing relationship with the railroad helped shape Hannibal into the vibrant community it is today. Now, we stand at another turning point – one where a modern, integrated rail system can once again fuel growth and opportunity for generations to come.

A streamlined railroad system would mean faster, more efficient movement of goods across ports and facilities nationwide. By reducing delays, eliminating unnecessary hand-offs, and lowering transportation costs, this merger would create a more competitive and integrated system that benefits businesses and consumers alike.

Beyond supply chain improvements, shifting more freight to rail would relieve pressure on our local infrastructure. Many neighborhoods in my district are driven on by heavy truck traffic, which takes a toll on our streets and poses safety concerns for residents. Expanding rail capacity through this transcontinental merger would reduce the number of long-haul trucks on local roads – resulting in less wear and tear, safer streets for families, and cleaner air for our communities, all while keeping commerce moving efficiently.

The UP-NS merger represents a generational investment in America's economic future. For towns like Hannibal, it means more jobs, improved infrastructure, and expanded opportunities for growth. I urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger and allow communities across the nation to realize its far-reaching benefits.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

Our organization was established in 1984 to address the decline of the paper industry in Morehouse Parish. In 2009, the International Paper Mill closed in our parish, leaving millions of acres of surplus pine timber planted for the paper industry in this region. Efficient rail service has been instrumental in developing new timber markets. As a rural parish located more than 20 miles from an interstate highway, the rail system is our competitive edge for transportation of manufactured goods. Our parish is blessed with significant rail infrastructure. In recent years, our rail infrastructure has drawn new businesses to our parish.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to strengthen connections that will deliver long-term benefits. This merger will help increase investment in rail infrastructure, ensuring faster, more dependable rail service. More efficient and expanded service areas will continue to enhance our community and provide an environment that stimulates job growth. Union Pacific has remained a strong community partner during some exceptionally challenging times.

On behalf of Morehouse Economic Development Corporation, I respectfully ask the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so we can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities it will bring. We look forward to growing our communities with improved connections to areas of the United States, adjoining countries, and ports that connect us to the world.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of The Historic Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church and our congregation, I, Rev. Dr. Nico S. Mathews, Pastor, write to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern (Docket Number: FD 36873).

Founded in 1876, Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church has stood as a beacon of faith, resilience, and service in Houston's historic Fifth Ward for nearly 150 years. Our story is one of perseverance beginning as a brush harbor, surviving relocations due to the construction of Interstate 10, and withstanding fires and storms. Yet, we remain a steadfast institution, committed to the spiritual and social uplift of our community.

For generations, families in Fifth Ward have worked for and alongside the railroads. The presence of Union Pacific in our neighborhood has not only provided jobs and stability but has also connected our community to the broader economic and cultural growth of Houston and beyond. Many of our church members and their families have been directly impacted by the opportunities the rail industry created building homes, educating children, and sustaining livelihoods through honest work on the rails.

Today, as we approach our 150th Anniversary in 2026, Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church continues to invest in education, youth development, workforce readiness, and community outreach programs that uplift underserved families. We view the proposed merger as a vital step in strengthening the infrastructure, connectivity, and long-term stability of the communities we serve. The partnership between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern will not only enhance national commerce but will also help sustain and expand the economic opportunities that historically shaped neighborhoods like Fifth Ward.

We believe that strong transportation networks create strong communities. By supporting this merger, the Surface Transportation Board has an opportunity to affirm the value of stability, growth, and investment in communities values we share deeply at Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church.

Thank you for your consideration of our voice in this matter. We respectfully urge you to approve the Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger.

With respect and appreciation,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I am writing as a community leader in East Idaho, which has a rich railroad history, and as a neighbor of the Union Pacific Railroad, which runs right in front of our institution. More importantly, I write as a community partner who has benefited from years of collaboration with Union Pacific. Through its foundation, UP has generously provided more than $50,000 in grant funds toward educational efforts at our nonprofit organization over the last several. Furthermore, my colleagues and I have found UP wonderful to work with -- a stellar corporate partner in bolstering good causes important to our community, even beyond the railroad sphere.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to strengthen UP's highly positive influence both here in our community, and to deserving communities in new markets. An expansion of UP's ability to provide responsible corporate stewardship can only bring good things.

On behalf of East Idaho, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so more communities can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities it will bring.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a member of the Utah community and staff member at the Natural History Museum of Utah, a non-profit organization in Salt Lake City, UT, I cannot speak to the proposed merger, but as Deputy Directory at the Museum — and as someone who has worked with UP representatives for nearly two decades — I do want to share firsthand experience with Union Pacific Railroad's commitment to our mission of bringing science and education programs to the people of Utah.

For many years, UP has been a valued supporter of the Museum's work. During my time on staff at the Museum, the company has provided grants that help make possible our statewide community outreach efforts as well as our youth science and mentoring programs here in the Salt Lake Valley. More than 15 years ago, as we were working to create a new Museum for the people of Utah, UP helped support our efforts by providing necessary transportation services for the raw Utah copper that would eventually form the exterior skin of our all-new facility. We are also very grateful for the volunteer service a member of their team provided as a member of our board of advisors during a critical moment in the Museum's history.

On behalf of the Natural History Museum of Utah, I respectfully request the Surface Transportation Board consider the significant positive impact Union Pacific has had on our institution and the community.

Subject: Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community leader in the Nebraska Chamber of Commerce & Industry, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses, and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency, and access to new markets. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability, and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses, and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe, and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

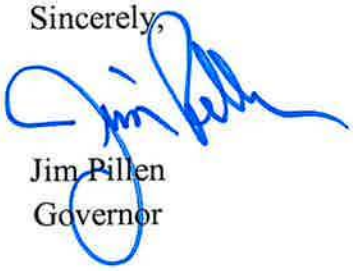
Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As Governor of the great State of Nebraska, I write to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern that will create America's first transcontinental railroad connecting 50,000 miles of rail across 43 states.

My state is honored to be the hub of the transcontinental vision Abraham Lincoln set before our country during his Presidency. Founded in 1862 as part of the Pacific Railway Act, Union Pacific has made Nebraska home for 160 years – first laying tracks in Omaha in 1865. Since those early days, freight rail transportation has become a cornerstone of our country.



None of this success would have been possible without the generations of steadfast leadership. I commend Union Pacific CEO Jim Vena and his team of leaders for their foresight and commitment to Nebraska and America. This merger is a win-win – benefitting the people of my state and building an incredible freight rail network across the United States.

In Nebraska, our workforce is second to none. This will open the door to an immense amount of growth. It will support the local economy and provide more efficient transportation of our agricultural and manufacturing goods. Nationwide, this system will increase access to domestic markets and ports and foster new development, while improving service reliability and reducing transit times.

This is about more than just railroads – it impacts every part of life in America: securing the future of our transportation network, spurring on growth, and ensuring that we compete globally.

I respectfully request the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to my extraordinary state and our great country.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Commissioners of the Nebraska Public Service Commission, we are writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses, large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a Nebraska State Senator, I am proud to represent a state whose history and prosperity are deeply connected to rail. Freight rail remains essential to Nebraska's economy, supporting agriculture, manufacturing, and logistics, while providing good-paying, union jobs that sustain thousands of families across our communities.

Union Pacific, headquartered in Omaha, has long been one of Nebraska's most significant private employers and civic partners. The company's recent agreements with rail labor organizations demonstrate a shared commitment to career-long job protection, workplace safety, and economic security for its workforce. Those commitments are critical to ensuring this merger benefits not only the companies involved but also the people who make their success possible.
For Omaha specifically, this merger represents an opportunity to strengthen our position as a logistics and economic hub for the region. The efficiencies created by an integrated rail network will attract additional investment, support growth in local industries, and enhance the city's competitiveness as a center for transportation, trade, and innovation. A strong, sustainable rail system helps position Omaha to continue growing as a place where people want to live, work, and build businesses.

The proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern offers meaningful opportunities to strengthen America's freight infrastructure. By reducing highway congestion, improving supply chain efficiency, and cutting emissions, rail continues to provide a sustainable alternative to trucking. One intermodal train can remove hundreds of trucks from the highway, improving road safety and reducing taxpayer costs from highway wear. Rail's efficiency—moving a ton of freight 500 miles on a single gallon of fuel—also represents a powerful tool for lowering emissions and building a more sustainable logistics future.

I support this merger as a step toward greater economic competitiveness, environmental responsibility, and long-term workforce stability. As the Surface Transportation Board evaluates the proposal, I urge you to ensure that these commitments to workers, to communities, and to sustainability remain central to the implementation and oversight of the merger.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger Proposal

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I am writing to express my support for the proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger, based on the significant benefits I believe it will bring to Nebraska's economy and transportation infrastructure.

Rail transportation is fundamental to Nebraska's economic success. Our corn and soybean producers, cattle feeders, and manufacturing facilities depend heavily on reliable freight rail service to move products efficiently across the country. Union Pacific has been headquartered in Omaha for decades and remains a cornerstone of our state's transportation network. I see this merger as an opportunity to strengthen and expand that vital relationship.

The operational improvements this merger promises are particularly compelling for Nebraska agriculture. More direct routing will help our grain producers get their products to Gulf Coast export terminals faster, especially during critical harvest periods when timing affects both quality and pricing. Our cattle feeding operations will benefit from improved feed grain deliveries and more efficient livestock transportation to processing facilities.

The commitment to increased infrastructure investment is especially welcome for Nebraska's extensive rail network. Many of our rural rail corridors would benefit from modernization, and the enhanced financial capacity of the merged railroad should accelerate improvements to track, signals, and grain loading facilities throughout our agricultural regions. This infrastructure investment will create jobs in communities across Nebraska and improve long-term service quality for our farmers and businesses.

I'm also encouraged by the expanded market access this merger will provide. A transcontinental network will open new shipping lanes for Nebraska's agricultural and manufactured products, potentially reducing costs and improving our competitive position in national and international markets. This is particularly important for our ethanol plants and meat processing facilities that depend on efficient transportation to distant markets.

The freight rail industry faces increasing pressure from truck transportation and supply chain disruptions. This merger positions the combined railroad to make the investments necessary to maintain rail's environmental advantages while improving service quality. For Nebraska, which moves enormous volumes of agricultural commodities by rail, supporting this consolidation helps ensure that rail transportation remains a viable, cost-effective option for our producers.

I urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger, recognizing the substantial economic benefits it will deliver to Nebraska and other agricultural states that depend on efficient freight rail transportation.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a Nebraska Senator representing a district that is home to many Union Pacific employees, I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

My support is particularly rooted in the workforce development leadership exhibited by UP. Area institutions, such as the University of Nebraska, Creighton University, and Metro Community College are all educational partners with Union Pacific. New graduates from a wide range of programs regularly hire with UP, and existing employees further their education free of charge through UP's partnership with the University of Nebraska at Omaha.

Additionally, Union Pacific is an industry leader in second-chance hiring, partnering with organizations such as RISE Academy to provide fresh starts and long career opportunities for a promising group of our neighbors.

Union Pacific most recently demonstrated its commitment to a strong workforce through its landmark September 22, 2025 agreement with SMART-TD, securing key labor jobs to support a combined railroad network. While I know this is only one union that is represented within the company, it shows the commitment of UP to work through hard conversations with the workforce and I will continue to watch and understand how this merger will impact union members.

For these reasons, I support this merger with the hope that Union Pacific's workforce development leadership could have a larger impact not only for the Omaha community, but all communities served by Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the State Senator representing Legislative District 15 in Nebraska, I am writing to express my enthusiastic support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Legislative District 15 represents Nebraska's agricultural and industrial corridor, where freight rail serves as the economic lifeline connecting our farmers, manufacturers, and businesses to markets across the nation. My district's communities, particularly Fremont and Valley, have long depended on efficient rail transportation to move agricultural products and manufactured goods to sustain our local economy and support thousands of jobs.

This proposed merger presents incredible opportunities specifically for our region and district, including:

Enhanced Port Authority Development: Fremont is currently developing a transformative port authority project that will serve as a critical inland logistics hub. The expanded transcontinental network created by this merger would make our port authority an even more attractive destination for businesses seeking direct, seamless rail connections from coast to coast. This merger would serve as a powerful recruiting beacon, positioning Fremont as a premier logistics gateway in the heart of America.

Strengthened Agricultural Competitiveness: Farmers and agricultural cooperatives would benefit from more direct routes to both East and West Coast ports, improving their ability to compete in global markets while reducing transportation costs and transit times for corn, cattle, and other agricultural products.

Industrial Growth: The current manufacturing base would gain access to an expanded supplier and customer network, encouraging new industrial development and supporting existing businesses that rely on reliable, cost-effective freight movement.

I am particularly encouraged by the historic labor agreement announced between SMART-TD, Union Pacific, and Norfolk Southern, which guarantees job protection for railroad workers throughout their careers. This unprecedented commitment demonstrates both companies' dedication to their workforce and sets a new standard for responsible corporate leadership during major industry consolidations. Such forward-thinking labor protections will ensure workforce stability while supporting the reliable freight service our communities depend upon.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the significant economic development opportunities it will create for rural and small-town Nebraska, particularly in communities like Fremont that are working to build world-class logistics infrastructure.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a State Senator for Nebraska, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Corporation and Norfolk Southern Corporation. This partnership represents a major step forward in creating America's first true transcontinental railroad. The agreement, announced on July 29, 2025, will strengthen Nebraska's economy, improve supply chain resilience, and help position the United States as a global leader in freight transportation.

Freight rail is the backbone of Nebraska's economy. It moves agricultural products, manufacturing materials, and consumer goods that sustain our communities and drive growth. Union Pacific has long been a vital partner for our state, offering reliable and cost-effective services that connect Nebraska businesses to national and international markets. The proposed merger would build on this foundation by combining more than 50,000 route miles across 43 states and linking nearly 100 ports. The result is a seamless coast-to-coast rail network unlike anything we have today.

By joining the two networks, the merger will create more direct routes. This reduces interchanges, cuts down on disruptions, and improves service reliability. Nebraska's shippers—farmers moving grain, manufacturers delivering steel and chemicals—will see faster delivery times and greater dependability. Eliminating certain interchanges also speeds up shipments, giving Nebraska businesses a stronger competitive edge at home and abroad. Nationally, this efficiency could reshape the supply chain, lowering costs and improving transit times for goods like lumber, plastics, and petrochemicals.

The combined company will also have greater capacity to invest in rail infrastructure, new technology, and advanced safety systems. Nebraska will directly benefit from this investment, especially in Omaha, which serves as a key hub. Increased investment could lead to job growth and higher wages, while positioning our state at the center of a stronger national freight system. On a broader scale, the merger would help unleash American manufacturing, generate new economic growth, and preserve union jobs across the country. With pro forma revenues expected to exceed $36 billion, there will be ample opportunity for expansion and modernization.

Rail safety is another area where this merger offers clear benefits. The integration of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern technologies—including predictive analytics and automated inspections—will help prevent derailments, reduce defects, and improve worker safety. Fewer interchanges mean fewer hazards, and with over $5.6 billion in annual infrastructure investments, both states and communities can expect to see real improvements in rail corridors.

This merger is more than a corporate transaction. It is a strategic step toward securing the future of America's freight rail system. By fostering economic growth, preserving jobs, and ensuring that U.S. industries remain competitive, the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern partnership will deliver lasting benefits to Nebraska and to the nation as a whole.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give this proposal a favorable review. Nebraska stands ready to support this merger and the opportunities it presents for a stronger and more connected future.

I can personally attest to the socio and economic impact that the Union Pacific Railroad has on my district, the Country and the world. I have resided in North Platte for 30 years, starting a successful Bank and running for election of the state legislature, the railroad system in my district has been impactful to much of the region's success. A merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern will continue to make communities like North Platte as well as the State of Nebraska and the USA a dynamic powerhouse for safe, efficient, reliable and cost-effective method to move the goods, commodities, and agricultural products through our great nation and on to the rest of the world.

The American freight rail network not only is critical to our economic growth, but it is the most sustainable mode of transportation available, helping reduce highway and interstate congestion as well as reducing emissions.

The proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern lines will offer unique opportunities to further to strengthen this viable network, all while delivering tangible benefits for the industry itself, and for the shippers, the consumers, as well as the products themselves. Other positive aspects delivering direct benefits include:

Re: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger

October 1, 2025

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I represent the people of Nebraska's 45th Legislative District in our state legislature. I am writing to you to express my wholehearted support for the merger that has been proposed between the Union Pacific Railroad and the Norfolk Southern Railway.

As an agricultural state, Nebraska has long relied on reliable, efficient transportation to bring our best-of-market goods and produce to market across the United States and the world. Because of the critical role that transportation plays in our economy, it is natural that we should also be home to some of the most important companies in the transportation industry, including Crete Carrier, Werner Enterprises, and of course the Union Pacific Railroad. This means that transportation supports our larger employment market while also directly employing many Nebraskans and providing for their way of life.

Because of the important link between Nebraska and the transportation industry, I was keenly interested when I heard about the prospect of merging Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. After hearing from constituents who strongly believe in this merger and also from others who have expressed reservations about it, it is my conclusion that this merger would benefit shipping customers, retail customers, and the many, many communities that are served by railroad routes. Better coordination between Union Pacific's extensive western routes and Norfolk Southern's routes to the east will make rail service more reliable, more efficient nationwide service. I also believe that the opportunities for infrastructure investment will make rail transportation even safer than it is today, and could open new markets for Nebraska products.

I respectfully ask that the Board give favorable consideration to the proposed merger.

Sincerely,

Senator Rita Sanders

Re: Letter of Support for the Proposed Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of NEBRASKAland DAYS, the official state celebration held annually in North Platte, Nebraska, I am writing to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern.

North Platte's history and identity are deeply connected to the Union Pacific Railroad. As home to Bailey Yard, the world's largest rail classification yard, our community has long understood the importance of a strong, reliable, and forward-thinking rail system to both local and national prosperity. The proposed UPRR - Norfolk Southern merger represents an opportunity to strengthen that foundation and position America's freight network for long-term success.

From our perspective as a statewide celebration that brings tens of thousands of visitors and millions of dollars in economic activity to the region, we recognize that efficient rail operations are vital to the businesses, industries, and communities that support events like ours. The merger would create a more connected and resilient coast-to-coast rail network, improving the flow of goods, reducing transportation costs, and enhancing economic competitiveness for Nebraska and the entire Midwest.

We respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger in the interest of continued progress, connectivity, and sustainable growth.

Thank you for your consideration.

The Honorable Patrick J. Fuchs Chairman Surface Transportation Board 395 E Street SW Washington, DC 20423

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Assemblymember of the Nevada State Legislature, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to large and small businesses. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

· Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.

· Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.

· Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.

· Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a community leader in Western Pennsylvania, reliable and safe rail service is essential for our local economy, businesses and residents. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to strengthen these connections and deliver long-term benefits. The merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion and expanded market reach for our businesses. It also means continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing safety, creating jobs and ensuring our community remains competitive in a growing economy.

The Borough of New Galilee was built as a result of railroad expansion in the late 1800's early 1900's. A large part of our history is directly connected to and was made possible by having access to the rest of the country through moving goods and people in and out of Western Pennsylvania by rail. Our Borough has a main NS rail line and 2 state roadways. We would rather see the freight on the rail line and not destroying our roads. Giving shipping companies better freight options will lessen the maintenance on our roads and make them safer for pedestrian travel.

On behalf of New Galilee Borough, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so we can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments and opportunities it will bring - connecting our communities regionally, nationally and across the globe.

Sincerely,

Mayor Mark Benes

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket # FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a long-time community partner of Union Pacific and an affordable housing provider in Houston's East End, New Hope Housing recognizes the essential role that reliable rail service plays in regional economic vitality and community well-being. Our organization develops and operates affordable, service-enriched housing near key infrastructure and employment centers where Union Pacific operates. Our support for this merger is grounded solely in its anticipated community benefits and alignment with our mission to promote housing stability.

Union Pacific has also generously supported New Hope's onsite wrap-around human services, which help residents build stability and connect with community resources. This investment reflects Union Pacific's genuine commitment to the people and neighborhoods they serve, ensuring that economic progress extends to those working to build better futures.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers the potential to further strengthen these connections. A unified transcontinental rail network could enhance supply chain efficiency, promote economic growth, and expand workforce opportunities across the communities we jointly serve to continue meaningful local impact.

On behalf of New Hope Housing, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so that our region and others can benefit from the resulting operational efficiencies, continued infrastructure investment, and expanded pathways to prosperity for working families.

As Commissioner of Public Lands of New Mexico, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. As the statewide elected official responsible for the management and development of 13 million acres of state trust land in every corner of New Mexico, this proposed merger will directly support our ability to grow our economy in New Mexico.

For all of the reasons stated above, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a state representative in the New Mexico State Legislature, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Since my election in 2018, I have served at various intervals as chair of the interim Transportation Infrastructure Revenue Committee and on our standing House Transportation, Public Works & Capital Improvements Committee. Additionally, I serve on our House Appropriations and Finance Committee and various interim committees where economic development is a prime area of consideration. In the course of my legislative work, I have travelled to the Ports of Long Beach and Los Angeles to learn more about Union Pacific operations and to study the I-40 TradePort Corridor project that originates in the ports and passes through my district. This corridor, involving both rail and trucking, seeks to establish a national cargo and investment network intentionally built to meet public and private objectives.

Thus, my colleagues and I are deeply committed to supporting the kinds of transportation initiatives that will improve the supply chain and facilitate the tremendous economic growth emerging technologies such as AI, new models of nuclear fusion, aerospace and quantum are bringing to our state, both in central and southern New Mexico.

Freight rail is a vital bedrock in our state's economy, ensuring that we safely move the goods that power our industries, support our agricultural endeavors, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has been a key transportation provider for our state, offering efficient and reliable service to businesses of all sizes. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger – Docket Number FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the State Representative for New Mexico House District 34, I write to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Nearly 500 New Mexicans are employed at Union Pacific's Santa Teresa Intermodal Terminal, located along the critical Sunset Route connecting Los Angeles to El Paso. This facility has transformed Doña Ana County into one of the fastest-growing trade and logistics hubs in the Southwestern United States, driving more than 5,000 jobs and over $1 billion in total annual economic output. Freight rail has been foundational in this success, reliably moving the goods that power our industries, support our agricultural producers, and connect our border communities to national and global markets.

The freight rail network is not only a backbone of economic growth, it is also among the most sustainable transportation systems available, reducing highway congestion, emissions, and infrastructure strain. Union Pacific's longstanding partnership with our region has proven essential to expanding opportunity while advancing efficiency and safety across the supply chain.

The proposed merger stands to accelerate and strengthen that progress. Specifically, it offers significant benefits to communities like ours and the national freight system as a whole by enabling:

- Improved Service Reliability – Enhanced route flexibility to prevent disruptions and ensure consistent delivery performance.

- Reduced Transit Times – Elimination of costly and time-consuming interchanges, helping U.S. products reach market faster.
- Strategic Infrastructure Investment – Greater capacity to modernize rail infrastructure, deploy advanced safety technology and expand network resiliency.
- Expanded Market Reach – A broader and more efficient national footprint that strengthens American competitiveness and supports long-term economic security.

This merger is not merely a corporate alignment, it is a strategic step toward securing the future of our national freight network, advancing economic development in regions like southern New Mexico, and preserving U.S. leadership in global logistics and trade.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal.

Subject: Support for the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern Merger (Docket No. FD 36873)

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a proud state senator representing southwest New Mexico, I write in strong support of the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Railway. Freight rail is the economic backbone of our region—moving agricultural products, energy resources, manufactured goods, and critical materials that keep our communities working and connected to the rest of the nation.

This merger represents a forward-looking investment in the reliability and competitiveness of America's rail system. The new transcontinental rail service will:

- Advance economic growth and strengthen national defense by improving domestic manufacturing logistics and reducing highway wear costs for taxpayers.
- Enhance U.S. competition with faster, more efficient rail service and stronger options against the North American truck network.
- Benefit customers through expanded service in underserved markets, more reliable schedules, and improved end-to-end visibility for freight shippers.
- Protect and expand jobs—as confirmed by the recent SMART-TD union agreement ensuring no job losses for unionized employees and setting a new benchmark for labor-management cooperation in our industry.

This is about more than a business transaction—it's about securing the future of American transportation. For New Mexico, it means greater opportunity for rural communities, better market access for our producers, and continued growth in good-paying railroad jobs that anchor families and strengthen local economies.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger. It reflects the very best of American enterprise—private investment, innovation, and partnership that will deliver tangible benefits to workers, shippers, and taxpayers alike.

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

This letter is in strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern railroads.

Freight rail is an economic engine for our state's economy, safely moving goods that power our industries, supporting agriculture, and connecting our communities to markets throughout the nation and beyond our borders. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service.

This proposed merger will create the first transcontinental railroad in the United States It will strengthen our economy because it will strengthen our rail network and deliver tangible benefits to shippers, consumers and communities through improved service reliability, reduced transit times, and expanded reach to new markets.

Therefore, I commend Norfolk Southern for being directly instrumental in making Western New York a better place to live and work. I wish them continued success with this new endeavor.

Please accept my best wishes. Do not hesitate to contact me if I may be of further assistance.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a member of the New York State Senate, I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses, large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers an opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger will help secure the future of our transportation network, support economic development and ensure American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a North Carolina State Representative, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. And our whole community would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could decrease the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

The North Mississippi Industrial Development Association (NMIDA) is a regional economic development entity encompassing 30 counties across North Mississippi. We understand the critical nature transportation has for economic development efforts as well as the challenges faced by many rural communities.

As the Executive Director of NMIDA, I would like to offer my support of the proposed Union Pacific – Norfolk Southern merger. I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting local economies, businesses, and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our growing industrial base which relies on freight shipments would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency, and access to new markets. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. In addition, reducing highway congestion decreases the need for highway maintenance spending, improves public safety, and quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

As the economic development landscape evolves emphasis on reduced transportation costs remains a key factor for growth. As such I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for regions like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Sincerely,

William (Skip) Scaggs

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

The North Platte Area Chamber of Commerce and Economic Development Corporation is expressing our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. We are the economic development arm of the City of North Platte and Lincoln County and represent over 600 businesses in our region. Our board of directors has unanimously endorsed the merger.

Our community has a long history with Union Pacific dating back to 1866 and specifically over the past 80 years as the home of Bailey Yard, the world's largest rail classification yard. Union Pacific remains our largest employer. We believe the merger will even strengthen North Platte's role in serving the transcontinental railroad's needs and employment. Union Pacific has also been instrumental in our development of an industrial rail park and Nebraska's first inland port authority.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and ranchers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for Nebraska, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to large and small businesses. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

We respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Subject: Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the CEO of the Northwest Native Chamber (NWNC), the largest organization dedicated to strengthening Tribal and Native American businesses across Washington, Oregon, and Idaho, I recognize the central role freight rail plays in supporting our regional economy, local businesses, and our community. Reliable rail service connects our region to broader markets and provides an efficient and dependable option for moving goods.

NWNC is one of the largest technical assistance providers for small businesses in the Pacific Northwest, supporting hundreds of entrepreneurs each year. Since 1994, we have built a strong record of expanding business capacity, increasing access to capital, and preparing companies to compete for public and private contracts. Many of the businesses we support rely on freight rail to move goods efficiently, access new markets, and participate in regional, national, and international trade. With deep regional networks and industry expertise, NWNC helps drive business growth, job creation, and economic resilience, making reliable and efficient rail service critical to the success of our communities and the broader economy.

Our business community would benefit from faster, more reliable rail service, a more efficient and resilient supply chain, and access to new markets. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the potential to deliver those improvements by providing single-line service and more direct routes that increase transportation options, expand each railroad's geographic reach, and encourage investment in infrastructure and technology. At the same time, it is critical that these benefits are realized in ways that uphold safety, sustainability, and long-term value for communities like ours. I trust that the Surface Transportation Board will safeguard those interests throughout its review.

Freight rail reduces highway congestion and emissions, making it a key part of a more sustainable and efficient transportation system. With thoughtful planning, the merger could strengthen service dependability, support local businesses, and spark opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Board to take these comments into account as it considers the proposed transaction.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a City Councilmember for O'Fallon, Missouri, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS).

Missouri already boasts a robust rail infrastructure, with approximately 3,800 miles of tracks and 20 freight railroads operating across the state. Connecting our two coasts will allow for more efficient and cost-effective single-line rail service – connecting St. Charles County and communities throughout Missouri to markets across the United States and North America. This enhanced connectivity will open up new opportunities for our local manufacturers, helping them reach more customers and expand their business opportunities.

Freight rail remains the most efficient way to move large volumes of goods over long distances. A single freight car can carry the equivalent of roughly four full truck loads, and Missouri's rail system already transports the equivalent of more than 21 million truckloads each year.

Beyond efficiency, relying too heavily on trucks for freight movement accelerates wear and tear on our roadways. Major highways – including I-70, I-64, and Route 364 – run directly through O'Fallon, placing additional strain on our local infrastructure. Expanding freight rail capacity can ease that burden by reducing congestion, limiting road damage, and keeping heavy trucks off our small neighborhood streets.

This merger isn't just about rail lines – it's about building a stronger supply chain network that will keep our communities and our economy moving. For these reasons, I urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this historic merger and pave the way for the economic opportunities it will bring to our state and our nation.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

The Oak Park Area Arts Council is the local arts council and the hub for artistic activity in the Villages of Oak Park, Forest Park and River Forest. We are writing this letter in support of the proposed Union Pacific-Norfolk Southern merger.

A dependable railroad service is very important for our local economy, businesses and residents. The proposed Union Pacific-Northern Southern merger offers an opportunity to strengthen these connections and deliver long term benefits. The population of Oak Park alone has grown by 2,000 residents since the last national census. Many of our new residents work in the city of Chicago and other western suburbs. They depend on UPRR for a comfortable, safe and quiet ride to their offices and back home at the end of day. This merger will provide faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion and that is exactly what we all want. We see and appreciate the continued investment in infrastructure-enhancing safety, creating jobs and doing things to make sure our community remains competitive in a growing economy.

On behalf of the Board of the Oak Park Area Arts Council, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so this community can enjoy the efficiencies, investments and opportunities it will bring-connecting our communities regionally, nationally and across the globe!

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

My name is Chase Levy, and I am the owner of Ocean and Oak Outfitters, a South Carolina-based hunting and fishing supply company that provides outdoor gear to sportsmen, retailers, and outfitters across the region. I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS).

For small businesses like mine, reliable shipping is critical to meeting customer expectations and keeping inventory flowing. The UP-NS merger would enhance that reliability by creating a more efficient and dependable freight network, ensuring that hunting and fishing products reach retailers and consumers on time and without costly delays.

This merger would connect key markets nationwide, helping small outdoor-focused businesses like Ocean and Oak manage inventory, reduce shipping disruptions, and better serve customers during peak seasons. Improved rail connectivity would mean faster resupplies and fewer bottlenecks-benefits that make a real difference for small companies competing in a fast-moving retail environment.

Additionally, by reducing truck congestion and creating more streamlined rail routes, this merger would lower transportation costs and improve delivery timelines for small businesses that depend on dependable, affordable logistics to stay competitive.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern, ensuring a stronger, more resilient supply chain that supports small businesses, retailers, and customers across South Carolina and beyond.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a State Representative of the Oklahoma House of Representatives, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Respectfully,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As chair of the Oklahoma House Appropriations and Budget Subcommittee on Transportation, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

This merger represents a forward-looking opportunity to strengthen our region's economic foundation and enhance the competitiveness of local manufacturers. Manufacturing represents 11% of Oklahoma's Gross State Product (GDP), making it a major economic driver. Freight rail plays a central role in this success – moving the goods that power our industries, sustain our farms, and connect our local communities to markets across the country and around the globe.

Union Pacific has long been a trusted transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses both large and small. By joining with Norfolk Southern, these companies would create America's first true transcontinental railroad – connecting our country coast to coast. For Oklahoma businesses, this would mean greater competitiveness, lower shipping costs, and reduced wear and tear on our roads from heavy truck traffic.

For manufacturers operating on tight margins, the logistics improvements will be game changing. Fewer rail transfers mean faster delivery times, better customer satisfaction, and dramatically lower shipping costs. What once required complex routing through multiple carriers will now be a straightforward and highly efficient process.

The benefits will extend beyond the business community to taxpayers. Heavy truck traffic has placed enormous strain on Oklahoma roads, costing residents millions in repairs and creating safety risks for families. A single freight train can carry the load of 300 trucks, meaning this merger could remove thousands of heavy vehicles from our highways each day while improving both safety and infrastructure longevity.

Equally important, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern share a commitment to investing in people. Between 2020 and 2025, they have dedicated a combined $300 million to philanthropic initiatives supporting workforce development, safety programs, and the creation of vibrant spaces where people want to live and work. These efforts mirror Oklahoma's own goals of building stronger, safer, and more vibrant communities.

As America works to rebuild its manufacturing base and reduce reliance on unstable foreign supply chains, a transcontinental railroad provides exactly the infrastructure backbone our economy needs. This merger is about more than connecting rail lines – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, driving economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to Oklahoma and the nation as a whole.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Agriculture and Wildlife Chair of the Oklahoma State Senate, I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.
The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.
I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Freight rail is vital to our economy, moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the country. Union Pacific has long been a trusted partner in Oklahoma, providing reliable and efficient service that drives growth while helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger represents a valuable opportunity to strengthen the nation's rail network, improve supply chain stability, and deliver meaningful benefits for shippers, workers, and communities alike. By providing more direct routes and reducing the need for interchanges, the combined network would offer faster and more reliable service. A unified system would also position the railroad for increased investment in infrastructure, technology, and enhanced safety measures. Additionally, improved connectivity would open new market opportunities for American businesses while cutting down on operational inefficiencies.

This merger supports sustainability and strengthens the transportation workforce. Each intermodal train has the potential to remove hundreds of trucks from our highways—a boost for road safety and a significant reduction in emissions. Both companies have made strong gains in safety performance, and union job protections will remain intact, continuing to support high-quality jobs that pay well above national averages.

For these reasons, I urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this proposal and recognize its broad benefits for our state and the national economy. Thank you for your consideration.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As members of the Omaha City Council, we are writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern, which would create America's first transcontinental railroad. We believe this merger offers a significant opportunity to strengthen local, regional, and national connections and deliver substantial long-term benefits.

Given Omaha's long and deep history with Union Pacific, the City is uniquely positioned to understand the positive impact this plan will have on our residents, businesses, and local economy. The expanded service offerings and faster transit times resulting from this merger will increase Omaha's market reach, better enabling people and goods to travel into and through the metropolitan area.

Furthermore, this merger represents a commitment to continued investment in critical rail infrastructure. This investment will enhance safety, create jobs, and ensure that our community remains competitive in a growing national economy. In addition to maintaining existing positions, the City anticipates the creation of new union and non-union jobs with a company that is known for investing in its workforce through competitive wages, robust benefits, university tuition assistance, and higher-than-average retirement benefits.

Therefore, the Omaha City Council respectfully urges the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so that we may take full advantage of the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities it will bring—further connecting our communities regionally, nationally, and across the globe.

Surface Transportation Board Members
395 E Street, SW

To the Members of the Surface Transportation Board:

America is entering a new era of industrial resurgence — one focused on reshoring manufacturing, strengthening supply chains, and building a more competitive and resilient national economy. But for these efforts to succeed, our country must match new industrial growth with the infrastructure capable of supporting it.

That is why One Acadiana supports the proposed merger of Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) — a historic opportunity to create America's first transcontinental railroad. By connecting more than 50,000 route miles across 43 states, this merger will unify the nation's two premier rail networks into a single, efficient system capable of transforming how goods move across the United States.

The benefits are clear and far-reaching. This merger will:

- Strengthen U.S. supply chains by eliminating costly interchange bottlenecks that slow freight and increase shipping costs;
- Enhance economic competitiveness by improving coast-to-coast connectivity for manufacturers, farmers, and energy producers;
- Reduce costs for consumers through faster, more reliable movement of essential goods; and
- Support job creation and industrial investment in regions like South Louisiana that depend on efficient freight access to reach global markets.

South Louisiana serves as a critical logistics and energy hub for the Gulf Coast — connecting ports, petrochemical facilities, and advanced manufacturers to the broader U.S. economy. A more integrated national rail system will help Louisiana companies reach customers faster, reduce transportation costs, and strengthen our position as a cornerstone of American trade and industry.

This merger represents not just a business transaction, but an investment in America's future. It will bolster our nation's competitiveness, create opportunity, and ensure that U.S. products move on American rails operated by American workers. For these reasons, One Acadiana strongly urges the Surface Transportation Board to approve the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger.

Sincerely,

Chairman Fuchs:

As Executive Director of OneMarysville, I'm writing in support of the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Rail is part of Marysville's daily life and our future. It moves the parts our manufacturers need, carries out the products our farmers grow and keeps our small businesses connected to customers and suppliers across the country.

Union Pacific has been a dependable partner for Marysville. A stronger, more integrated network with Norfolk Southern would help our community in practical, local ways:

- More reliable service for shippers. Fewer handoffs and more direct routings mean less risk of delays. For firms like Landoll and our regional ag businesses, schedule dependability matters—it keeps production lines moving, orders on time and jobs here.
- Faster transit times. Cutting interchanges shortens the trip from Marysville to key markets. That improves price, predictability and competitiveness for local manufacturers, ag cooperatives and distributors.
- Investment in safety and infrastructure. A combined railroad with a national footprint is better positioned to invest in modern track, advanced signal technology and locomotive upgrades. Those investments translate into safer operations through our community and along the U.S.-36 and U.S.-77 corridors.
- Supply chain resilience. A broader network gives shippers more options when weather, demand spikes or national disruptions occur. For a rural hub like Marysville, redundancy isn't theory; it's how we avoid missed loads and keep Main Street humming.

There's another benefit we can't ignore: rail is a cleaner, more efficient way to move freight. When more goods ride the rails, we see less heavy-truck congestion, fewer emissions and less wear on local roads. That's good for residents, visitors and city budgets alike.

In short, this merger is not just about two railroads. It's about strengthening a system that keeps Marysville competitive, supports jobs and makes our transportation network safer and more sustainable. On behalf of our businesses and residents, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

Opportunity Oregon is a cutting-edge Oregon nonprofit working to flip the script on second -chance hiring. We have helped hundreds of justice-involved people across the state of Oregon identify new work opportunities. These Oregonians want to start fresh and become productive members of society.

One of the biggest challenges for companies today is the establishment of a sustainable workforce pipeline, particularly in industries like freight rail. Union Pacific Railroad is both a recruiting and funding partner to Opportunity Oregon. Together we are working to offer justice-involved people careers in the rail industry.

In this spirit, I write to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Freight rail is a fundamental component of the Oregon state economy. Rail powers Oregon industry, safely moves our exports and supports our farmers and ranchers, connecting Oregon communities to global markets.

One in four Americans currently possess a criminal record – a sizable talent pool that is excluded from the workforce every day. As we continue to match qualified talent with leading employers like Union Pacific, we see job stability and career growth for justice-involved Oregonians as the proposed merger will help rail better compete across the global supply chain.

We understand that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on workforce development, businesses and the broader economy.

Thank you for the opportunity to share our perspective and for your leadership on this important matter.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

On behalf of Oregon's statewide chamber, Oregon Business & Industry (OBI), I write to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. OBI is a statewide association representing businesses across all 36 Oregon counties and a wide range of industries. In addition to serving as Oregon's statewide chamber of commerce, OBI is the state affiliate of the National Association of Manufacturers and the National Retail Federation. Our 1,600 member companies, more than 75% of which are small businesses, employ over 250,000 Oregonians. Many of our members depend on efficient, reliable, and cost-effective freight rail service to compete and grow in today's economy.

Freight rail is a fundamental component of the Oregon state economy. Rail powers Oregon industry, safely moves our exports and supports our farmers, connecting Oregon communities to markets everywhere. Reliable rail service helps Oregon businesses remain competitive against aggressive overseas competition and right here in North America, supporting job stability and growth, and bolstering the long-term vitality of our communities.

OBI believes the proposed merger will strengthen our essential freight rail network and deliver meaningful benefits to Oregon businesses and the broader economy, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: The combined network will offer more direct routes across the country and greater flexibility, minimizing the risk of service disruptions.
- Reduced Transit Times: By eliminating handoffs, the combined railroad will shorten delivery times, helping businesses meet customer demand more quickly and efficiently.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology, and equipment, further improving service quality, capacity, and safety.
- Expanded Reach: A broader geographic footprint will open new opportunities for Oregon manufacturers and agricultural producers to access customers nationwide and globally.

We understand that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on businesses and the broader economy.

RE: Support for the Proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Members of the Surface Transportation Board:

As a State Representative for Oregon House District 20, I write to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Rail service is an essential element of a resilient national economy. It underpins supply chain reliability, supports business operations and employment, and enables access to both domestic and international markets.

The proposed merger represents a significant opportunity to modernize and strengthen the nation's rail network. By combining operational expertise and infrastructure, this partnership is poised to improve service reliability, reduce network congestion, and expand market access. These outcomes align with national priorities for economic growth, transportation efficiency, and environmental responsibility.

I believe this action will generate meaningful benefits for Oregon's economy and the communities I represent, including Independence, Monmouth, and South and West Salem. Enhanced rail performance will support local industries, create and sustain jobs, and help ensure that Oregon's goods reach broader markets with greater speed and dependability.

Freight rail continues to serve as the most energy-efficient mode of freight transportation, offering measurable reductions in greenhouse gas emissions compared with other surface transport options. By increasing system efficiency and investment, this merger stands to further those environmental gains while reinforcing the safety and competitiveness of the national rail system.

On behalf of the constituents of House District 20, I respectfully urge the Board to approve the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger in a timely manner. This action would affirm a forward-looking vision for U.S. transportation infrastructure and provide enduring economic, environmental, and operational benefits.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As State Representative and Chair of the House Committee on Transportation, I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Expanding our multimodal transportation infrastructure, both for passenger and freight rail, is a top priority in our region.

Freight rail is critical to Oregon's economy, moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to national and global markets. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state. In addition to fueling economic growth, the American freight rail network also helps to reduce highway congestion and emissions. Combined transportation activities are the source of nearly one-third of U.S. greenhouse gas emissions, and continued expansion of sustainable options is essential to meeting our climate goals.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen our rail network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is a step forward for our transportation network, economic development and global competitiveness of American freight rail. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a community stakeholder in the Portland, Oregon area, I cannot speak to the merger but want to let you know that Union Pacific has been a generous and consistent supporter of Oregon Zoo's mission and connecting youth in our community to educational programming, career exploration, and wildlife conservation. Their support of Oregon Zoo Foundation and other non-profits allows us to serve families who might otherwise go without the resources and opportunities that positively impact their lives.

On behalf of Oregon Zoo Foundation, I respectfully ask the Surface Transportation Board to consider the positive impact of Union Pacific on our community.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Vice President of Communications and Government Affairs of the Palos Verdes Peninsula Chamber of Commerce, a nonprofit business organization in Los Angeles County, I am writing to express the Chamber's strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is essential for the economic health of our local businesses here in Southern California. By supporting our workers and farmers, freight rail allows goods to be connected effectively to markets and communities around the state and nation. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses across California. A consolidated freight network provides both economic vitality and sustainability. Looking to a future with lower-emissions, streamlining freight rail will help to meet both economic and environmental goals as it reduces highway traffic and carbon emissions.

At the Palos Verdes Peninsula Chamber, we value long term economic growth and advocacy for local businesses in our region. The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen our network and deliver tangible benefits for the daily life of our shippers, consumers, and communities in Southern California and beyond.

In order to move towards a future of resilient transportation networks, we must support economic development as well as minority communities. It is necessary to make such investments so that American freight rail keeps its competitive edge.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

The Pelican Institute is a Louisiana based think tank with a mission to research and develop policy solutions to address the most significant barriers to opportunity in Louisiana. We are a dedicated group of thought leaders conducting nonpartisan research that advances policies based on free enterprise, individual liberty, and constitutionally limited government. The Institute is proud to serve as a leading voice for free markets in Louisiana and to offer its support for the proposed merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern, creating America's first transcontinental railroad to connect over 50,000 route miles across 43 states. This move is an opportunity to transform the U.S. supply chain, improve the competitiveness of the national rail network, and create new sources of economic growth and workforce opportunity.

The proposed merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion, and expanded market reach. Offering single-line service is estimated to save between 24-48 hours in transit. It also enables continued investment in rail infrastructure to the tune of approximately $5.6 billion—enhancing safety, creating jobs, and keeping costs low, and providing new service options in underserved markets to support a growing economy.

We believe this merger aligns well with our mission to address the most significant barriers to opportunity in Louisiana and across the United States, as well as to advance solutions that will make meaningful differences in people's lives. As such, the Pelican Institute formally offers its support for the merger as outlined in Docket Number FD 36873. Thank you for your consideration.

As a former Secretary of Transportation for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania under Governor Corbett, I am writing today to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

We know that freight rail service is a cornerstone of our state's economy. The industry helps us move goods that power our industry, support our farmers, and connect our communities. This industry is not only key to our economic growth it is also important to our sustainability and decongestion efforts. By shipping goods on rail, we are taking trucks off the road, and that helps our environment and our traffic challenges.

Pennsylvania is home to a significant number of rail miles operated by Norfolk Southern. Connecting their miles and resources with Union Pacific will finally fulfil President Lincoln's dream of a transcontinental railroad. That will have significant impact on our local economy as well as the national economy.

This merger will not only connect tracks, but it will also significantly strengthen the network and deliver tangible and measurable benefits for workers, consumers, shippers, and the communities along the railway.

We will see improved service reliability thanks to more direct routs and operational flexibility. Consumers and shippers will also see reduced transit times through the elimination of interchanges. The combined companies will also be able to use their efficiency savings to reinvest in the company and infrastructure.

The merger is about more than just commerce. It is also about the Pennsylvanians who make a living working at these railroads. To that end the protections that have been put into place for workers through the negotiation between the companies and SMART-TD has created certainty and allowed workers to rally around the merger.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the former chairman of the House Transportation Committee of the State of Pennsylvania, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

We learned during my time in the legislature that freight rail is a cornerstone of our states economy. It safely moves products that power our industry, delivers our food, and makes delivering consumer products efficient. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about the working men and women both working on the lines and those that depend on the goods delivered for their livelihood. I must commend Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern for their efforts to get the transit workers union on board with the merger, and as a champion of working families I am confident this will be a win-win for all involved.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a State Representative representing Cumberland County, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy. We depend on rail to safely move goods that support our industries and connect our communities. Norfolk Southern has been a key partner for our state and region and we are excited at the potential for the Union Pacific partnership. Norfolk Southern operates many short rail lines in our county.

Freight also is a sustainable way to move goods across the country. Taking large trucks off the road is not only good for the environment, but also for congestion issues our communities often face.

Transportation is about more than just delivering packages or parts – it is a driver of economic development. A rail system that connects the entire country will only enhance the ability of our companies to deliver their goods across the nation. That is good for small businesses, farmers, consumers, and workers.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the State Representative for the 90th Legislative District, representing the southern half of Franklin County, PA, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach, and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community, which relies on freight shipments, would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency, and access to new markets. Additionally, our whole community would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could decrease the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability, and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. Reducing highway congestion decreases the need for highway maintenance spending and improves quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses, and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally. Additionally, as agriculture is a major aspect of our economy in south-central Pennsylvania, I also ask that you ensure that any merger will not have negative impacts on our farmers and food producers, as they heavily rely on the rail network to feed our nation.

Very truly yours,

RE: Support for Union Pacific Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association (PMA), we write in strong support the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. PMA is the statewide, nonprofit trade organization that represents the manufacturing sector here in our commonwealth; generating over $106 billion annually in state gross product, employing more than 560,000 hardworking Pennsylvanians on the plant floor, and supporting supply, distribution, and retail networks that sustain millions of additional Pennsylvania jobs.

Manufacturing and rail transportation are deeply interconnected. Our members depend on reliable, efficient, and affordable rail service to move raw materials and finished goods across the nation. The unification of these two legacy rail carriers will strengthen supply chain reliability, improve network efficiency, and expand capacity. This merger stands to deliver a win-win outcome for both business and consumers through enhanced service quality, reduced congestion, and new opportunities for industrial growth.

From a historical perspective, this merger also fulfills the vision first set forth by President Abraham Lincoln when he signed the Pacific Railroad Act of 1862. His intent was to physically and economically connect the nation from coast to coast to unite communities and enable commerce. More than 160 years later, the proposed merger continues that mission by modernizing and integrating the rail system in a way that reflects the vision of a connected America.

Ultimately, this is about securing the future of our nation's transportation infrastructure, strengthening the industrial backbone of the U.S. economy, and ensuring that American freight rail remains the most advanced, safe, and competitive system in the world.

For these reasons, PMA respectfully urges the Surface Transportation Board to support the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Sincerely,

David Taylor

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I write in support of the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

This merger represents a generational opportunity to strengthen our national economy. It will unlock more than $5 billion in annual investment in safer, more resilient infrastructure, creating jobs and driving long-term economic growth. These improvements will not only modernize our rail system but also enhance safety and reliability across the board.

For working families, small businesses, and industries across Pennsylvania, from agriculture and energy to manufacturing and logistics, this merger means more efficient transportation, lower shipping costs, and greater access to national and global markets. A more unified and technologically advanced rail network will reduce supply chain bottlenecks, helping to lower prices and improve competitiveness for American-made goods.

Transportation is more than a system of tracks and trains — it's a backbone of economic opportunity. This merger will help ensure that backbone is strong, safe, and built for the future.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. I believe this merger will help with providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. I am confident their impending partnership with Union Pacific will only make this partnership stronger.

I believe that this potential merger is win for consumers, businesses, and our Commonwealth. Consumers can count on their goods being delivered faster and cheaper through a sustainable transportation network. It will reduce traffic in busy suburbs and give our rural farmers a coast-to-coast market. Business will see an intra continental railroad that President Lincoln dreamed of many years ago. And our state will have a reliable partner that will increase investment in our Commonwealth.

And perhaps one of the biggest winners in this entire deal are the workers. Where many workers fret about the implications of a merger like this, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern have made a pledge to the existing workforce so convincing that SMART-TD, the labor union representing the workers, has endorsed the deal.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Sincerely,

James Cawley

Subject: Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community leader in Pinal County, Arizona I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

Our business community would benefit from faster, more reliable rail service, a more efficient and resilient supply chain, and access to new markets. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to deliver those benefits by providing single-line service and more direct routes that increase transportation options, expand each railroad's geographic reach and encourage investment in infrastructure and technology. At the same time, it is important to ensure these benefits are achieved in a manner consistent with the need for safety, sustainability and long-term benefits to communities like mine, and I trust that the Surface Transportation Board will safeguard those benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Board to take these comments into account in its consideration of the proposed transaction.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community stakeholder and non-profit organization at the University of Utah, Pioneer Theatre Company cannot speak to the proposed merger, but do want to share firsthand experience with Union Pacific Railroad's commitment to our mission and meaningful support.

Union Pacific's general operating support directly enhances our mission of creating a wide range of exceptional theatre that explores the breadth of the human experience—challenging the intellect, stirring emotions, igniting imaginations, and encouraging conversation. PTC's season runs from September through May and we produce six productions each year serving over 55,000 theatre patrons.

We are proud to offer a robust educational and community engagement program that reaches thousands each year. Our Student Matinee Program features two dedicated performances for every production, welcoming roughly 6,000 students from schools across Utah to experience live theatre—often for the very first time. We also engage nearly 4,000 University of Utah students annually through deeply discounted tickets, ensuring that the next generation of artists and audiences can access world-class theatre right on campus.

Beyond the university, our community outreach efforts include partnerships with organizations including five chapters of the Boys & Girls Clubs of Salt Lake, providing opportunities for underserved youth to connect with the arts in meaningful ways. In addition, our Pay What You Can initiative, Curtain Call for All, welcomed 847 patrons in its first full year, removing financial barriers and expanding access so that everyone in our community can share in the magic of live theatre.

Union Pacific's support of PTC's general operations helps make all of this possible, ensuring we can continue providing transformative experiences that strengthen our community and expand access to the arts.

On behalf of Pioneer Theatre Company, I respectfully ask the Surface Transportation Board to consider the significant and positive impact that Union Pacific has on our community.

The Honorable Patrick J. Fuchs
Chairman

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a small business owner, father raising my family in Sherwood, and member of the Pulaski County Quorum Court for more than a decade, I have seen firsthand how critical Union Pacific has been for the economic success of Pulaski County and central Arkansas. Given that hundreds of communities can say the same, I strongly support the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

With the North Little Rock Yard in my backyard, Union Pacific has long been part of our community's identity and growth. Generations of skilled workers have built their careers there, and the railyard continues to serve as a cornerstone of economic strength for Sherwood, North Little Rock, and the greater metropolitan region. When Union Pacific invests, our residents feel it—from good-paying transportation and supply-chain jobs to the many secondary businesses that rely on a stable, efficient freight network.

The merger with Norfolk Southern represents a forward-looking step to ensure that the network remains modern, competitive, and capable of meeting the demands of a growing economy. Enhanced route efficiency, improved freight fluidity, and long-range investment will position central Arkansas to continue attracting jobs and industry, allowing small businesses and the families behind them to thrive.

Please approve this merger and continue supporting communities that depend on strong rail service to power local opportunity.

Sincerely,

Luke

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

During my service in Pulaski County, I've witnessed how infrastructure choices influence daily life. Reliable rail access is a subtle but vital factor that supports our small businesses and the industries that sustain our local economy, helping Pulaski County advance. The proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern represents a chance to strengthen that connection—bringing greater efficiency, expanded capacity, and more dependable service to the industries and employers that sustain our residents.

The growth in Pulaski County relies on strategic investments, and transportation plays a significant part in linking local businesses to opportunities. Union Pacific has contributed to Arkansas's development by investing in jobs, safety, and infrastructure. Norfolk Southern has a solid reputation for service and reliability, and these companies, combined, would strengthen the rail network —not just in supporting Pulaski County but also industries nationwide.

This merger focuses on community stability and future growth rather than just corporate size. Improved rail service helps farmers transport their harvests, allows manufacturers to reach markets more quickly, and helps small businesses compete regionally.

For these reasons, I believe the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger is a step toward building a stronger, more resilient Central Arkansas economy, and I'm proud to support it on behalf of Pulaski County's residents.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a Commissioner at the Railroad Commission of Texas (RRC), I know what keeps this country running—reliable, common-sense energy and infrastructure that powers and connects Americans. While the RRC no longer regulates railroads, our mission today is just as vital by safeguarding Texas' oil and gas industry—the beating heart of America's energy independence. Our state is the backbone of America's energy independence, and it's our railroads that help connect that success every day.

The Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger isn't just paperwork; it's a chance to bolster America's supply chain, ease burdens on hardworking families, and keep energy flowing without more red tape. Better rail connectivity means smoother, safer deliveries from our refineries, petrochemical plants, and ports to markets across the country—all while decreasing highway traffic and lowering everyday costs.

When Texas leads, America wins. This merger will strengthen our industrial base, secure our national energy future, and grow good jobs right here at home. I urge the Surface Transportation Board to let this partnership move forward—for Texas, for American families, and for our energy and economic security.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As advocates for the rail industry in Oregon over the last two decades, Rainmakers Government Strategies believes that the proposed merger of Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Railroad will benefit both customers and communities in Oregon and address many of the issues voiced by legislators over the years.

We often hear from public policy leaders concerns about Oregon industry accessing rail. The merger has the potential to not only move more commerce nationwide, but also improve short line railroad access to containers and movement of small industry goods. By improving the main artery of rail with the merger, the inevitable outcome is the arterioles, the small railroads feeding to main lines, become more efficient, stronger and engaged. When Union Pacific grows, so too will Oregon's short lines making for a holistic improvement for our area and our economy, creating a more accessible, sustainable, and lower-cost supply chain for manufacturers and consumers. In 2024, Union Pacific moved more than 438,000 rail cars in and out of our state - I believe the merger will lead to me reporting exponential increases in that number.

We also hear from legislators concerns about congestion, reliability and safety. The merger has the potential to expand technology and infrastructure investments that will enhance service and security. I am proud to tell public policy makers in Oregon that from 2020-2024, Union Pacific invested $431 million strengthening Oregon's transportation infrastructure. At the same time, Union Pacific invested in the state's firefighting and spill equipment, funded training for responders statewide, and engaged with legislators to create a new program to respond to environmental impacts along rail lines. These types of investments and dedication to our state safety have been proven and will only grow if the transcontinental connection occurs.

While advocating for rail can be hard and, as you know, usually entails calls with complaints, not compliments, I foresee the growth of the transcontinental rail as potentially quieting concerns as infrastructure, safety, reliability and access are all improved with the combination of expertise, funds and technology that come from the merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern railroads.

Best,

Subject: Strong Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I am writing to express RISE's enthusiastic support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. As the Founder and CEO of RISE, a Nebraska-based nonprofit dedicated to breaking generational cycles of incarceration, I have witnessed firsthand the transformative power of second-chance employment opportunities—opportunities that Union Pacific has consistently provided to our community.

For years, RISE has maintained a strong partnership with Union Pacific, built on shared values of redemption, opportunity, and community investment. Union Pacific stands apart in their industry for their commitment to second-chance hiring, opening doors for individuals who have been justice-involved and helping them rebuild their lives through meaningful employment. This partnership has resulted in life-changing career opportunities for our program graduates, not only here in Nebraska but throughout Union Pacific's extensive network where they actively hire system-impacted individuals.

Beyond employment opportunities, Union Pacific has demonstrated genuine investment in our mission through volunteer engagement and philanthropic support. Their team members regularly contribute their time and expertise to RISE programming, understanding that successful reentry reduces recidivism and strengthens our entire community.

The proposed merger with Norfolk Southern represents an unprecedented opportunity to expand these life-changing employment pathways. By combining operations, this merger would extend Union Pacific's proven second-chance hiring practices across Norfolk Southern's footprint, potentially creating hundreds of additional opportunities for justice-involved individuals seeking to rebuild their lives. For the populations we serve, access to stable, well-paying employment in the rail industry can be the difference between successful reintegration and a return to the justice system.

From an economic development perspective, the merger promises significant benefits for communities across both networks. Enhanced operational efficiency, improved service reliability, and strategic infrastructure investments will strengthen the backbone of commerce that our businesses and residents depend upon. The combined entity's ability to offer more competitive service options and expanded geographic reach will attract new business development and support existing enterprises in ways that neither railroad could achieve independently.

The efficiencies gained through this merger will also translate into environmental benefits through reduced truck traffic, lower emissions per ton-mile of freight moved, and more strategic routing that minimizes congestion in our communities.

On behalf of RISE and the thousands of individuals we serve annually, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger expeditiously. The combination of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern will create not only a more efficient transportation network but also expanded pathways to redemption and economic stability for some of our society's most vulnerable populations.

Thank you for your consideration of this important matter. I would welcome the opportunity to discuss how this merger could benefit justice-involved individuals and our communities. I can be reached at 402-981-4119 or jeremy@seeusrise.org.

Sincerely,

Jeremy Bouman

Re: Rochester Area Chamber Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Chairman Fuchs,

The Rochester Area Chamber of Commerce represents a vibrant, diverse economy in Southeast Minnesota that is home to world-renown businesses and innovators like Mayo Clinic. Our organization represents more than 1,200 businesses and organizations in the Rochester region, providing workforce resources, business advocacy, and connections to support and enhance the success of area employers.

Having a strong, resilient and diverse economy in our region and across Minnesota means recognizing the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect Minnesota to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. The Southeast Minnesota business community and our state as a whole would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

We respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Regarding the Proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern Merger

The Rocky Mountain Railroad Heritage Society, Inc. is dedicated to the preservation and restoration of railroad history in the Rocky Mountain West. We also are champions of maintaining and improving the current future of rail transportation within the North American rail network market. One might wonder what connection would link the three themes together, the past, present and future.

A merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern will ensure that for the first time in our history there is a railroad operation that spans the continental United States. Such a historic alliance to form what really is America's first transcontinental railroad will create such a strong railroad operation unparalleled in the long history of railroads and railroaders.

It will create jobs, create new customer bases, and help improve the economic environment in a number of ways. Trains will operate over more than 50,000 rail miles across three quarters of our country. It will link in excess of approximately 100 ports, this merger definitely will enhance the U.S. supply chain which in turn will create unparalleled new economic growth, and that will initiate sustainable organization nationwide. His merger if approved will also make rail shipments move at a faster delivery time, which can only help but create increased revenue for the railroad's customers, which in turn will create economic growth for the communities impacted by this merger.

The Rocky Mountain Railroad Heritage Society, Inc. requests the Federal Railroad Administration approve this merger as it is in the best interest of the United States to create such an entity for the reasons given above.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Sacramento Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce and our member businesses throughout the six-county Capital Region, we are writing to express strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

The Sacramento Metro Chamber leads with a collective voice—bringing members together to create opportunities, deliver essential services, and advance solutions that foster a thriving regional economy. Efficient goods movement is vital to the Capital Region's economy, supporting logistics, agriculture, food and beverage, manufacturing, and other key industries that rely on dependable rail service to reach markets nationwide and globally. Dear Chairman Fuchs and Members of the Surface Transportation Board,

On behalf of the Sarpy County Chamber of Commerce and our Board of Directors, I am writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern. As the leading advocate for business growth and economic development in Sarpy County, Nebraska, we recognize the vital role that rail infrastructure and freight connectivity play in sustaining and expanding both our regional and national economies.

Union Pacific Railroad has long been an integral part of Nebraska's economic landscape—providing efficient, reliable transportation for goods, supporting local jobs, and contributing to the success of countless industries across the Midwest. Partnering with Norfolk Southern—an equally respected and innovative rail carrier—presents a significant opportunity to strengthen the national supply chain, enhance network efficiency, and improve service reliability for shippers across multiple markets.

For Sarpy County businesses, this merger will help create a stronger, more resilient rail network that supports sustainable growth by reducing highway congestion, lowering emissions, and improving the overall flow of commerce across America—with Sarpy County at the heart of that progress.

The Sarpy County Chamber of Commerce encourages the Surface Transportation Board to consider the broad economic, environmental, and logistical advantages of this merger. We believe this partnership will create a more competitive, connected, and forward-looking rail system—one that strengthens American industry and benefits communities like ours that depend on strong transportation networks.

Thank you for the opportunity to provide input on this important matter. The Sarpy Chamber stands ready to support initiatives that promote growth, innovation, and collaboration within our nation's critical infrastructure.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Vice Chair of the Sarpy County Board of Commissioners, I write in support of the proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger and the positive impact it will have on Sarpy County and the surrounding region.

Sarpy County is the fastest-growing county in Nebraska and a key logistics hub for the region. Our continued economic success depends on efficient freight movement and reliable rail infrastructure. This merger offers the opportunity improve service reliability, reduce congestion, and support long-term investment in rail infrastructure.

Enhanced rail capacity supports job creation, reduces truck traffic on local roadways, and helps our industries compete effectively in an expanding economy. These benefits directly align with Sarpy County's commitment to fostering sustainable growth, improving transportation safety, and enhancing regional competitiveness.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so we can realize the efficiencies, infrastructure investments, and opportunities it will bring to Nebraska.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community leader in Sedalia and Pettis County, Missouri, reliable rail service is essential for our local economy, businesses and residents. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to strengthen these connections and deliver long-term benefits.

The merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion and expanded market reach for our businesses. It also means continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing safety, creating jobs and ensuring our community remains competitive in a growing economy.

With the establishment of the Sedalia Rail Industrial Park in 2020, Sedalia and Pettis County are well positioned to further support the growth of rail-served industrial sites. In 2017, Nucor Steel announced their plans to build a new $250M rebar mill in Sedalia, serving as our anchor tenant to the Park. Union Pacific has been pivotal in the Park's design, development and launch through the first phase of development. The rail and infrastructure investment which has been made to date in the Park opens up another 2,000 acres for development which we have dedicated to rail-served customers so the viability and capacity of Union Pacific is critical for development.

On behalf of the Economic Development Sedalia Pettis County Board of Directors, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so we can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments and opportunities it will bring - connecting our communities regionally, nationally and across the globe.

Sincerely,

Jessica Craig

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Chief Executive Officer of SERJobs Gulf Coast, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Shreveport Regional Arts Council (SRAC), I write in strong support of the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. As a proud beneficiary of Union Pacific's longstanding commitment to community enrichment, particularly through its investment in arts and culture, SRAC has witnessed firsthand the power of strong, community-minded infrastructure partners.

Union Pacific's generous support has helped SRAC deliver high-quality arts programming, expand access to arts education, and celebrate the creative voices of our region. Their investment has been more than financial. It has demonstrated a belief in the value of vibrant communities and the cultural infrastructure that supports them.

The proposed merger represents an opportunity to further that legacy. Improved rail service, reduced congestion, and expanded market reach will not only enhance the business environment of our region, but also support the broader cultural ecosystem by enabling economic growth, workforce development, and regional connectivity. Importantly, continued investment in rail infrastructure will support job creation and public safety, helping communities like Shreveport remain competitive in a growing global economy.

At SRAC, we believe that a thriving transportation network and a thriving arts community go hand in hand. Each strengthens the other, building stronger, more resilient cities. We are confident that this merger will deliver long-term benefits for our community and others across the country.

We respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger, and help deliver the efficiencies, infrastructure investment, and regional opportunities it promises.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

President Calvin Coolidge once said, "The railroads can do more for the welfare of the wage-earner, agriculture and industry than any other single agency." Our local economy here in Simi Valley continues to illustrate the wisdom of that observation.

The Simi Valley Chamber of Commerce represents more than 600 businesses in Southern California. Our community serves as a rail throughline into Ventura County and connects the Port of Hueneme to the City of Los Angeles. We are an important industrial hub for multiple sectors, and when we speak on matters of transportation and commerce, we do so on behalf of the full breadth of our local business community. Few understand the practical impact of this proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger more than the employers and industries that depend on freight movement every day.

Freight rail has long supported Southern California's economy by keeping goods moving efficiently and affordably. It supports workers, farmers and manufacturers while easing pressure on our highways and improving environmental outcomes. Strengthening this network will bring benefits not only to shippers and consumers, but to communities throughout the region that rely on dependable transportation infrastructure.

The proposed merger offers a meaningful opportunity to enhance the reliability and competitiveness of the freight system that California businesses depend on. It will help secure the long term health of our transportation network and support continued economic development for the industries that call our region home.

For these reasons, we encourage the Surface Transportation Board to give the proposal full and favorable consideration. As President Coolidge observed, railroads remain one of the greatest single forces for economic welfare. This merger gives us a chance to reinforce that strength for the future.

Sincerely,

Anthony Angelini

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the Mayor of Sioux City, Iowa, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

Our business community would benefit from faster, more reliable rail service, a more efficient and resilient supply chain, and access to new markets. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to deliver those benefits by providing single-line service and more direct routes that increase transportation options, expand each railroad's geographic reach and encourage investment in infrastructure and technology. This merger may strengthen the opportunity for Sioux City to grow industry in our own rail yard located in Southbridge Business Park that is operated by the city and serviced by Union Pacific. At the same time, it is important to ensure these benefits are achieved in a manner consistent with the need for safety, sustainability and long-term benefits to communities like Sioux City, and I trust that the Surface Transportation Board will safeguard those benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

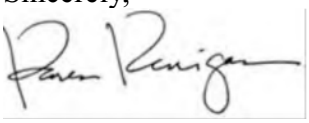
Re: Supporting Small Business Growth and Supply Chain Reliability Through the UP–NS Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

The Small Business and Entrepreneurship Council (SBE Council) is dedicated to protecting small businesses and promoting entrepreneurship. Small businesses are the backbone of the American economy, and the proposed rail merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) stands to significantly benefit Main Street America.

Our small businesses help power innovation, drive local job creation, and strengthen local communities across the country. A more efficient and competitive rail system created by the UP-NS merger will lower costs, improve supply chain reliability, and expand market access for entrepreneurs — and it is why we write to you today to express our full support of the transaction.



Access to affordable, dependable transportation is critical for small firms that move products, source materials, and serve regional and national customers. The combined UP–NS network will reduce bottlenecks, increase connectivity between markets, and provide small businesses with greater shipping options and predictability. These efficiencies will boost efficiency and help lower operating costs, which will allow entrepreneurs to reinvest in growth, innovation, and jobs.

The merger will enhance competition across transportation modes, providing small firms with a more affordable and efficient alternative to modes that face labor shortages and add to congestion on roads and highways. By creating a seamless coast-to-coast rail network, the combined carrier will give smaller manufacturers, farmers, and distributors more efficient access to markets that are difficult or cost-prohibitive to reach. Increased network efficiency and route integration will also help stabilize shipping prices and delivery times, which are critical for small businesses that operate with tight margins and limited inventory flexibility.

We encourage the Surface Transportation Board to recognize the significant benefits this merger will deliver to America's small business community and to the broader U.S. economy. A unified national rail network will compliment and enhance our existing system, and represents an important step forward in strengthening supply chains and building a more resilient, opportunity-driven economy for all.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As the owner of businesses located in Camp Hill and the central region of Pennsylvania, I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Norfolk Southern (NS) and Union Pacific (UP). Our region serves as a major regional hub for Norfolk Southern and is home to a diverse manufacturing base – from food and beverage production to precision metalworking – making this merger a significant economic opportunity for our community and the broader region.

Situated along the banks of the Susquehanna River, NS's Harrisburg rail facilities are among the busiest intermodal rail centers on the East Coast, with over 637,000 containers and trailers passing through Harrisburg and Rutherford Yards each year. By establishing the nation's first seamless coast-to-coast rail network, this merger will enhance the efficiency and affordability of freight rail, encouraging more businesses to choose this safer and more sustainable mode of transportation. The resulting increase in freight traffic through our intermodal facilities will stimulate job growth in the rail sector and strengthen our region's position as a prime location for manufacturers seeking reliable, accessible transportation infrastructure.

Beyond economic opportunities, the merger promises meaningful daily benefits for our residents. Increased rail efficiency will reduce the number of long-haul trucks on our highways and bridges – vehicles that place significant strain on shared infrastructure and pose safety risks to our communities. Alleviating highway congestion will save taxpayers time and money while making our roads safer for everyone.
On behalf of my community and the many people employed in my organizations, I strongly support this merger and the economic opportunities it represents for our community. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board will approve it without delay.

Thank you for your consideration.

State of South Carolina

The Honorable Patrick J. Fuchs - Chairman

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

My name is Blake Sanders, and I have the privilege of representing South Carolina's 9th District of in the State House of Representatives. I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed railroad merger between Norfolk Southern (NS) and Union Pacific (UP). This merger represents a significant opportunity to strengthen our national supply chains, expand economic opportunity, and enhance America's competitiveness in global trade. With two Class I carriers, a diverse network of rail-dependent industries, and access to key inland and coastal ports, South Carolina is uniquely positioned to thrive in this new era of railroad connectivity.

Recently, I visited the Inland Port Greer train terminal outside of Greenville where I witnessed firsthand the critical role railroads play in sustaining our state's economy. At the intermodal facility, trains and trucks worked in seamless coordination to move essential goods that thousands of my constituents depend on each day. In today's just-in-time economy, efficiency and collaboration are crucial. By reducing unnecessary interchanges, the proposed merger could lower transportation costs for both manufacturers and consumers, improving supply chain performance across the board.

Furthermore, an expanded and integrated rail network would open new markets for South Carolina manufacturers – particularly in regions and countries that have previously been too costly to reach. At Inland Port Greer, trains arrive daily carrying containers from the Port of Charleston. Should the merger proceed, our state's manufacturers will gain greater access to markets across the Western United States and beyond, enabling them to reach international buyers more efficiently and at lower shipping costs.

As a member of the Medical, Military, Public and Municipal Affairs Committee, I also recognize the potential safety benefits of this merger. In 2024, the rate pf trucking-related injuries was 17 times higher than those involving rail. As you consider the economic implications of this merger, I encourage you to also evaluate how a shift from highway to rail freight could reduce accidents, ease pressure on emergency services, and make our roads safer for everyone.

For these reasons, I urge your careful and favorable consideration of the NS–UP merger, which I believe will deliver lasting benefits for South Carolina, our nation's economy, and the safety of our communities.

Sincerely,

Subject: Comments on Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a member of the South Carolina House of Representatives, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community that relies on freight shipments would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. And our whole community would benefit from a more efficient rail network. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. And reducing highway congestion decreases the need for highway maintenance spending and improves quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As State Representative for South Carolina's 43rd District, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS). As a lifelong farmer and a proud public servant, I've seen for myself just how deeply South Carolina's prosperity depends on a strong, reliable transportation systems that connect our agricultural communities to new opportunities.

This merger comes at an important time for our state. Agriculture remains one of South Carolina's fastest-growing industries, expanding by 40 percent between 2010 and 2020. Today, it contributes more than $51.8 billion annually to our economy and supports over 259,000 jobs. Agriculture is not only the backbone of South Carolina's economy – it's a driving force for our state's future growth.

Farmers across our state rely on affordable, efficient transportation to bring their crops to market, especially in rural areas where dependable rail access is essential to staying competitive. A unified UP-NS rail network would strengthen these connections by linking producers and businesses directly to major ports and new markets.

This integration will create a more efficient, coast-to-coast supply chain – reducing costs for businesses and consumers alike, enhancing South Carolina's competitiveness, and supporting lasting growth for communities across the state and nation. With fewer rail interchanges, freight can move more efficiently across the network, cutting transit times and minimizing handling delays. Greater reliability will help businesses plan with more confidence and maintain consistent delivery schedules.

As I have often said, we must do everything possible to preserve agriculture in South Carolina for the next generation. This merger represents a vital investment in that future. It will help ensure that our farmers, producers, and local industries remain competitive in an increasingly global marketplace.

I urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the broad economic and transportation benefits it will bring to South Carolina and the nation as a whole.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the State Representative for District 71, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS). This merger will strengthen our state's economy by improving business efficiency, generating better-paying jobs, and building more dependable supply chains.

A good job is the foundation of the American Dream, and I have long supported policies that help entrepreneurs, small businesses, and workers thrive. South Carolina's position as the nation's leader in economic growth – and among the highest in personal income growth – proves that smart government policy can foster innovation and opportunity. A modern, efficient and connected rail system is essential to sustaining that momentum.

Each year, South Carolina moves approximately 60 million tons of goods by rail. Uniting two of our nation's most important railroads will make this freight movement more affordable and efficient. Our Statewide Rail Plan recognizes that the Midlands region, including the communities I represent, serves as a vital link between our ports, manufacturers, and rural economies. Strengthening rail connectivity will support continued growth by connecting our factories and farms more directly to national and global markets. The result will be more business opportunities, fewer supply chain disruptions, and a stronger competitive edge for South Carolina and the nation in an increasingly interconnected world.

From a safety standpoint, greater rail efficiency also means fewer trucks on our highways, reduced congestion, and smoother, safer roads for South Carolina families. As someone committed to improving our transportation infrastructure – from major projects like Malfunction Junction to local road repairs across our communities – I recognize that shifting more freight to rail helps preserve taxpayer-funded infrastructure and extends the life of our roads statewide.

I encourage the Surface Transportation Board to approve the UP–NS merger so we can continue moving South Carolina – and America – toward a stronger, more competitive future. A unified coast-to-coast railroad represents progress for our businesses, our transportation system, and our nation.

Sincerely,

Nathan Ballentine

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As State Senator and resident of Greenville County, South Carolina, I've seen firsthand how our region has grown into a thriving hub for manufacturing, small business, and logistics. This growth is a testament to our community leaders' dedication, work ethic, and innovation to getting things done. That success brings challenges on our roads, infrastructure, and freight systems. For this reason, I support the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS). This partnership will be an important step forward for the Upstate and for South Carolina as a whole.

The merger would strengthen the rail network that serves our region and provide a more efficient, safe, and reliable way of moving freight. Fewer trucks on crowded highways would mean less congestion, reduced wear and tear on local roads, and a more balanced and sustainable transportation system. Anyone who has driven I-85 through Greenville County knows how congested the highway has become – and how dangerous that congestion can be.

Freight traveling by truck continues to increase, and congestion has become a daily reality. Each shipment that can move by rail instead would improve safety, reduce congestion, and extend the life of our infrastructure. The merger would create a more coordinated rail system with greater capacity, connecting businesses in Greer, Spartanburg, and across the Upstate to new markets.

In addition, unified operations and upgraded technology would improve safety, maintenance, and scheduling. These enhancements will protect workers, communities, and the environment while keeping goods moving efficiently. For example, UP distributed more than $4 million to non-profit organizations focused on safety, and NS recently achieved an impressive injury- free milestones.

The freight industry is changing rapidly as trucking companies adopt automation and cutting-edge technologies. Without comparable improvements in rail efficiency, shipping costs will rise and place small and mid-sized companies that rely on rail at a disadvantage. A 2020 analysis showed that a 34 percent reduction in trucking costs could reduce intermodal rail traffic by more than half, putting additional strain on supply chains.

Approving this merger will allow rail to modernize, operate more efficiently, and provide our business community with a dependable and cost-effective way for their operations, and as a result, remain competitive. This is a pivotal opportunity to strengthen South Carolina's role as a logistics and economic hub and leader in the Southeast.

The merger would reduce congestion, improve safety, protect infrastructure, and expand access to new markets for South Carolina businesses. These benefits are too significant to overlook and for these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the proposed merger. It is a responsible investment in efficiency, safety, and continued economic growth for both our state and our country.

Sincerely,

Jason Elliott

RE: Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I want to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Subject: Support for Norfolk Southern-Union Pacific Transcontinental Railroad Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community leader in Southwest Detroit, Michigan, I know that reliable rail service is essential for our local economy, businesses, and residents. Southwest Detroit Environmental Vision (SDEV) has long partnered with the Norfolk Southern Livernois Intermodal Facility, and we view the proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger as a crucial opportunity to strengthen these connections and deliver vital, long-term community benefits.

The merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced regional congestion, and expanded market reach for our local businesses. Critically, it also represents a continued commitment to investment in rail infrastructure—enhancing safety, creating new jobs, and ensuring our community remains competitive in a growing economy.

For the Southwest Detroit Environmental Justice Community, the most important commitment is the project to modernize and expand capacity at the Livernois Intermodal Facility and nearby roadway intersections. SDEV and Norfolk Southern have partnered specifically on this effort, which is the key uncompleted project sought as part of the Detroit Intermodal Freight Terminal (DIFT) Environmental Impact Statement's Record of Decision from 2009.

This facility is a vital link connecting intermodal freight logistics between the U.S. and its international trade partners. However, the yard and its access infrastructure are in dire need of rejuvenation and modernization. Decades of unmitigated trucking pollution, noise, and fugitive dust from the facility have severely impacted the surrounding residential areas.

The collaborative project, which includes a cumulative financial commitment of more than $110 million from MDOT, Michigan EGLE, Norfolk Southern Railway Company, the City of Detroit, and the Federal Railroad Administration, will not only improve Detroit's ability to serve the world as the global hub for auto manufacturing but, more importantly, will drastically improve the livability, health, and safety of our residents. It will achieve this by reducing noise, traffic congestion, air pollution, and accidents, while also creating new green spaces. Furthermore, it will spur economic development by affording new domestic intermodal lanes for Southeast Michigan businesses.

As part of this project, SDEV will be receiving $1 million distributed over the next several years from Norfolk Southern (and eventually, the STB-approved "Union Pacific Transcontinental Railroad") to lead community outreach efforts and workforce readiness as the expansion project enters final engineering design and commences construction. Those funds will be transformational for not only SDEV's long-term community impact goals in Southwest Detroit, but the lives of so many neighbors who will directly benefit from additional employment opportunities both constructing and operating the expanded facility.

On behalf of Southwest Detroit Environmental Vision, I respectfully urge the STB to approve this merger. We believe the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities it brings are essential to finally secure the completion of the Livernois project, connecting our communities regionally, nationally, and across the globe.

We urge the continuation and completion of this project as a direct result of the merger's approval.

Sincerely,

Raquel Garcia

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a St. Louis County Councilman, I am writing to express my support for the proposed Union Pacific (UP)-Norfolk Southern (NS) merger – a transformative step that will strengthen both our local and national economies, modernize freight movement, and create new opportunities for businesses and consumers.

After more than ten years serving my community, I've learned that lasting economic and community development depends on investing and maintaining reliable infrastructure. By creating a transcontinental railroad, this merger will connect key markets across the country, streamline freight operations, and enhance America's competitiveness in the global supply chain.

In 2023, St. Louis County remained the region's leading exporter, accounting for nearly $5.4 billion in goods exports—driven by manufacturers and businesses that depend on reliable transportation to grow and stay competitive. Since most enterprises in St. Louis County and across Missouri are small businesses, a more connected rail network will reduce logistics costs, open new markets, and strengthen our local economies.

Local manufacturers will benefit from shorter shipping times and lower costs at every stage – from receiving material components to delivering finished products. This new level of efficiency will allow businesses to expand operations, create new jobs, and reinvest in their communities.

Through my work on the Public Improvements Committee, I've seen firsthand how improvements in infrastructure affect not only businesses but also consumers. When transportation systems run efficiently, families benefit from lower prices, faster deliveries, and less congestion in their neighborhoods.

By shifting more freight to rail, this merger will help reduce commercial truck traffic in residential areas, easing congestion in communities across the country. Each intermodal train can remove up to 550 trucks form the highway, improving safety, efficiency, and environmental outcomes nationwide.

Communities will enjoy a safer, cleaner, and more balanced environment – one where businesses can grow alongside residential neighborhoods without the disruption of heavy truck traffic. This improved balance between commerce and daily life will attract new investment, create economic opportunities, and strengthen local economies.

For these reasons, I strongly urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the Union Pacific- Norfolk Southern merger. This partnership represents a significant step toward building a stronger, more connected transportation system – one that supports both economic growth and community well-being.

Sincerely,

Dennis Hancock

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a county councilman, I am proud to serve as the best interests of the people in St. Louis County, Missouri. I am writing this letter to urge you to support the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS).

I know from our efforts to grow the economic engine of the region that access to reliable rail infrastructure is essential for supporting local production. In St. Louis County, more access to freight lines will help our manufacturers get the efficient freight transportation they need. The proposed merger of UP and NS into a single transcontinental railroad would open new economic opportunity while reducing shipping bottlenecks and costs for our region.

Freight rail is already a cornerstone of Missouri's economy. According to the Missouri Chamber Foundation, freight shipping generates $52 billion in annual economic output statewide. Building on this success with a rail line that spans the nation would allow communities like ours to connect more directly with broader markets and strengthen our role in regional commerce.

The merger – and competitive shipping – would also ease our dependence on semi-trucks, which currently crowd our already congested highways. The Missouri Department of Transportation found the state's rail system already carries the equivalent of over 21 million truckloads per year, helping to alleviate traffic on local roads. Expanding rail capacity – as this merger would – will deepen these benefits – keeping freight off our streets, improving safety, and making transportation more streamlined.

Beyond traffic congestion, fewer trucks mean lower road maintenance costs, reduced carbon emissions, and quieter, safer neighborhoods. These quality-of-life improvements go hand-in-hand with the economic advantages of expanded rail connectivity.

With more goods being moved by rail, shipping costs are likely to decline and inefficiencies (via interchanges) would be minimized. In fact, the Missouri Department of Transportation notes that over half of the total value of goods in the state already move by rail – a clear indicator of its importance. A unified railroad system would enhance reliability, strengthen Missouri's economy, and improve the flow of goods across the country.

Closer to home, greater rail connectivity would link communities more easily to neighboring ones, amplifying our production capacity and economic relevance. With respected manufacturers, like pallet producer SERVODAY, this merger positions us well as a hub for domestic manufacturing.

Our communitas wants nothing more than greater economic opportunity and positioning. The merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern to create North America's first true transcontinental railroad would make that vision possible – ensuring sustained development and long-term prosperity for St. Louis County.

For these reasons, I urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Mark Harder

Subject: Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the economic development organization for St. Tammany, St. Tammany Economic Development Corporation recognizes the important role freight rail plays in supporting the Northshore's economy and quality of life. Reliable and efficient rail service helps our manufacturers, distributors, and logistics partners connect to markets across the Gulf Coast and the nation— supporting business growth, job creation, and regional competitiveness.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers a meaningful opportunity to strengthen these connections. The merger would enhance network reliability, improve freight movement efficiency, and expand market access for Louisiana businesses. It also represents continued investment in rail infrastructure and technology— improving safety, supporting sustainability goals, and ensuring our region remains well-positioned to attract and retain industry.

Freight rail also complements our highway system by reducing congestion and emissions, making it an essential part of a resilient and sustainable transportation network. With thoughtful planning and oversight, this merger can deliver long-term benefits for businesses and communities across St. Tammany and the broader Northshore region.

On behalf of St. Tammany Economic Development Corporation, I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so that our region can fully benefit from the efficiencies, investment, and growth opportunities it will bring.

Re: Support for the Union Pacific – Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs and Members of the Board,

On behalf of the Suazo Business Center, I am honored to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

The Suazo Center is Utah's premier hub for economically disadvantaged businesses. Since our founding in 2002, we have supported thousands of entrepreneurs across the state - from Logan to St. George - through business advising, technical assistance, capital access, and training programs. In 2023, we became a certified Community Development Financial Institution (CDFI), expanding our ability to provide capital to low- and moderate-income entrepreneurs. Each year, we serve more than 2,000 clients, help create or sustain hundreds of jobs, and guide the launch of new ventures that contribute directly to the state's economic growth.

Union Pacific has been a valued partner of the Suazo Business Center for nearly a decade. Their support has enabled us to strengthen programs that give entrepreneurs the tools, resources, and confidence to succeed. This long-standing collaboration reflects Union Pacific's deep commitment to investing in communities and to building economic resilience across both rural and urban America.

SUAZO
BUSINESS CENTER

We also recognize that reliable and efficient transportation networks are critical for small businesses to thrive. The proposed combination of Union Pacific's western network with Norfolk Southern's eastern reach, creating America's first truly transcontinental railroad - represents a generational opportunity to improve the competitiveness of the U.S. supply chain, expand access to markets, and generate new workforce opportunities.

For these reasons, we respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger.

Thank you for your consideration, and for your service in ensuring a strong and competitive national rail system.

Subject: Comments on Merger - Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I am writing you regarding the proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger from the perspective of a civic leader focused on improving the state of Utah. Since the driving of the "Golden Spike" here marking the completion of the first transcontinental railroad in 1869, robust freight rail service has been a key component of our state's success. Utah serves a multimodal hub for the Intermountain West. And Union Pacific has always been the biggest player in Utah's rail service story. The company is without question a pillar of our community.

By extending Union Pacific's effective reach across a unified coast-to-coast network, we are optimistic that our economy would benefit significantly from the proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger.

We are pleased to encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, taking into account the economic opportunities it may create for the communities this combined network will serve and the need to bolster the competitiveness of the American economy through the efficient movement of goods by rail.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President of the Board of Commissioners in Swatara Township, I am writing to let you know of my strong support for the proposed merger between Norfolk Southern and Union Pacific.

Swatara Township is home to the Rutherford Yards facility currently owned by Norfolk Southern. It employs many of my constituents and has been a driver of economic activity for our township. The potential merger includes protections for these employees, which have been agreed to between the companies and the union representing them, SMART-TD.

In addition to the importance of the Rutherford Yards to our community, the idea that the merger will improve the quality of freight rail in this country is important. Freight rail represents a sustainable and important mode of transportation in this country and this merged entity will represent a true transcontinental railroad.

I hope that you will consider the economic impact and the impact on my constituents when you consider this potential merger. I strongly support it, and I hope you will as well.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the owner of Taylor Strategies & Consulting, LLC, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of Wyoming's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to large and small businesses, particularly, the mining industry. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to Wyoming and the national economy.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a State Representative in Hamilton County, I recognize the important role freight rail plays in supporting our local economy, businesses and residents. Reliable rail service helps connect our region to broader markets and provides an efficient transportation option for goods.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger has the strong potential to further shape this network by offering more direct routes, expanding geographic reach and encouraging investment in infrastructure and technology. Our business community that relies on freight shipments would benefit through strengthened service reliability, enhanced supply chain efficiency and access to new markets. And our whole community would benefit from a more efficient rail network that could decrease the number of long-haul trucks on our publicly funded highways. At the same time, it is important that these changes continue to balance efficiency with safety, sustainability and long-term community benefits.

Freight rail contributes to reduced highway congestion and emissions, making it an important part of sustainable transportation. And reducing highway congestion decreases the need for highway maintenance spending and improves quality of life for our residents. With thoughtful planning, the merger could improve service dependability, support local businesses and create opportunities for infrastructure investment and job growth.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to carefully consider this proposal, weighing both the opportunities it may create for communities like ours and the need to ensure fair, safe and sustainable rail service nationally and globally.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

Texas is a state built on commerce, and rail has long been the backbone of how we move the goods that power our economy. In my Gulf Coast district, rail plays a vital role in connecting our communities, industries, and ports to markets across the nation. From energy production and agriculture to manufacturing and refining, the movement of freight is essential to our local prosperity and the broader Texas economy.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger represents an important opportunity to strengthen these connections. Improved efficiency and reliability in our rail system will help ease the burden on our highways, expand market access for Texas businesses, and enhance the resilience of our supply chains. Just as importantly, it will support continued investment in infrastructure—promoting safety, creating jobs, and preparing our state for the demands of the future.

For the communities I represent, including DeWitt, Goliad, Jackson, Lavaca, Matagorda, and Victoria Counties, the benefits of this merger are tangible. A stronger, more dependable rail network means stronger local economies, more competitive industries, and continued growth for the Texas Gulf Coast region.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger and allow Texas to continue leading the way as a national and global hub for trade and economic opportunity.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

Texas's transportation infrastructure is a cornerstone of our state's economic success, and nowhere is that more evident than here in Waco and the surrounding Central Texas region. Railroads play a vital role in moving goods efficiently and safely, supporting local agriculture, energy, manufacturing, and the growing commercial sector that drives our community. The proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern presents an important opportunity to strengthen that system.

This merger could enhance operational efficiency, reduce delays, and provide more reliable freight service for businesses across Central Texas and the state as a whole. By improving the flow of goods, it can help ease congestion on highways, support local economic development, and ensure that Waco and other Texas communities remain connected to national and international markets. Continued investment in rail infrastructure will also create jobs, improve safety, and modernize critical transportation corridors serving our region.

For Waco, Central Texas, and Texas as a whole, the benefits of this merger are substantial. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this consolidation so that our communities and our state can continue to thrive as a hub for commerce and economic opportunity.

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As State Representative for House District 74. I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail plays an outsized role in HD 74. From the agricultural producers of South Texas to the energy, mining, and manufacturing operations across Permian Basin, our communities rely on efficient, reliable rail service to move goods to markets across the region. Union Pacific has long been a critical transportation partner for our district from supporting local businesses, sustaining jobs, and serving as a vital connection from West Texas to the rest of the state and the nation.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network in ways that directly benefit the shippers, consumers, and communities of HD 74, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help reduce disruptions that particularly impact rural shippers and small businesses across our district.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed delivery of agricultural products, energy resources, and manufactured goods originating in HD 74, helping our businesses compete more effectively.
- Increased Investment: A stronger transcontinental network will support long-term improvements in rail infrastructure, advanced technology, and safety systems, critical for a district with vast distances and growing freight needs.
- Expanded Market Reach: A broader geographic footprint will open additional markets for producers and employers in HD 74, enhancing supply chain resilience and supporting local economic growth.

This merger is about more than the consolidation of two railroads, it is about securing the future of transportation for rural and border communities, supporting economic development throughout West Texas, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the meaningful benefits it will bring to House District 74, the State of Texas, and the national economy.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a proud Texas State Representative serving House District 124 in San Antonio; Military City U.S.A., I write to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of Texas's economy. It keeps our shelves stocked, supports our farmers, powers our manufacturing sector, and connects our communities to markets across the country and the world. Union Pacific has long been a reliable partner in that mission, helping to move goods efficiently, affordably, and sustainably. This proposed merger represents an opportunity to build on that strong foundation and deliver meaningful benefits for both Texans and the broader U.S. economy by combining railroads that would cover over 50,000 route miles across 43 states, connect 100 ports across North America, and represent a massive $250 billion enterprise. More so, if approved, the Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger would create the first true coast-to-coast freight railroad in the U.S., operating entirely on its own network by linking UP's western reach with NS's eastern system. This historic merger would transform freight rail efficiency and connectivity nationwide.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this proposal .Help us make history and move forward together in service to our shared prosperity.

Texas is a state built on commerce, and rail has long been the backbone of how we move the goods that power our economy. In my district—anchored by New Braunfels and spanning the heart of the Hill Country—rail service connects our communities to the larger Texas and national markets that sustain our industries, jobs, and quality of life. Subject: Comments on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As someone deeply invested in the wellbeing of Utah, I see firsthand how important freight rail is to the families, businesses, and nonprofit organizations that make up our community. Reliable rail service doesn't just move goods—it helps sustain local jobs, supports small businesses, and strengthens the connections that allow our community to thrive.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger presents an opportunity to build on that foundation. By expanding reach and investing in modern infrastructure, the merger has the potential to make rail service more dependable and efficient for communities like ours. These improvements can mean stronger local economies, greater supply chain stability, and more opportunities for growth.

I want to highlight the leadership of Nathan Anderson at Union Pacific. Nathan has been a true partner to our community, supporting nonprofits and championing collaboration between business and civic organizations. His commitment gives me confidence that this merger will be guided by a spirit of responsibility and care for people, not just efficiency.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to take these factors into account as you evaluate the merger. Our community is eager to see growth that is fair, sustainable, and grounded in the values of service and partnership.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger
Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President and CEO of the Economic Development Alliance for Brazoria County, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses, both large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

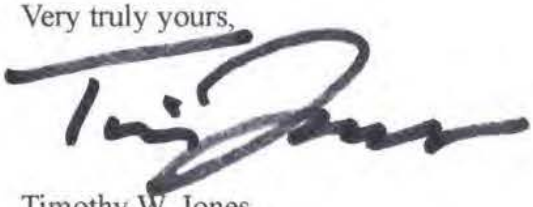
RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

During my tenure as Speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives, I led the passage of historic pro-growth reforms. This experience solidified in me a fundamental belief: reliable and efficient infrastructure is what sustains American jobs and industrial growth. Having returned to the private sector, I believe now more than ever in an America First economy and that government should be held to the highest standards. That is why I proudly support the Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) merger. I believe an efficient, unified coast-to-coast rail network will provide our nation with the tools we need to meet the challenges of the 21st-century economy. This merger will support American manufacturing, strengthen supply chains, and help American companies compete against foreign alternatives.

This merger could not come at a more critical time. While our country continues to engage in partisan bickering amid a government shutdown, China continues to build and expand. Through its "Belt and Road" initiative, Beijing has poured billions into developing a global transcontinental rail network that now spans more than 150 countries, linking Asia, Africa, and Europe under its influence. Every mile of track laid expands China's influence and underscores the urgent need for America to reinvest in its own industrial foundation.



The UP-NS merger aligns well with President Trump's goals of revitalizing American manufacturing and bolstering the U.S. supply chain. By removing interchange delays, the merger strengthens the transcontinental system — creating faster, more dependable, and more affordable freight options for American businesses. American families will also surely benefit, as more efficient rail means lower consumer prices and less highway congestion. For workers, the merger will create increased job opportunities in the rail industry, one of the most stable and well-compensated sectors in the nation. Taken together, this merger represents an opportunity to prioritize national security and stay ahead of China and neighboring competitors like Canada by modernizing our rail system, expanding U.S. freight capacity, and supporting American jobs.

Just as President Lincoln united a divided nation through the first transcontinental railroad, our country can now strengthen and unite America's economy through a nationwide modernization effort. Approving this merger will reinforce our infrastructure, empower American workers and families, and reaffirm the United States' standing as the world's industrial leader.

I respectfully encourage the Surface Transportation Board to provide this proposal with full and fair consideration. Approving this merger will keep America moving forward and ensure our nation remains the engine of global progress.

Very truly yours,

Timothy W. Jones

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a public safety department in the Town of Rocky Ford, and home to a very active Northfolk Southern railway crossing, we see firsthand how vital dependable infrastructure is to the safety of our neighborhoods. In 2024, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern trained more than 10,000 first responders, equipping them with tools and knowledge to act fast when every second counts. The training isn't just helpful – it's lifesaving. Strong coordination between railroads and emergency services ensures we're ready to protect our communities when it matters most.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger builds on our community partnerships and brings continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing public safety, strengthening neighborhood resilience, and creates continuity amongst first responders from coast to coast.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger swiftly – unlocking the investments, collaborative safety benefits, and broader economic opportunities it will bring.

Mr. Fuchs:

I am writing today in support of the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Railway. I believe that the proposed merger would have great benefits for the country, and urge your support.

I have had the privilege of representing Union Pacific for their legislative and regulatory affairs in Iowa since 2005. Prior to that, I worked for the Iowa Association of Business and Industry, a statewide trade association, which consistently fought for the elimination of regulatory barriers to competition. This merger is the next logical step in ensuring that American products can be shipped domestically or internationally as efficiently as possible.

Simply put, this merger would make the shipping of products made or grown in Iowa to ports on the eastern seaboard much more efficient. Without the friction of switching in Chicago, St. Louis, Memphis or New Orleans, carloads of Iowa products can move straight to ports on the Atlantic, unleashing he competitiveness of Iowa manufacturers and farmers.

In addition, the economy of western Iowa stands to benefit immensely from the proposed merger. The headquarters of the merged entity would be in Omaha, and its neighbor across the Missouri - Council Bluffs, Iowa - would see direct and indirect benefits of any potential relocated employees and their families, leading to increased development, business activity and tax growth.

This merger would lead to increased freight rail traffic, which is the safest mode of transporting large commodities and products in the market today. More freight cars on our own rail lines means safer roads for everyday American travelers, students, workers and truckers. More freight cars on our own rail lines means better gas prices for American consumers. More freight cars on our own rail lines means that public transportation infrastructure, such as highways, bridges and tunnels, will last longer. All Americans will benefit from this merger.

“Business as usual” should not be a guiding principle for a growing, innovative economy. Approval of this merger would show the world that we are focused on the future, with a thriving manufacturing and ag sector generating immense wealth for Americans.

Please support the merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Railway.

Sincerely,

Michael Triplett

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

Union Station Kansas City, Inc is proud to call Union Pacific our partner and friend. Our history together began in 1906 when the Kansas City Terminal Railway, a jointly-owned subsidiary of 12 major railroads, was formed to build Union Station. Union Pacific was one of those twelve, and eight years later in 1914, Union Station opened to the public. Today, over 110 years later, Union Station Kansas City—a 501(c)3 non-profit organization—still enjoys an ongoing partnership with Union Pacific. We routinely host "Big Boy" on our grounds and invite the Kansas City community to come celebrate the world's largest operating steam locomotive, learn about modern rail transportation and commerce, and create lasting memories.

Union Pacific is generous with its philanthropic investment in many communities throughout the United States, and Union Station has been a recipient of this generosity. Union Pacific's recent funding of our needed security upgrades has been instrumental in continuing the safety of our guests. We see two million people come through our doors each year, and having generous partners support us is significant for our historic building and grounds.

The proposed Union Pacific-Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to extend these benefits further. In addition to the forecast improvement in rail service and infrastructure, the merger promises to enhance the reach and resources of a company that already plays a vital role in supporting local organizations and improving quality of life. We respectfully ask the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so Union Pacific can continue and expand its important contributions - not only in transportation, but in strengthening communities nationwide.

With Gratitude,

Still, the organization does want to share firsthand experience with Union Pacific Railroad's commitment to UCAIR's mission to educate and empower individuals, businesses, and community leaders to make changes that collectively improve air quality, supporting a stronger economy, better health, and overall quality of life.

Re: Support for the Proposed Merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern

Dear Surface Transportation Board,

On behalf of the Utah Foundation, I am writing to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. As an 80-year-old nonpartisan, public policy research nonprofit, we focus heavily on the economic, workforce, and community impacts of major initiatives. We believe this merger presents significant benefits for the state, region, and nation.

The creation of America's first transcontinental railroad will enhance the efficiency and competitiveness of the U.S. rail network. This is expected to improve safety and reliability while delivering benefits to customers and communities. We are also interested in the fact that rail has a lower carbon footprint than trucking, decreases highway congestion and wear, and provides faster, more reliable service for time-sensitive goods.

For these reasons, the Utah Foundation supports the proposed merger and urges the Surface Transportation Board to approve it. We believe it represents a forward-looking opportunity to advance economic competitiveness, workforce development, and community well-being across.

I appreciate your consideration.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As the executive director of the Utah Museum of Fine Arts (UMFA) at the University of Utah, a community stakeholder and nonprofit organization located in Salt Lake City, Utah, I am delighted to share information about the partnership between the UMFA and the Union Pacific Railroad.

The UMFA has received funding from Union Pacific for many years. This funding supports essential community outreach programs that broaden the UMFA's reach to underserved communities in Salt Lake City and beyond, helping the UMFA achieve its mission: "to inspire critical dialogue and illuminate the role of art in our lives."

Recent support from Union Pacific was invested in the UMFA's Community Outreach programs, such as UMFA in the Wild, an art-making outreach program that demonstrates the intersection of art and nature. The Museum hosts this program during the summer months in many of Utah's glorious state parks. The UMFA's Community Outreach programs bring art education to where people live, work, and play, serving audiences who might not typically visit the Museum to learn about art. In the past year, these outreach programs served 2,714 participants through 35 programs throughout the greater Salt Lake City area.

On behalf of the UMFA, we are grateful for Union Pacific Railroad's investment in the UMFA and its efforts to serve Utah citizens and visitors in our great state. The support from this wonderful organization means a great deal to us. Thank you!

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Senate Majority Leader of the State of Utah, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.
Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a community leader in the Village of Albers, reliable rail service is essential for our local economy, businesses, and residents. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to strengthen these connections and deliver long-term benefits.

Rail has been and continues to be the most utilized form of product distribution available throughout the entire country. Waterway or barge sources are limited to mostly North and South abilities; truck services have their place within the industry; however, this manner is limited to available space in each truck and with each truck adds additional staff to operate the vehicle. The railroad will continue to excel in the future as the most dependable, safest, and timely method of moving cargo throughout the United States.

The merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion and expanded market reach for our businesses. It also means continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing safety, creating jobs, and ensuring our community remains competitive in a growing economy.

On behalf of the residents of the Village of Albers, I respectfully advocate the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger so we can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities it will bring - connecting our communities regionally, nationally and across the globe.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a former member of the Virginia House of Delegates in the Commonwealth of Virginia, and former Chair of the House Transportation Committee, this letter is to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Railroad.

As you know, freight rail is a cornerstone of Virginia and the United States economy by safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the country and the world.

Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for Virginia by providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to large and small businesses. The American freight rail network is critical to our economic growth as it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, reducing both highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities through:

Improved service reliability with more direct routes, greater operational flexibility, improved schedule dependability, and prevention of service disruptions;

Reduced transit times that will eliminate certain interchanges to efficiently and quickly move goods, which help businesses reach customers faster and more competitively;

Increased investment in advanced infrastructure and technology that will enhance safety systems; and

Expanded reach that broaden the geographic footprint to open new markets for Virginia products and strengthen our Nation's supply chain resilience.

I believe it is also worth noting improved scheduling and track upgrades should lead to better passenger and commuter rail efficiency.

In addition, a more efficient and timely rail network can assist in reducing costs to the consumer, and therefore assist with cost of living concerns, with increased network velocity and a decrease in delivery wait times. Better fluidity means greater predictability of service, especially to the short line railroads, where they are often the first and last access for customers and consumers.

This merger is also an opportunity to secure the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal recognizing the benefits it will bring to Virginia's and the United States economy.

Sincerely,

The Hon. David E. Yancey

Re: Proposed Merger-- Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I write in support of the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. I do so as a former Secretary of Transportation in Virginia and, prior to that tenure, as one who served for 14 years on the transportation committee of the Virginia House of Delegates.

My motivation is a recognition of the importance of logistics. A seamless railroad network from coast to coast has many inherent advantages. A combination of these two great railroad companies will allow freight to move more efficiently and more economically, a benefit to American consumers. Such a network would also facilitate our export of products abroad from ports such as those in the Hampton Roads region of the Commonwealth. Depending more on rail that is reliable and seamless will also lessen the amount of freight transported on 18-wheelers on our interstates and other roads, thus reducing gas consumption (and carbon emissions) and congestion and improving safety for motorists.

Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner in Virginia; the service it provides to importers, exporters, businesses and consumers through America will clearly be enhanced by the merger.

I hope very much that the Surface Transportation Board will recognize the benefits to the proposal before you and approve the merger.

Thank you,

Sincerely,

Whittington W. Clement

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a Delegate of the State of Virginia I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Norfolk Southern has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

RE: Proposed Merger – Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I write in strong support of the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern and I respectfully request that the Surface Transportation Board approve the merger when it is before the Board.

As a former Virginia Secretary of Commerce & Trade (2016-2018), Virginia Secretary of Agriculture & Forestry (2010-2016), Commissioner of the Virginia Department of Agriculture & Consumer Services (2007-2010) and an executive with Richmond, Virginia-based Universal Leaf Tobacco Company (1999-2007), the world's largest leaf tobacco dealer, I have gathered firsthand and deep knowledge of the critical role that railroads play in the economic vitality of the Commonwealth of Virginia. Indeed, Virginia's freight rail commerce is a cornerstone of our economy and a key component of why CNBC regularly names Virginia its top state for business.

With that background serving as a knowledge foundation and based on my understanding of the proposed merger, I believe the merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively

- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience
- Enhanced Public Safety/Environment: Increased rail network opportunities reduce the number of tractor trailers on the nation's highways and related carbon dioxide emissions produced by those vehicles

To conclude, I believe this merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, improving public safety, enhancing the environment, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

It is for these reasons and many more that I respectfully request that the Surface Transportation Board recognize the significant economic benefits it will bring to Virginia and our national economy and approve the proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger. Thank you in advance for your review and consideration of this letter.

With kind regards, I remain

Sincerely,

Todd P. Haymore

Subject: Endorsement of the Proposed Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a Colorado entrepreneur, developer, and investor, I've seen how critical reliable transportation is to keeping our economy moving. Freight rail is the quiet backbone of so many industries—it moves the goods that power our businesses, sustain our farms, and connect our communities to markets across the country and the world.

Union Pacific has long been a dependable partner here in Colorado, providing efficient and affordable service to companies of all sizes. I believe this proposed merger with Norfolk Southern is a smart and necessary step to make our rail network stronger, more efficient, and better prepared for the future.

This merger isn't just about combining two railroads—it's about building a modern, coast-to-coast system that supports growth, innovation, and sustainability. A more connected rail network means fewer delays, shorter transit times, and new opportunities for investment in technology and infrastructure.

I'm also encouraged by what this merger could mean for American manufacturing. More companies are choosing to bring production back home, but onshoring only works if we have the logistics backbone to support it. A unified and reliable freight rail system will help reduce costs, improve supply chain stability, and make U.S.-made products more competitive worldwide. That's good for workers, for small businesses, and for the communities that depend on them.

To me, this merger represents progress—an investment in the future of American industry and a way to keep our economy strong and connected. I urge the Surface Transportation Board to give it full and favorable consideration, recognizing the real, long-term benefits it will bring to Colorado and to our country.

As a board member of Webster Arts, the arts hub in the area, and the former mayor of Webster Groves, a municipality that hosts Union Pacific 'runs' through the center of town, my association with Union Pacific is extensive and has always been positive.

The opportunity to strengthen rail connections and provide stronger, faster, and more reliable rail service is crucial for the decades ahead. Improved rail is the long-term solution to delivery of goods in a more efficient and climate friendly environment. My experience with UP suggests that UP's record of service, communications, and connecting with communities through which it operates makes UP a good partner in this merger.

Subject: Support for the Proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern Transaction

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a former Lieutenant Governor and Senate President of West Virginia, I have spent my public life focused on jobs, safe communities, and the infrastructure that keeps our economy moving. Reliable rail service is integral to West Virginia's energy, manufacturing, and agricultural supply chains, and it is essential for getting our products to national and global markets.

I support Union Pacific's proposed acquisition of Norfolk Southern because a coast-to-coast, single-line railroad can deliver better service for shippers, fewer handoffs, and faster, more dependable transit times. The combined network would span roughly 50,000 route miles across 43 states and connect about 100 ports, strengthening domestic supply chains that West Virginia businesses depend on.

This transaction is now before the Board following the railroads' notice of intent and the Board's opening of a proceeding and proposed schedule. I appreciate the Board's careful review and its long-standing role in ensuring competitive, safe, and efficient rail service in the public interest.

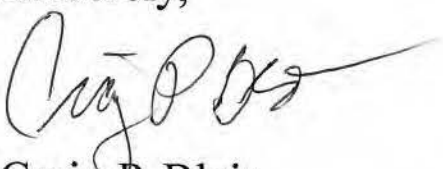
For West Virginia specifically, improved single-line service east–west can reduce interchange delays that often drive up costs and erode reliability for our energy producers, manufacturers, and agricultural exporters. The applicants have described public-interest benefits from eliminating unnecessary interchanges and creating direct market access that should help our shippers reach Gulf, Atlantic, and Pacific gateways more efficiently.

Safety and workforce stability also matter to our communities. I am encouraged by the public commitments made with labor representatives that there will be no merger-related involuntary furloughs for SMART-TD train and yardmaster crafts, and by the emphasis on safety training for first responders. These assurances, alongside the Board's authority to impose conditions, give confidence that service and safety can improve while protecting good-paying, union jobs.



I recognize that any Class I merger warrants rigorous scrutiny. If the Board sees areas where competition could be strengthened, I support reasonable, targeted conditions that preserve routing options for shippers in Appalachia and across the network. In my view, with appropriate safeguards, the efficiencies and service improvements described by the applicants will help West Virginia compete, attract investment, and keep people working.

For these reasons, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern transaction, subject to any conditions the Board deems necessary to protect competition, safety, and service.

Thank you for your consideration.

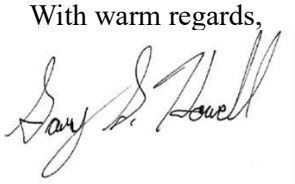
Subject: Support for the Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a lifelong West Virginian representing the Mountain State in the House of Delegates and as a small business owner, I know how vital reliable rail service is to our economy, our businesses, and our residents. The proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Corporation presents a unique and timely opportunity not only for West Virginia but for the entire Appalachian and Mid-Atlantic region.

Why this merger is good for West Virginia
West Virginia's economy depends heavily on freight rail for coal, minerals, manufacturing materials, and regional goods. Improved service, capacity, and network reach will give our businesses dependable access to national and international markets. The merger promises faster and more reliable service, less congestion, and greater market access for our communities. This will make West Virginia more competitive in a global economy. It will also bring investment in rail infrastructure which means new jobs in construction and maintenance and stronger transportation corridors to serve our towns and industries. For our coal industry this merger could be especially important. West Virginia leads the nation in coal exports and improved logistics directly reduce cost per ton. International buyers are very sensitive to transportation costs and the ability to move coal efficiently and affordably helps our miners stay competitive.



Stronger trade and export routes through the West Coast
As trade across the Pacific Rim grows, West Virginia stands to gain from better rail links to West Coast ports. The State of West Virginia recently opened a trade office in Taiwan to promote exports and attract Taiwanese investment. Taiwan is already one of our key partners, with trade totaling nearly 175 million dollars in 2022. This merger will provide a direct rail route from the West Coast ports for both imports and exports, complementing our traditional East Coast connections. It will help create a true coast to coast network that gives West Virginia businesses more options to reach global markets. For coal exports in particular, an efficient route to West Coast ports will open new opportunities in the Pacific Rim. Lower transportation costs make West Virginia coal more competitive in Asia and help sustain our export base.

Benefits for West Virginia coal and international competitiveness
Improving the rail network's efficiency and creating westbound access strengthens the economics of exporting coal to global markets. Reduced rail costs and faster delivery lower the total cost of coal shipped overseas, improving the position of West Virginia producers in world markets. This will support jobs in mining, rail logistics, and port operations while increasing severance tax revenues that benefit our schools, roads, and communities. When West Virginia coal becomes more competitive worldwide, it strengthens our energy industry and keeps our state moving forward.

Conclusion
On behalf of my constituents in West Virginia, I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve the Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern merger so our state can take advantage of the efficiencies, investments, and opportunities it offers. Re: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Chairman Fuchs:

As County Judge of Wharton County, Texas, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Corporation.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy - safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and around the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for Texas, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses both large and small.

The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth, but also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions. The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent disruptions and enhance schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will allow goods to move faster and more competitively to market.
- Increased Investment: A unified transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: A broader geographic footprint will open new markets for Texas products and strengthen the resilience of national supply chains.

This merger is about more than just railroads - it is about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting continued economic development, and ensuring that American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the long-term benefits it will bring to our state, our region, and the national economy.

RE: Support for Union Pacific Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

The Williamsport/Lycoming Chamber of Commerce wants to share with you our support for the proposed merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. We have a long heritage of railroads in our community with having 7 different lines running through Williamsport in the late 1800s and early 1900s.

This merger represents a significant opportunity to connect America and help in alleviating the over-the-road trucking challenges brought upon our highways. It will offer new opportunities for businesses we represent, from accessing needed parts faster and making it easier to exporting our products made right here in Lycoming County.

As the Keystone State we sit in a prime location to deliver goods with access to many markets. The addition of Union Pacific to this well-established network will only strengthen the ability of business in Lycoming County to move their products to markets across the nation. Norfolk Southern has a significant presence here in Lycoming County through its rail networks. It interconnects with many short line railroads, including the Lycoming Valley Railroad Company that interchanges with Norfolk Southern in Northumberland County.

The businesses here in Lycoming County would greatly benefit from this merger. It is why we strongly urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve it. This protects workers, opens economies, and allows these companies to take advantage of efficiencies, tandem investments, and opportunities that flow from a more reliable and safer rail system.

Sincerely,

Jason Fink

Wyoming Association of Municipalities Letter of Support for the Proposed Merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern

The Wyoming Association of Municipalities (WAM) is pleased to express support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad (UP) and Norfolk Southern Railroad (NS). Representing Wyoming's cities and towns, WAM recognizes the essential role of a strong, reliable rail network in sustaining local economies, supporting industrial growth, and maintaining critical connections between communities, states, and national markets.

The proposed merger to create America's first transcontinental railroad—linking Union Pacific's western network with Norfolk Southern's eastern operations—offers meaningful opportunities to enhance transportation efficiency, strengthen U.S. supply chains, and promote long-term economic competitiveness. Wyoming's municipalities, many of which rely heavily on rail access for energy, agriculture, and manufacturing industries, stand to benefit from improved service reliability, infrastructure investment, and workforce stability.

Union Pacific has a longstanding presence in Wyoming and a history of collaboration with local governments on safety, infrastructure, and community development. WAM is encouraged by the commitment both companies have demonstrated to maintaining high standards of safety, workforce engagement, and environmental stewardship as part of this merger process. These commitments align closely with WAM's mission to support sustainable, resilient, and thriving communities across Wyoming.

The Wyoming Association of Municipalities respectfully encourages the Surface Transportation Board to give favorable consideration to this proposed merger. WAM believes the combination will strengthen the national rail system while providing positive economic and community benefits for Wyoming and the nation.

WYOMING HOUSE of REPRESENTATIVES

The Honorable Patrick J. Fuchs Chairman Surface Transportation Board

Re: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. As a local economic development leader, and representative of in the Wyoming House, I'm encouraged by the opportunities presented through a new transcontinental rail network — a project that connects our region to nearly 100 ports and communities across North America. This coast-to-coast system has the potential to strengthen our local economy by linking Wyoming businesses to new markets and supply chains.

Of great interest to me; the merger could shift more freight from our highways to rail with the potential to ease congestion on our roads, especially I-80, reducing our growing maintenance costs and, most importantly, improving safety for traveling residents and tourists.

This initiative isn't just about transportation — it's about economic growth, protecting good paying union jobs and securing the future of the U.S. supply chain.

Thank you for your consideration and service,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As member of the Wyoming State House of Representatives, currently serving on the Transportation, Highways, and Military Affairs Committee I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Wyoming has an economy built on the state's abundant natural resources. The state being the tenth largest geographically is challenged to provide infrastructure allowing for the transportation of our extracted resources to the various global markets. From the time we were a territory until current day Wyoming has relied on railroads to help us meet our transportation needs and consider our rail system to be the cornerstone of the state's critical infrastructure. The Union Pacific was Wyoming's first railroad arriving in 1867, three years before the Wyoming Territory was created, and 23-years before statehood. The evolution of the Union Pacific to implement safety, efficiency, and dependability has been critical to ensuring dependability of interstate commerce for Wyoming's industries.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

As we witnessed the evolution of our nation's rail system, there have been strategic changes driven by the need to have a system that can interact from region to region. This merger similar to the vision our forefathers had for the creation of transcontinental railroad, furthers this ongoing effort by establishing a coast-to-coast provider that will bring efficiencies, dependability, and accountability, while providing access to the rail providers serving other national territories.

Our company depends on efficient, reliable, and cost-effective rail service to meet the needs of our customers and ensure the safe, timely delivery of our products across the country. At the Albany & Eastern Railroad Company, we regularly transport lumber products, agricultural products, fuels, manufacturing materials, and structural steel to and from markets across the nation. The American freight rail network is a critical component of our supply chain, allowing our customers to move large volumes efficiently and sustainably. We understand the importance of rail to our employees, our products, and our national economy. We also understand firsthand how these rail networks need new investments, and new commitments for growth and innovation, so that our local economy, and the nation, can have a bright future.

We believe that the proposed merger will enhance competition and yield significant benefits for Union Pacific partners like us, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: The combined network will offer more direct routes and greater flexibility, minimizing the risk of service disruptions.

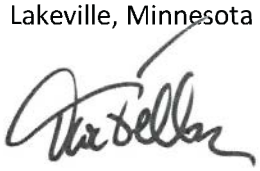
Dear Honorable Chairman Fuchs,

Mark Twain once said, “History never repeats itself, but it does often rhyme.”

Case in point:

The Chicago Great Western Railroad (CGW) was launched in 1885 in the small town of Randolph, Minnesota. The CGW quickly grew into a multi-state carrier and was a pioneer in several key areas of railroading. It exclusively developed continuous welded rail, introduced two-way radios—dramatically improving crew safety and operational efficiency—and was the first railroad to offer piggyback trailer-on-flatcar service, which has seen explosive growth in today’s modern railroading environment.

A second often-overlooked legacy of the CGW was its highly capable Industrial Development team. They were instrumental in engineering and promoting large sections of land along the rail network. Two prime examples of this innovation are the massive industrial parks developed in Roseport, MN and South St. Paul, MN. Koch Refining and Armour & Company built major facilities in these locations—which became transformational investments. Notably, Koch Industries continues to operate successfully in the CGW designed industrial park, remaining a major employer and contributor to the U.S. economy.



Fast forward 140 years: Progressive Rail proudly operates the former CGW railway line from Northfield, MN to Randolph,MN and beyond to Cannon Falls, MN. PGR has worked tirelessly to rebuild the infrastructure, attract new shippers and receivers, and support the Cities and Townships.

Looking ahead, the UP/NS partnership offers an exciting opportunity to expand access to Norfolk Southern’s vast network through a seamless single-line haul to the Cannon Valley Railroad Company (CVRC). This partnership has the potential to unlock new markets and create substantial economic benefit.

Chairman Fuchs, it’s only fitting that one of the most innovative railroads in American history drove its first spike in Randolph, Minnesota. With your support of the UP-NS merger, many more "golden spike" moments on the Cannon Valley Railroad can become a commercial and economic reality—benefiting not only Randolph, but communities far beyond.

Thank you for your time and support.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

Carload Express, Inc. (Carload) manages four railroads across Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia, operating 387 route-miles. Each line offers direct connectivity to Norfolk Southern. As one of Norfolk Southern's top five interchange partners by volume, our railroads interchange thousands of cars with Norfolk Southern each month. For more than 30 years, we've partnered with Norfolk Southern to develop innovative solutions to provide competitive freight options for more than 130 customers.

We enthusiastically support the proposed combination of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

As the operator of short line first mile / last mile operations, we know it is vitally important that the long-haul portion of any rail transportation move occur efficiently and effectively for the benefit of our customers. We expect the proposed transaction will improve service and competition in several ways:

- A combined Union Pacific / Norfolk Southern would create seamless service for certain frac sand shipments that typically move between Wisconsin and Illinois to the sites served by Carload in Pennsylvania. Offering more direct routes minimizes the risk of service disruptions.
- A combined Union Pacific / Norfolk Southern would reduce transit times by eliminating interchanges for petrochemical shipments such as plastic resins moving from the Gulf region to shippers served by Carload in Pennsylvania and other Mid-Atlantic points.
- A combined Union Pacific / Norfolk Southern would create more truck-competitive single line service and improve efficiencies for agricultural and food products moving from west coast points and the upper Midwest to locations served by Carload in Pennsylvania. This benefits the environment while improving safety on our roads.
- A combined Union Pacific / Norfolk Southern would offer the opportunity for shipments of industrial and recycled products like finished steel and recycled glass to move more competitively by rail vs truck between our shippers in Pennsylvania to and from "watershed" markets in Illinois, Missouri and the Mississippi Valley.
- A combined Union Pacific / Norfolk Southern will unlock more competitive origins for our agricultural shippers located on the Delmarva Peninsula by eliminating several days from transit times, allowing rail to be even more competitive.

From our perspective, the proposed transaction promises to provide new, more competitive services to the customers served by Carload's railroads and expands their market reach throughout North America.

Carload understands that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on businesses like ours and the broader economy.

We look forward to the continued partnership and the end-to-end benefits that this merger will bring.

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger [STB Docket FD 36873]

Dear Chairman Fuchs;

CaterParrott Railnet (CPR) has been a long-time strategic partner to Norfolk Southern; and we are writing to express our unwavering support for the proposed merger between Norfolk Southern (NS) and Union Pacific.

CPR is the largest independently-owned shortline railroad in the State of Georgia and we rely on NS to provide efficient, reliable and cost-effective service, this merger will strengthen those goals and enhance NS' position to do that for our current and future customers dependent on rail transportation.

CPR operates 6 lines, with 5 interchanges with NS, so our daily interaction with NS and the NS management team is tremendous; and our increasing growth could not be possible without them as a partner, and with the merger, that partnership will only grow to promote UP/NS and CPR's position as an economic driver for the State of Georgia and beyond. We see improved service reliability, reduced transit times and an increase in infrastructure investment. All of which promotes our goal of job growth, domestic and international economic development and ultimately, a safer rail network.

We urge you to strongly consider our voice and the positive impact this merger will have on Railroads such as CaterParrott Railnet's.

We sincerely thank you for your time and consideration of our perspective. If we can be of service or you need additional insights, please do not hesitate to reach out.

With highest regards,

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

In reference to: Chicago Junction Railroad's support of the UP - NS partnership.

With Chicago being the rail capital of the world, it's only fitting than the Chicago Junction Railway (CJR) chimes in with our support of the Union Pacific Railroad and the Norfolk Southern Corporation, becoming the world's largest railroad,

At the core of the CJR's support is the newfound efficiencies in transit opening brand new markets, while also dramatically improving overall transit time. Additionally, shippers will be able to match the initial fronthaul with the corresponding backhaul, which until now has been a problematic quest for railroads to truly capitalize upon.

When you consider today's market share of all things freight, we have as an industry dropped under 39%, which is a far cry from the historic numbers that were as high as 90% back in the day. For decades there has not been any significant market share gains in general merchandise traffic chiefly because our highway carrier rivals are more flexible to work with. Larger carriers serve the entire United States of America with one transportation solution. These larger trucking carriers serve the entire Nation with one price, one efficient route, and one invoice generated when the goods are delivered on time. In contrast, railroads often take two or more railroads to move the goods over long distances. To that end if we as a Nation want to become even more competitive on the world stage, railroads already have a capacity advantage, let's leverage that with faster deliveries made possible by streamlined conduits of commerce that ride on the world's most efficient infrastructure being two steel rails held up by strong crossties and deep ballast.

The Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger isn't just about scale—it's about opportunity. From national manufacturers to family-owned small businesses, this powerful new network delivers benefits across the board. When the tide rises, every boat is lifted.

To wrap up, the Chicago Junction Railway supports the Union Pacific / Norfolk Southern merger for all the reasons outlined above. But if you distilled it down to just two words it would be: "Game Changer". Change is good.

Chairman Fuchs, thank you for considering Chicago Junction Railway's support of the UP/NS merger. For sure America's brightest days are ahead, when we are the country that brings the biggest and boldest supply chain solutions to a global marketplace.

Honorable Chairman Fuchs,

Clackamas, Oregon is home to the Clackamas Valley Railway (CVLY), where we proudly partner with the Union Pacific Railroad. Together, we've managed to halt a decline in rail traffic, and we're now beginning to see promising signs of organic, rail-centric growth.

While the past cannot be changed, the future can. With the right structural changes, rail can reclaim its rightful place as America's safest, most efficient, and most environmentally responsible mode of freight transportation. To do so, we must make rail faster, more cost-effective, and simpler to do business with. One of the biggest barriers today is the complexity and inefficiency created by the need to secure multiple rates and handoffs across various connecting carriers.

Reinvigorating the CVLY and attracting sustained investment to this region depends on our ability to connect directly with national markets through seamless, single-line service. This is the opportunity presented by the proposed Union Pacific / Norfolk Southern merger.

Today, promising customers remain on the sidelines. J&D Refrigeration has not shipped or received refrigerated boxcars in over two years; CertainTeed has expressed interest in growing its rail business; Wymore Transfer is well-positioned to expand its transload operation; and a large Safeway plastics plant—which once received resin by rail—could be reactivated as a rail-served facility. Each of these cases reflects a common need: simplified, reliable access to national rail service.

Mr. Chairman, the U.S. rail industry is uniquely positioned to play a leading role in revitalizing American manufacturing, distribution, and industrial development. The proposed UP/NS merger represents a clear and timely step toward that future. It would reduce interline complexity, enable long-haul single-line service, and unlock new freight opportunities, particularly for short lines like CVLY that already have the infrastructure, crews, and customer relationships in place.

With this merger, Clackamas Valley Railway could connect directly into a 53,000-mile unified rail system—one that offers competitive transit times, streamlined pricing, and a service experience that finally rivals that of trucking.

We respectfully urge your support for the UP/NS application. Thank you for considering the voice of short line operators and the critical role we play in keeping America's supply chains resilient and connected.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Sir,

As a class 3 short line railroad partner of Union Pacific for the past 39 years, Copper Basin Railway Inc. is writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. We operate in Southeastern Arizona and rely heavily on Union Pacific to provide efficient, reliable, and cost-effective rail service, until they interchange with us at Magma jct., to meet the needs of our customers and ensure the safe, timely delivery of goods and materials.

We believe that the proposed merger will enhance competition and yield significant benefits for short line railroad partners like us, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: The combined network will offer more direct routes and greater flexibility, minimizing the risk of service disruptions.
- Reduced Transit Times: By eliminating interchanges where rail cars are handed off, the combination will remove several days from transit times, allowing rail to be an even more competitive solution vs other transportation alternatives.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology, and equipment, further improving service quality, capacity, and safety.

We understand that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on businesses like ours and the broader economy.

Thank you for your consideration of our perspective. We look forward to the continued partnership and enhanced service that this merger will bring.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a longtime Shortline partner of Union Pacific, the Oregon International Port of Coos Bay and the Coos Bay Rail Line are writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. We operate in the Willamette Valley as well in the southern coastal areas of Oregon and rely on Union Pacific to provide efficient, reliable, and cost-effective rail service, until they interchange with us, to meet the needs of our customers and ensure the safe, timely delivery of goods.

We believe that the proposed merger will enhance competition and yield significant benefits for Shortline partners like us, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: The combined network will offer more direct routes and greater flexibility, minimizing the risk of service disruptions.
- Reduced Transit Times: By eliminating interchanges where rail cars are handed off, the combination will remove several days from transit times, allowing rail to be an even more competitive solution vs other transportation alternatives.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology, and equipment, further improving service quality, capacity, and safety.

As you may be aware, the Oregon International Port of Coos Bay (the owner of the Coos Bay Rail Line), along with our private partners, has launched the Pacific Coast Intermodal Port Project (PCIP), which will allow container ships to load containers directly to rail at Coos Bay, Oregon. When the PCIP project is complete, up to 15,000 TEUs will traverse the line between Coos Bay and Eugene. The expanded access that this merger will provide to the PCIP project and the Coos Bay Rail Line is of great benefit to the local, regional and national economy.

We understand that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on businesses like ours and the broader economy.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

In reference to: Crab Orchard & Egyptian Railroads support of the UP - NS partnership.

First and foremost, this is the ideal time to thank you and your hard-working team for the guidance and support that is extended to America's railroads of all sizes.

The Crab Orchard & Egyptian Railroad (COER) is a truly historic railroad for being the last U.S. railroad of any kind to use steam locomotives exclusively in regular service. The COER also had a robust Piggyback service, their own fleet of boxcar and coal cars and a local hometown dedication to supporting the local businesses and fostering industrial development. As with everything in life, things changed. As many rail-served businesses have closed, fire destroyed a key account, Whirlpool-Maytag's appliance factory was shuttered. General Dynamics, a massive government contractor that makes ammunition for the military has ceased a long time ago with their inbound raw materials and outbound finished products shipments. COER is well prepared to earn it all back to rail and with that save the Defense Department a whole lot of money with a truck to rail conversion. Fast forward from Progressive Rail's (PGR) purchase of the COER on December 19th, 2012, we have investing heavily in bridge and culvert updates, installing new railroad ties, and grade crossings to quality standards, plus, aggressively promoting the COER's 8.5 mile network to once again be a thriving contributor of commerce to the United States of America.

With the background color just shared, there are three areas of collaboration that the STB and PGR team have in front of us that once initiated would become an amazing industrial development machine that Southern Illinois, the entire Ohio Valley, and the United States of America will all benefit from for generations to come.

[1] The UP / NS partnership would open brand new markets with a wildly efficient single line haul move and greatly decreased transit time. Americans greatly benefit from faster, stronger, laser focus, on growing railroads. The UP / NS partnership would be all of that plus so much more.

[2] Despite a Herculean effort to promote, perform upon, and provide a lower cost, higher quality set of supply chains for General Dynamics located in Marion Illinois, we can't even get past the security perimeter, receive a return call, or connect with any logistics decision maker. Rail is the way to ship heavy products plus PGR can provide the oversight of the loaded boxcars all the way to the interchange junction with the BNSF / UP. In summary PGR would greatly appreciate the opportunity to prove rail's value to General Dynamics. Thank you!

[3] There is a significant customer in size and scope that PGR is working with to build a brand-new chemical plant in Marion Illinois. The annual carloads would be incredible along with the investment in a community that can truly use a tidal wave of brand-new commerce.

Knowing that the CAPEX is going to massively secure this important chemical company that in part assures we all have clean and safe water is there a way to increase awareness across multiple Federal and State agencies so we can build a community of supporters to secure the chemical company for placement in Marion Illinois? Progressive Rail is already investing well beyond our annual budget, and we are committed to getting it over the finish line but perhaps there are other levers of support we can pull.

Mr. Fuchs, thank you for reviewing Progressive Rail's support of the UP / NS partnership along with considering a proven way for the Department of Defense to save a significant amount of money if they make a modal conversion from truck to rail. Then, your thoughts on how a group of true America First stakeholders can welcome a brand-new chemical plant to Marion Illinois.

Let's create some significant careers, commerce, and carloadings together!

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

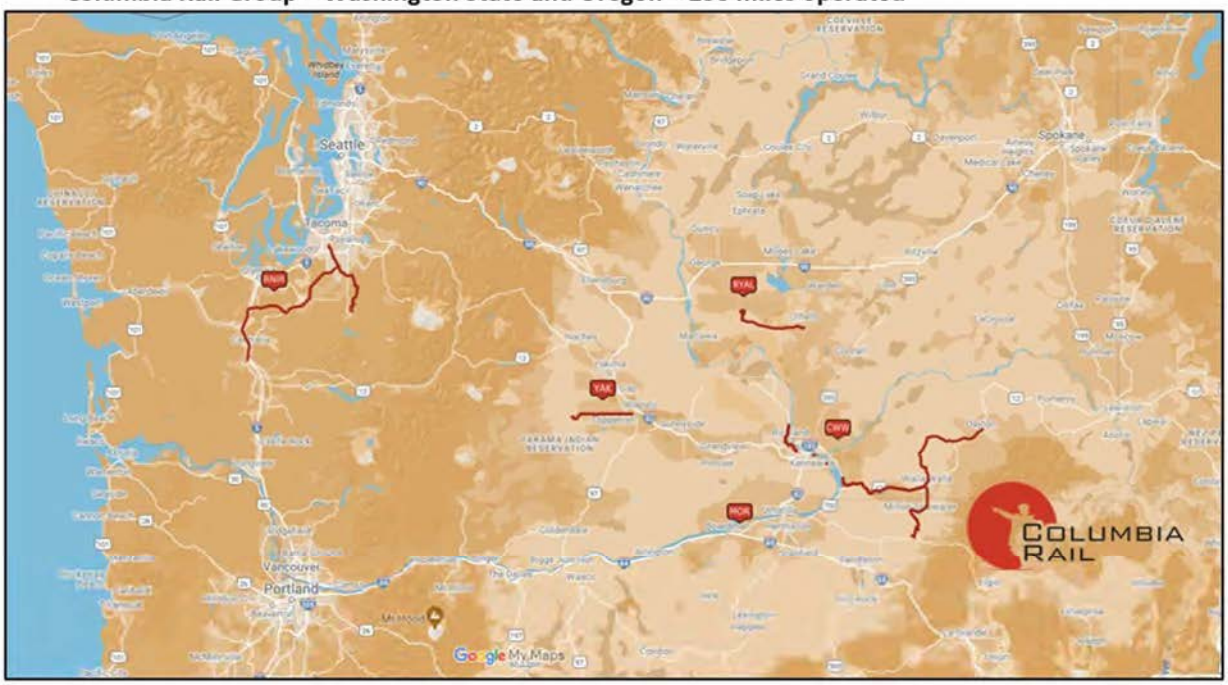
As a longtime short line carrier partner of Union Pacific, CWW LLC, d.b.a. Columbia Rail, is writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

We operate across Eastern Washington and Oregon on a variety of leased and owned lines – our network assembled since 2013 (please note 2nd page service area map). We and our shippers rely on Union Pacific to connect us with origins and destinations across the continent, and to provide efficient, reliable, and cost-effective rail service for safe and timely delivery of goods.

We are excited to see this transcontinental merger develop, as we see the following opportunities:

1. Single line service for our accounts – connecting the current western network of the UP into and through the Great Lakes and Gulf State regions
2. Improved competitiveness of the rail industry – the Transcontinental UP will be able to compete more readily on moves within the mid-continent, which moves currently are challenged (involving two shorter moves over each carrier's periphery)
3. Enhanced competition and simplified networks –a lot of mid-continent terminals and routes can be rebalanced / freed up for transportation utilization, vs. as currently dedicated to processing challenging interchange flows. This is true for the current major interchange terminals (Chicago, etc.) even for non-participants of this merger: interchange with these roads with UP or NS will be reduced, and will consolidate and simplify between these other major carriers

We understand that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on businesses like ours and the broader economy. We note the merger will be structured to enhance competition, and that other major carriers have many opportunities to organize their paths within a US transcontinental rail network era.



Thank you for your consideration of our perspective. We look forward to the continued partnership and enhanced service that this merger will bring to Union Pacific and Columbia Rail.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

Goose Lake Railway is writing to express support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Since our inception in 2017, Goose Lake Railway has relied on Union Pacific as our interchange partner to move our mutual customers' freight to distant markets.

Operating a shortline railroad is challenging, even in the best of conditions. Operating in south-central Oregon and northeast California in two of the least-populated counties in each state brings additional challenges. Even though our interchange exists on a 100 mile long, low density branchline, Union Pacific has been a reliable partner. Not only are the interchange operations consistent and reliable, but Union Pacific has invested millions of dollars in the branch in recent years to maintain its long-term viability.

We believe that the proposed merger will enhance transportation competition and yield significant benefits for shortline partners like us, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: The combined network will offer more direct routes and greater flexibility, minimizing the risk of service disruptions.
- Reduced Transit Times: By eliminating interchanges where rail cars are handed off, the combination will remove several days from transit times, allowing rail to be an even more competitive solution vs other transportation alternatives.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology, and equipment, further improving service quality, capacity, and safety.

The prospect of enhanced opportunities for our customer base to utilize rail transportation is truly exciting!

Our nation needs a robust, financially sound rail transportation network for its continued success into the future.

As the honorable Surface Transportation Board members consider this matter, I respectfully ask that the opportunity this merger presents for positive outcomes across the shortline railroad community and broader national economy are fully considered.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

On behalf of Great Lakes Terminal Railroad (GLTR), I am writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS).

As a Class III short line railroad, Great Lakes Terminal Railroad plays a vital role in linking regional industries to the national freight rail network. For many years, we have worked closely with both UP and NS to deliver efficient, reliable, and cost-effective transportation solutions. These partnerships are foundational to our operations and to the transloading services we provide through Great Lakes Reloading, which depend heavily on the connectivity and performance of these Class I carriers.

The proposed merger represents a forward-looking step for the American rail system. By combining the strengths, resources, and geographic reach of UP and NS, this unification will enhance national logistics efficiency, streamline interchanges, and create a stronger, more resilient network that benefits not only shippers and short lines like ours, but the American public as a whole.

We believe the merger will deliver several important advantages:

• Enhanced Network Integration: The combined system will improve routing efficiency and eliminate interchange delays, resulting in smoother, faster, and more predictable freight movement.
• Improved Reliability and Service: With greater operational coordination and shared infrastructure, service consistency will improve for short line partners and end users alike.
• Investment and Innovation: A unified network will have increased capacity to invest in infrastructure, safety technologies, and sustainability initiatives that strengthen long-term growth.
• Economic and National Benefits: A more cohesive transcontinental network will bolster American manufacturing, agriculture, and energy supply chains, directly supporting jobs and communities across the country.

At Great Lakes Terminal Railroad, we are proud to be part of America's freight backbone. The efficiencies and innovations this merger will bring are essential to keeping our industries competitive, our supply chains secure, and our nation moving forward.

We respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger in recognition of the significant benefits it will bring to short line partners, shippers, and the broader U.S. economy.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

In reference to: Proposed Union Pacific Railroad / Norfolk Southern Corporation

It's interesting to note that today's railroads carry 38–39% of domestic ton-miles and account for 15% of the total value of goods moved in the United States. By contrast, trucks move more freight by both total volume and total value. At one time, however, railroads held nearly a 90% market share of all freight.

> So how does the safest, cleanest, and least intrusive mode of transportation continue to lose share or remain flat in annual volumes?

In a nutshell, our industry lacks true coast-to-coast connectivity on a single line haul—from the West Coast to the East Coast and from the Northern States to the Gulf Coast. Trucks do this, but at a huge cost for the environment and taxpayers. In fact, the Government Accountability Office (GAO) has calculated that a typical tractor-trailer inflicts more than $13,000 of wear and tear damage annually on public roads and bridges. Meanwhile, annual licensing fees average only $4,300–$5,000 per truck. Taxpayers are effectively subsidizing the trucking industry at an epic level.

To summarize why it is mission critical to approve the UP/NS merger, rather than reject it, the business case can be distilled into five key calls to action:

[1] The UP/NS merger will dramatically accelerate connectivity, stimulate commerce, and eliminate a significant ongoing drain on our nation's budget.

[2] Rail truly is in entrepreneurial mode — 100% capitalism at its best. Trucking, by contrast, survives only through highway subsidies. That is not the spirit of America. On a level playing field, rail will prevail.

[3] Railroads are about the American worker. We pay excellent wages, provide strong retirement plans, and offer a generational career path for families across the country.

[4] Nobody wants a tractor pulling three trailers at high speed down the freeway next to a family minivan. That's the direction trucking is heading. Rail, on the other hand, has always been — and remains — the safest land-based mode of transportation in the world.

[5] The American rail network has vast untapped potential. We drive industrial growth like no other mode can. We have the capacity to expand alongside this great nation and the proven track record to do it.

In closing, Progressive Rail's Iowa Traction Railway urges the honorable members of the Surface Transporta[illegible]n Board to expeditiously approve the UP/NS partnership. Nothing else on wheels has the power to usher in America's next great Industrial Revolution.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a long-standing short line partner of Union Pacific, Ironhorse Resources is pleased to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. Our operations across multiple states, including Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, rely on Union Pacific to deliver dependable, cost-effective rail service and to seamlessly connect with our network to meet the needs of our customers.

We believe this merger will generate meaningful advantages for short line partners such as ours, including:

- Greater Network Efficiency: The combined system will provide more direct routings and added flexibility, reducing the likelihood of service interruptions.

- Faster Transit Times: By reducing interchanges, the unified network will eliminate delays and allow rail shipments to reach markets several days sooner, strengthening rail's competitiveness against other modes of transportation.

- Expanded Investment Capacity: A coast-to-coast network will be better positioned to make substantial investments in infrastructure, technology, and equipment that improve service quality, expand capacity, and enhance safety.

- Broader Market Reach: The merger will allow our customers to access a wider range of markets under a single system, opening new opportunities and making our services more competitive.

We recognize that a thorough regulatory review is essential, and we respectfully encourage decision-makers to carefully weigh the positive impact this merger will have on businesses like ours, our customers, and the broader economy.

Thank you for considering our perspective. We look forward to the continued partnership and the stronger service platform this merger will create.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

On behalf of the Mount Hood Railroad, I am writing to voice our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. From our base in Hood River, Oregon, we operate as both a community railroad and a vital connector for shippers who depend on Union Pacific's network to move products safely, efficiently, and competitively.

This merger holds tremendous promise for short-line partners like us, who serve as the first and last mile of America's rail system. Specifically, we see several key benefits that would directly strengthen our operations and the customers who depend on us:

- Improved Reliability and Reach: A unified transcontinental network will reduce handoffs and expand market access, giving our customers greater confidence in rail as a dependable supply chain solution.
- Faster Transit Times: Eliminating unnecessary interchanges will cut days from shipping schedules, making rail a more attractive and competitive alternative to trucking.
- Investment in the Future: The combined strength of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern will unlock greater investment in infrastructure, technology, and equipment—improvements that will ripple down to short lines like ours, enhancing both capacity and safety.

As a railroad that not only delivers freight but also connects people to the beauty and heritage of the Columbia River Gorge, we recognize how essential strong Class I partners are to both our economy and our community. We believe this merger will deliver meaningful benefits—not only for Mount Hood Railroad, but for the thousands of local businesses and communities who depend on the broader rail network.

We appreciate the Surface Transportation Board's careful consideration of this merger and encourage approval in recognition of the value it brings to America's rail system and the communities it serves.

PROGRESSIVE RAIL
INCORPORATED

One of the most epic accomplishments in United States history was the completion of the Transcontinental Railroad. On May 10, 1869, at Promontory Summit, Utah, the Golden Spike was driven into a hand-hewn wooden tie, forever linking East and West.

Fast forward 156 years, and today this Nation has another chance to achieve something epic—this time on a global stage. It's only fitting that America's largest railroad, Union Pacific, joins forces with Norfolk Southern to become exactly what our country needs to compete—and win—for every American citizen.

Today's business environment demands precision efficiency, real-time supply chain solutions, and a speed-to-market tempo that counts seconds, not days. By design, the UP–NS combination will deliver all of that—reviving American manufacturing, creating high-quality careers, and using commerce as a powerful conduit to connect people like never before. This is all being made possible by the same railroad that built America's first transcontinental line. Now, in partnership with Norfolk Southern, Union Pacific is ready to do it again—this time creating America's first truly seamless transcontinental railroad, stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

As Mark Twain said, "History never repeats itself, but it often rhymes." The rhyme we're about to hear will be the sound of American agriculture feeding the world, auto and steel production with no equal, construction materials to build our future, energy exploration to export our resources, and everything else that drives global leadership in innovation, ingenuity, quality, and resolve. All of this is made possible when supply chains give every business—large or small—access to a worldwide market. That's why I fully support the Union Pacific Railroad–Norfolk Southern partnership.

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a longtime shortline partner of both railroads, Railmark Industrial Railway Inc (RIR) is writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. We operate in the rural communities of Iuka Mississippi and Mansfield Louisiana. Our railroad and the communities we serve rely on Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern to provide efficient, reliable, and cost-effective rail service and access to the nation's rail network. This and the vital commercial support they provide allows our railroad to meet the needs of our customers, ensuring the safe, timely delivery of goods.

We believe that the proposed merger will enhance competition and yield significant benefits for shortline partners like us, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: The combined network will offer more direct routes and greater flexibility, minimizing the risk of service disruptions.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As a longtime short line carrier partner of Union Pacific, Rainier Rail, is writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

We operate across Western Washington on 80 owned miles – our network assembled since 2016 (please note 2nd page service area map). We and our shippers rely on Union Pacific to connect us with origins and destinations across the continent, and to provide efficient, reliable, and cost-effective rail service for safe and timely delivery of goods.

We are excited to see this transcontinental merger develop, as we see the following opportunities:

1. Single line service for our accounts – connecting the current western network of the UP into and through the Great Lakes and Gulf State regions
2. Improved competitiveness of the rail industry – the Transcontinental UP will be able to compete more readily on moves within the mid-continent, which moves currently are challenged (involving two shorter moves over each carrier's periphery)
3. Enhanced competition and simplified networks –a lot of mid-continent terminals and routes can be rebalanced / freed up for transportation utilization, vs. as currently dedicated to processing challenging interchange flows. This is true for the current major interchange terminals (Chicago, etc.) even for non-participants of this merger: interchange with these roads with UP or NS will be reduced, and will consolidate and simplify between these other major carriers

We understand that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on businesses like ours and the broader economy. We note the merger will be structured to enhance competition, and that other major carriers have many opportunities to organize their paths within a US transcontinental rail network era.

Thank you for your consideration of our perspective. We look forward to the continued partnership and enhanced service that this merger will bring to Union Pacific and Rainier Rail.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Rio Grande Pacific Corporation Endorses Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern Merger; Sees Historic Opportunity for U.S. Freight Efficiency

FORT WORTH, TEXAS — August 22, 2025 — Rio Grande Pacific Corporation today announced its enthusiastic support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Corporation. The merger will create the first coast-to-coast freight railroad in American history, linking over 50,000 route miles of track across 43 states and reshaping the national logistics landscape.

As a leading short line and regional rail operator, Rio Grande Pacific Corporation views the merger as a positive step toward a more efficient, and competitive domestic freight rail system.

Richard Bertel, Chairman and CEO of Rio Grande Pacific, praised the merger's potential to improve rail transportation nationally:

"The proposed merger represents a reasoned and logical step forward for the national rail system. The combined network should unlock efficiencies that benefit all stakeholders—from large and small shippers, communities and consumers, and railroads and logistics providers. Rio Grande Pacific looks forward to collaborating with the newly combined railroad to help our shippers capitalize on new routing options, new potential markets and growing service enhancements.

"We've long advocated for greater operational alignment in the freight rail industry," Bertel added. "Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern as one, will deliver world class safety cultures, more reliable service, and new opportunities for regional railroads like ours to contribute to a dynamic national freight solution."

Rio Grande Pacific Corporation urges early regulatory approval of the merger, confident that the first truly Transcontinental Railroad will deliver the highest industry standards of safety, service, and innovation, while preserving the skilled workforce that powers the industry.

- Expanded Investment Capacity: A coast-to-coast network will be better positioned to make substantial investments in infrastructure, technology, and equipment that improve service quality, expand capacity, and enhance safety.

- Broader Market Reach: The merger will allow our customers to access a wider range of markets under a single system, opening new opportunities and making our services more competitive.

We recognize that a thorough regulatory review is essential, and we respectfully encourage decision-makers to carefully weigh the positive impact this merger will have on businesses like ours, our customers, and the broader economy.

Dear Honorable Chairman Fuchs,

The typical American family spends approximately 9% of their income on food — about $7,316 per year. Meats, poultry, fish, and eggs account for the largest share of that spending, followed closely by fruits and vegetables.

Interestingly, transportation represents about 9% of the retail cost of food within the overall supply chain.

There is a proven way to deliver fresh, frozen, and packaged foods and beverages more efficiently to markets across the United States. This mode — riding on steel wheels guided by steel rails — moves like none other, with unmatched efficiency and reliability.

The newly proposed Union Pacific Railroad / Norfolk Southern Corporation partnership offers an unprecedented opportunity to strengthen that network. From apples to zucchini, this transcontinental connection could move food faster and more cost-effectively than the all-highway alternative.

Progressive Rail's St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Company, based in Watsonville, California, proudly serves a region that produces cauliflower, broccoli, lettuce, strawberries, raspberries, and the famous Martinelli's Sparkling Fruit Juices. Today, most of these products travel to market by tractor-trailer. However, with a true coast-to-coast rail corridor, frozen strawberries and sparkling apple juice could move with greater purpose and priority — ultimately allowing American consumers to pay less for fresh, healthy, domestically grown food.

By linking the Atlantic and Pacific regions of our nation through an efficient, safe, and temperature-controlled rail network, we can advance both economic and environmental goals while supporting America's farmers and families.

Thank you for considering Progressive Rail's letter of support.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I am the Executive Director of the Tri-Valley—San Joaquin Valley Regional Rail Authority. I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. As a leader of a public agency developing a commuter railroad operation that may share facilities with Union Pacific, I believe that company's economic vitality is an important concern of our agency and our constituents.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to large and small businesses. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth, it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

· Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.

· Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.

· Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.

· Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads, it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

In reference to: Wisconsin Northern Railroads support of the UP - NS partnership.

America's industrial landscape is continually evolving. However, the one constant is that our Nation's railroads continue to innovate and adapt to change. Speaking of change, with the proposed Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Corporation merger, the immediate downstream trifecta win is as follows:

[1] Progressive Rail's Wisconsin Northern Railroad proudly serves Northwest Wisconsin, which happens to be our Nation's largest production area of kidney and garbanzo beans. Even better, a single-line haul from Norma, Wisconsin to Miami, Florida—where many wholesalers are located—will be dramatically more efficient than a two-line haul move.
More importantly, the Union Pacific Railroad's newly proposed network will be far more efficient than tractor-trailers traveling 1,576 miles to handle just one truckload of kidney beans. A single modern boxcar carries the payload of four truckloads. When kidney bean farmers can ship their nutrient-dense products on one railroad over 1,576 miles, every citizen in America benefits—with safer highways, fewer carbon emissions, and relief from the fact that annual trucking license fees don't even come close to covering infrastructure costs. In fact, according to our own Government Accountability Office, fees collected cover only about 50% of rebuild and repair costs.
Unburdening the American taxpayer from the endless cycle of trucks destroying bridges and freeways is a huge win for America.

On a side note, please do not support what the American Trucking Association is proposing: raising weight limits from 80,000 pounds to 97,000 pounds, and permitting 110,000-pound triple-trailer rigs. The risks to motorists—not to mention the added damage to federal infrastructure—are simply a bridge too far, both literally and figuratively.

[2] Industrial development flourishes along the most effective supply chains. The newly proposed 52,215-mile network, spanning forty-three states, is an economic development machine like no other.

[3] America is competing on a world stage, but we also have a massive amount of ground to cover. For perspective, Germany is only about 2.5 times larger than Wisconsin. Now, consider forty-nine more states—many countries don't even face the vast distances we must overcome to reach ports and other centers of commerce. America is huge, and we need a huge railroad to level the playing field with other nations.

Mr. Fuchs, thank you for reviewing Progressive Rail's letter of support. From our perspective here in Northwest Wisconsin, this is not merely a merger — it is an economic development conduit of such scale and scope that it only makes sense when you overlay the UP/NS network across our great country.

YREKA WESTERN RAILROAD ®

Serving Shasta Valley and Siskiyou County California Since 1889

October 14, 2025

The Honorable Patrick J. Fuchs, Chairman
Surface Transportation Board
395 E Street SW
Washington, DC 20423

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

Since 1889 our railroad has been an interchange partner with the Union Pacific Railroad and its predecessors Central Pacific and Southern Pacific railroads. Today the Yreka Railroad Company, doing business as, the Yreka Western Railroad (YW) is writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. The YW operates between the rural communities of Yreka and Montague in Siskiyou County California. The YW and the communities that we serve, rely upon the Union Pacific to provide efficient, reliable, and cost-effective rail service and access to the nation's rail network. This and the vital commercial support they provide allows our railroad to meet the needs of our customers, ensuring the safe, timely delivery of goods.

We believe that the proposed merger will enhance competition and yield significant benefits for shortline partners like us, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: The combined network will offer more direct routes and greater flexibility, minimizing the risk of service disruptions.
- Reduced Transit Times: By eliminating interchanges where rail cars are handed off, the combination will remove several days from transit times, allowing rail to be an even more competitive solution vs other transportation alternatives.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in infrastructure, technology, and equipment, further improving service quality, capacity, and safety.

The YW understands that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on businesses like ours and the broader economy.

This merger is of vital interest in the continued success of not only the YW, but the entire top nine (9) northern counties in the State of California which is heavy centered on agricultural and wood products. Due to rail abandonments over the decades, these nine counties are left with few, if any, rail system access. Inbound fertilizers from Asian markets continue to access our markets through Vancouver in Canada by ship and then trucked down on U.S. highways which counters the ability of the YW's U.S. customers to gain access to the northern California agricultural markets with a better, U.S. produced fertilizer product. Our railroad uniquely terminates at a transload facility right off U.S. Interstate 5, providing multiple points of access to customers in a service area which approximates 20% of the State of California – the largest state in the country in terms of population. Agriculture is vital to our nation's continued interest as our population is expected to increase by another two hundred million people by the year 2050.

This merger, creating a true coast-to-coast railroad, would being tremendous rail economic opportunities to rural northern California. This combination would provide access to additional markets for our customers, which would now be reached more competitively and efficiently. These additional benefits for our customers will in turn contribute positively to the local economies. Access to a truly coast to coast rail network will provide our rural communities which we serve, with better resources and economic development tools to attract economic growth and benefit their citizens.

Thank you for your consideration of our perspective. The Yreka Railroad Company looks forward to the continued partnership and enhanced service that this merger will bring.

RE: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger;
Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

In the northeast region of the State of Louisiana, the Caddo-Bossier Parishes Port Commission (the "Port Commission") is the premier economic development engine in Caddo and Bossier Parishes. Most certainly, a reliable rail service is essential for our local economy, businesses, and residents. The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger offers an opportunity to strengthen these connections and deliver long-term benefits.

The merger promises faster, more dependable service, reduced congestion, and expanded market reach for our businesses. It also means continued investment in rail infrastructure, enhancing safety, creating jobs, and ensuring our community remains competitive in a growing economy.

On behalf of the Caddo-Bossier Parishes Port Commission, I respectfully request the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger to allow the Port Commission to take advantage of the efficiencies, investments, and economic development opportunities to facilitate the transportation of commodities locally, nationally, and across the globe.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

We are writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Tulsa Ports depends on efficient, reliable, and cost-effective rail service to meet the needs of our customers at both the Tulsa Port of Catoosa, where the South Kansas & Oklahoma Railroad interfaces with Union Pacific to directly serve our customers, and at the Tulsa Port of Inola where the Verdigris Southern Railroad connects the industrial park to the Union Pacific network. Our customers transport steel coils and structural steel, soybeans, wheat, fertilizer, asphalt, market pulp, lumber and more by rail, and the Union Pacific Railroad is a crucial partner. The American freight rail network is a critical component of our supply chain allowing us to move large volumes efficiently and sustainably. Tulsa Ports understand the importance of rail to our industrial park tenants, our products, and our national economy. We also understand firsthand how these rail networks need new investments, and new commitments for growth and innovation.

We believe that the proposed merger will enhance competition and yield significant benefits for Union Pacific partners like Tulsa Ports, including improved service reliability, reduced transit times, increased investment, and expanded reach. We understand that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to carefully consider the positive impact this merger will have on businesses like ours and the broader economy.

Thank you for your consideration of our perspective. We look forward to the continued partnership and enhanced service that this merger will bring.

Sincerely,

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket No.: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Greater Nogales Santa Cruz County Port Authority, I am writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Nogales serves as a critical gateway for nearly 7 billion pounds of fresh produce entering the United States from Mexico each year, as well as more than $30 billion in manufactured goods. To date, trucking has been our only reliable means of distribution. The proposed merger offers a transformative opportunity to address longstanding logistical challenges and to expand rail as a viable, competitive transportation option for the industries we support.

A stronger, more integrated rail network is essential for efficiently moving goods from our region to markets across the country — from the West Coast to the Midwest and East Coast — where consumers depend on timely, affordable access to quality products. Previous efforts to ship fresh produce by rail from Nogales to Philadelphia took more than 13 days due to complex switching, transfers, and coordination among multiple carriers. We believe this merger could significantly reduce transit times, improve reliability, and make rail a competitive alternative to trucking.

Multimodal options that are predictable, reliable, and cost-effective are vital not only to Nogales but to the broader U.S. economy. As Arizona's only rail gateway to Mexico, Nogales is a strategic national asset — critical to resilient supply chains, efficient mobility, and long-term economic growth.

We look forward to continuing our strong partnership with Union Pacific and to working with the new, combined company to advance the logistics solutions that our region and nation need. We respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger in recognition of the significant benefits it will deliver to Nogales and the U.S. economy.

Respectfully,

Joshua Rubin, Chairman

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Port of New Orleans (Port NOLA), I am writing to express support for the proposed Union Pacific (UP) and Norfolk Southern (NS) merger and to emphasize the critical importance of the New Orleans rail gateway to the State of Louisiana, the broader Gulf region, and the national freight network.

Freight rail plays a central and irreplaceable role in the economic competitiveness of the Gulf Coast and the heartland of America. Our region – and Louisiana in particular – serves as a major conduit for the movement of agricultural products, energy commodities, manufactured goods, and industrial materials that power the U.S. economy. The ability of these industries to access national and global markets depends on secure, reliable, and efficient supply chains—with rail connectivity as a cornerstone of that system.

Both UP and NS have long been valued transportation partners for Port NOLA. Their networks provide essential connections that serve our tenants, support regional industries, and ensure access to customers across the country. Equally important is the strong working relationship between the two railroads. Their sustained collaboration in the New Orleans rail gateway has been vital to maintaining fluid, dependable operations and remains a critical factor for the future success of the Louisiana International Terminal, one of the most significant infrastructure investments in the state's and nation's history.

A fluid, resilient, and competitive rail network is essential not only for Louisiana's economy but for the reliability and performance of supply chains nationwide. Enhancements that improve service consistency, reduce transit times, strengthen interchange efficiency, and increase network capacity directly benefit Port NOLA's customers and the broader commercial and industrial sectors that rely on our multimodal gateway. As global supply chains continue to evolve, it is imperative that the New Orleans rail gateway remains a strong, well-invested, and operationally sound link within the national freight system.

As discussions regarding the proposed merger advance, Port NOLA appreciates the opportunity to underscore the importance of a rail system that continues to meet the needs of a diverse customer base while supporting the long-term economic growth of Louisiana and the region. Ensuring that the New Orleans gateway maintains its efficiency, competitiveness, and strategic positioning is critical to the health of national and international freight flows.

Port NOLA looks forward to continued collaboration with UP, NS, and all stakeholders as we work together to strengthen rail connectivity, enhance supply chain performance, support industrial growth, and promote a sustainable and competitive transportation network for decades to come.

Reg: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

I am writing to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern — recognizing the significant benefits this will bring to our state's economy and key regional assets such as the Port of Hueneme.

The Port of Hueneme is one of the most productive and efficient commercial trade gateways for niche cargo on the West Coast and consistently ranks among the top ten U.S. Ports for automobiles and fresh produce. Port operations support the community by bringing $2.8 billion in economic activity and creating 25,000 trade-related jobs. Trade through the Port of Hueneme generates more than $236 million in direct and related state and local taxes, which fund vital community services.

Union Pacific supports the Port of Hueneme's supply chain by providing critical rail connectivity and logics services that enhance cargo movement efficiency by reducing congestion and strengthening regional trade infrastructure. Union Pacific serves as a key rail link between the Port and inland markets, enabling the efficient movement of goods such as automobiles, agricultural products, and consumer goods.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to large and small businesses. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.

- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

For the Port of Hueneme — an essential gateway for agricultural exports, automotive imports, and regional commerce — this merger promises to enhance freight connectivity, provide faster turnaround times, and improve access to inland markets. These improvements will help the port remain competitive by continuing to support thousands of jobs and millions of dollars in economic activity across the region.

This merger is about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

We respectfully ask for your support to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal.

SUBJECT: STRONG SUPPORT FOR UNION PACIFIC CORPORATION AND NORFOLK SOUTHERN CORPORATION ACQUSITION, DOCKET: FD36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Port of Los Angeles, the nation's premier trade gateway and the busiest container port in the Western Hemisphere, I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed acquisition of Norfolk Southern Corporation by Union Pacific Corporation. The efficiency of the U.S. supply chain, which originates here in the San Pedro Bay, is inextricably linked to the fluidity of our national freight rail network.

This acquisition, which proposes to create the country's first truly transcontinental railroad, represents a vital and timely step forward in strengthening the resilience and competitiveness of American logistics. The formation of a seamless, single-line service from the Pacific to the Atlantic will yield tangible benefits critical to port operations:

- Enhanced Operational Fluidity and Velocity: By eliminating multiple interchanges and car hand-offs, we anticipate significant reductions in transit times and improved service reliability for intermodal cargo moving out of our terminals. This is the single most effective way to prevent the crippling port congestion that has recently plagued the national supply chain.

- Infrastructure Investment: The combined financial strength of this new entity will position it to accelerate multi-billion-dollar investments in modern infrastructure, digital technology, and enhanced safety protocols that are necessary to handle increasing cargo volumes and keep our gateway competitive.

- Expanded Market Access: The unified network expands the reach and speed-to-market for American exports, especially those generated in the West, thereby reinforcing the Port of Los Angeles' role in driving national economic growth and increasing the velocity of critical supply chains.

This merger is a strategic imperative that secures the future of our nation's freight transportation network. It is a necessary move to support our economy and ensure that American freight rail remains globally preeminent.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the profound and necessary benefits it will bring to the Port of Los Angeles and the entire national economy.

Union Pacific has long been a foundational partner in Utah's economic development. Their continued investment in our communities has supported commerce, connected markets, and created opportunities for generations. While details of the proposed merger with Norfolk Southern are still pending, we believe a well-designed merger of this type has the unique opportunity to build upon this foundation and deliver significant benefits for Utah businesses, shippers, and communities. It is our desire that this merger will accomplish the following objectives:

- Improved Service Reliability: Integrated operations and streamlined routes should help reduce disruptions and improve schedule dependability. This level of reliability should make rail more competitive with other modes of transportation, such as trucking, while addressing security risks.

- Reduced Transit Times and Lower Costs: More direct service should accelerate the movement of goods and reduce handling. This in turn must reduce costs for Utah shippers and enable them to compete more effectively in the global marketplace. Faster, more efficient rail service at competitive rates provides a viable alternative to long-haul trucking, strengthening both economic and environmental outcomes.

801.538.8950 ■ inlandportauthority.utah.gov

- Increased Investment: A stronger rail network must be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems across the entire network–not just coastal states. These are critical steps toward securing supply chains and keeping organized crime and other bad actors out of the transportation network.

- Expanded Market Reach at Competitive Rates: Greater connectivity must open new opportunities for Utah products, strengthen supply chain resiliency across industries, and make Utah manufacturers significantly more competitive in markets across the United States.

This transcontinental merger represents a forward-looking investment in the future by connecting our nation's freight transportation system coast to coast. It has the ability to enhance capacity, reduce costs to shippers, support economic development, and ensure that American freight rail remains a competitive, sustainable, and reliable network.
If these objectives can be met, we respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal.

Sincerely,

Ben Hart

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

Serving as police chief for the Village of Albers, Illinois, I see daily the benefits of having training available through Norfolk Southern Railroad. I have been informed that in 2024, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern trained more than 10,000 first responders in specialized areas, including desperately needed life saving measures.

Furthermore, Norfolk Southern has also assisted us in obtaining much needed equipment and supplies for both the police department and the local fire department. This equipment has proven to save lives and property in the past and will without doubt continue to provide additional resources we may not have had the opportunity to afford without the financial assistance provided. Positive coordination efforts between railroads and emergency services solidify the commitment in being ready to protect our communities when it matters most.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger creates and strengthens our community alliances and brings continued venture in railway infrastructure – leading enhanced public safety, strengthening neighborhood resilience, and creates stability amongst first responders from coast to coast.

I promote the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger swiftly and politely invite you to do the same – unlocking the investments, collaborative safety benefits, and broader economic opportunities it will bring.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As Fire Chief of Camp Hill, Pennsylvania, I am writing to express my support for the proposed merger between Norfolk Southern (NS) and Union Pacific (UP). Our region serves as a major regional hub for Norfolk Southern and is home to a diverse manufacturing base – from food and beverage production to precision metalworking – making this merger a significant economic opportunity for our community and the broader region.

Situated along the banks of the Susquehanna River, NS's Harrisburg rail facilities are among the busiest intermodal rail centers on the East Coast, with over 637,000 containers and trailers passing through Harrisburg and Rutherford Yards each year. By establishing the nation's first seamless coast-to-coast rail network, this merger will enhance the efficiency and affordability of freight rail, encouraging more businesses to choose this safer and more sustainable mode of transportation. The resulting increase in freight traffic through our intermodal facilities will stimulate job growth in the rail sector and strengthen our region's position as a prime location for manufacturers seeking reliable, accessible transportation infrastructure.

Beyond economic opportunities, the merger promises meaningful daily benefits for our residents. Increased rail efficiency will reduce the number of long-haul trucks on our highways and bridges – vehicles that place significant strain on shared infrastructure and pose safety risks to our communities. Alleviating highway congestion will save taxpayers time and money while making our roads safer for everyone.

On behalf of the people of Camp Hill, I strongly support this merger and the economic opportunities it represents for our community. I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve it without delay.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Mark A. Simpson

Subject: Support for the Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Railroad Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

On behalf of the Cherry Valley Fire Protection District, I am writing to express our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Railroad. As a fire chief who has worked closely with Union Pacific in matters of emergency preparedness and response, I can attest to their longstanding commitment to public safety, first responders, and the communities they serve.

Our District has directly benefited from Union Pacific's investment in first responder training. Union Pacific sponsored members of our department to attend the Security and Emergency Response Training Center (SERTC) in Pueblo, Colorado, where our personnel received specialized instruction in hazardous materials response and rail incident management. This training has enhanced our ability to respond effectively to emergencies, improving the safety of both our firefighters and the residents we protect. Their continued dedication to ensuring that first responders are well-prepared for rail-related emergencies demonstrates the kind of corporate responsibility that sets Union Pacific apart as an industry leader.

We believe that a merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern would not only strengthen the rail industry but also ensure that the highest standards of safety, reliability, and emergency preparedness remain a priority. Both companies have a proven record of investing in infrastructure, technology, and partnerships that benefit local communities and first responders.

For these reasons, the Cherry Valley Fire Protection District respectfully urges the Surface Transportation Board to approve the proposed merger. We are confident that the combined strength of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern will further enhance rail safety, support first responders, and promote long-term economic and community benefits across the nation.

Thank you for your consideration.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger (STB Docket FD 36873)

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a first responder for the City of Orrville, Ohio Fire Department, I see firsthand how vital dependable infrastructure is to the safety of our neighborhoods and surrounding communities. In 2024, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern trained more than 10,000 first responders, equipping us with tools and knowledge to act fast when every second counts. The training isn't just helpful – it's lifesaving. The Orrville Fire Department, the citizens and businesses we serve has been the direct benefactor of the generosity from the Norfolk Southern Community Grant Program helping us replace with new Hurst "Jaws of Life" Hydraulic Rescue Tools and Heavy Lifting Air Bags capable of lifting railcars. Strong coordination between railroads and emergency services ensures we're ready to respond and protect our communities and partners when it matters most. I can speak firsthand, the relationship and communication that we have with Norfolk Southern is outstanding! We are invited to and attend a couple of their safety meetings each year to keep all parties up to date on any changes that have occurred.

The proposed Union Pacific-Norfolk Southern merger builds on our community partnerships and brings continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing public safety, strengthening neighborhood resilience, and creates continuity amongst first responders from coast to coast.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger swiftly – unlocking the investments, collaborative safety benefits, and broader economic opportunities it will bring.

Sincerely,

Christopher M. Bishop

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

Dauphin County Hazardous Materials Response Team serves communities across Dauphin, Perry, and Schuylkill Counties in Pennsylvania, protecting over 500,000 residents and 10 million travelers per year. We understand the critical importance of strong partnerships between railroads and emergency responders. With hundreds of miles of railroad within our first-due coverage area, coordinated preparedness is not optional – it's essential.

In 2025, we are proud to receive a grant from Norfolk Southern that directly supported our mission to protect lives and property. We continue to train alongside our railroad partners every year, ensuring our team is equipped and ready to respond effectively to rail-related incidents. These collaborations have made a real difference on the ground – providing not just training, but trust and real-time coordination during emergencies.

The proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern represents an opportunity to deepen this partnership. We believe it will bring continued investment in safety, infrastructure, and training, ensuring seamless coordination across jurisdictions and improving the resilience of our communities from coast to coast.

We respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger without delay. It will deliver critical safety and infrastructure benefits to first responders like us and the communities we proudly serve.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President of the Illinois Firefighters Association, the oldest and largest firefighter organization in the state, I am writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. We support efforts that enhance rail travel, making it easier and safer for its customers. The safety of our firefighters, railroad workers and general public is always our greatest concern and we believe this merger will greatly improve safety on the rail systems throughout our state and also nationwide. We know this merger will provide tremendous benefit to our state.

Union Pacific has also long been an essential transportation partner for Illinois, providing efficient, reliable and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

We recognize the crucial role that improved infrastructure plays in our region's economic success and we are supportive of efforts that drive growth and development across Illinois.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the tremendous benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Sincerely,

Terry L. Ford, President

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As Chief of Police for the City of Nicholasville, I witness firsthand how critical dependable infrastructure and coordinated emergency response are to the safety and well-being of our community. The partnerships our department has developed with major rail carriers such as Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern have strengthened our preparedness and ensured that our officers and first responders have the training and resources they need when emergencies arise.

In 2024 alone, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern provided training to thousands of first responders across the nation, including right here in Kentucky. These programs have enhanced our ability to respond safely and effectively to incidents involving rail transportation — protecting our residents, our officers, and our local environment. Norfolk Southern also provided our agency with a public safety grant in 2023 in the amount of $12,000 to purchase an Unmanned Aircraft System (Drone) which has greatly increased the efficiency and quality of our response to critical incidents, missing people, and drug enforcement operations.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger represents an opportunity to expand on these successes. It will bring continued investment in critical rail infrastructure, improve coordination with emergency services, and foster a more resilient transportation network that benefits communities like Nicholasville and countless others across the country.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger, recognizing the significant safety, training, and infrastructure benefits it will provide to first responders and the communities we serve.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

I am writing this letter as the Fire Chief of South Beaver Township Volunteer Fire Department in Beaver County, Pennsylvania. I have been a member of the department and a first responder for 32 years. I was brought up in a "fire family" and have been around public safety my entire life. I am also currently the Assistant Police Chief in Patterson Township in Beaver County, Pennsylvania. I have been employed as a police officer since 2010. I am also currently a state certified EMT and have been since around 2000.

As you can imagine, I have seen and been involved in a multitude of different incidents at all levels. I see firsthand how vital dependable infrastructure is to the safety of our neighborhoods. I have also witnessed the rapid decline of volunteer personnel over the years to which we are at critical levels.

In 2024, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern trained more than 10,000 first responders, equipping us with tools and knowledge to act fast when every second counts. The training is not just helpful – it is lifesaving. Strong coordination between railroads and emergency services ensures we are ready to protect our communities when it matters most. With the declining personnel, decreasing budgets, increase in call volume and the additional duties needed to be done at volunteer fire departments, time and funding too often is factor in providing specialized training to members. Norfolk Southern has helped my department bridge some of that gap.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger builds on our community partnerships and brings continued investment in rail infrastructure – enhancing public safety, strengthening neighborhood resilience, and creates continuity amongst first responders from coast to coast.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger swiftly – unlocking the investments, collaborative safety benefits, and broader economic opportunities it will bring.

Subject: Support for Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Merger, Docket Number: FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As Executive Director of the Tri County Emergency Medical Services, Inc., I am writing to express my strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern.

Our non-profit organization provides 911 ambulance service to parts of San Patricio, Aransas, and Nueces Counties. Union Pacific has offered unwavering support to our organization with education, ambulance, and equipment funding.

Freight rail is a cornerstone of our state's economy, safely moving the goods that power our industries, support our farmers, and connect our communities to markets across the nation and the world. Union Pacific has long been an essential transportation partner for our state, providing efficient, reliable, and cost-effective service to businesses large and small. The American freight rail network is not only critical to our economic growth – it is also one of the most sustainable modes of transportation available, helping reduce highway congestion and emissions.

The proposed merger offers a unique opportunity to strengthen this network and deliver tangible benefits for shippers, consumers, and communities, including:

- Improved Service Reliability: More direct routes and greater operational flexibility will help prevent service disruptions and improve schedule dependability.
- Reduced Transit Times: Eliminating certain interchanges will speed the movement of goods, helping our businesses reach customers faster and more competitively.
- Increased Investment: The transcontinental railroad will be better positioned to invest in modern infrastructure, advanced technology, and enhanced safety systems.
- Expanded Reach: The broader geographic footprint will open new markets for our state's products and strengthen supply chain resilience.

This merger is about more than just railroads – it's about securing the future of our transportation network, supporting economic development, and ensuring American freight rail remains globally competitive.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to give full and favorable consideration to this proposal, recognizing the benefits it will bring to our state and the national economy.

Sincerely,

In 2024, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern trained more than 10,000 first responders, equipping us with the tools and knowledge needed to act swiftly when every second counts. This training is not just helpful—it truly saves lives. Strong coordination between railroads and emergency services ensures that we are prepared to protect our communities when it matters most.

The proposed merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern would strengthen our community partnerships and lead to continued investment in rail infrastructure. This enhancement will improve public safety, bolster neighborhood resilience, and create a unified network among first responders from coast to coast.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger promptly, as it will unlock vital investments, collaborative safety benefits, and broader economic opportunities for our communities.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As President of the Walker County Amateur Radio Emergency Service, I am writing to convey our organization's support of the proposed merger between Norfolk Southern Corporation and Union Pacific Corporation.

Norfolk Southern has shown outstanding commitment to community service and safety, including a $5,000 grant to our non-profit organization that strengthened our emergency communications capabilities. Through this partnership, we have come to recognize Norfolk Southern as a company deeply committed to safety, preparedness, and community engagement. Based on this experience, we believe the proposed merger with Union Pacific will create a stronger, more efficient rail network that promotes economic resilience, operational safety, and long-term community benefit.

We respectfully urge the Board to approve this merger swiftly so its benefits can be realized without delay

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

As a Fire Chief in Asheville, NC, I see firsthand how vital dependable infrastructure is to the safety and resilience of our neighborhoods. In 2024, Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern trained over 10,000 first responders nationwide, equipping them with the tools and knowledge to act quickly when every second counts. That kind of training isn't just helpful—it's lifesaving. Strong coordination between railroads and emergency services ensures we're ready to protect our communities when it matters most.

Equally important are the local investments these railroads make through grants to fire departments, including ours. These resources directly strengthen our ability to respond to emergencies, upgrade critical equipment, and safeguard both residents and responders. When rail partners invest in local fire services, they invest in community safety.

The proposed Union Pacific–Norfolk Southern merger builds on these partnerships, promising continued investment in rail infrastructure and safety initiatives nationwide. It enhances public safety, supports local emergency preparedness, and fosters continuity among first responders from coast to coast.

I respectfully urge the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger swiftly—unlocking new opportunities for investment, collaboration, and the shared goal of keeping our communities safe and strong.

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

This correspondence is written in strong support for the merger of Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern Railways. In our Fire Department that provides emergency response to the West Hazleton, PA, and surrounding communities (with a regional population of approximately 83,442), we recognize the critical need for our regional infrastructure to remain solid and dependable. In fact, Norfolk Southern's tracks run directly through our Borough of West Hazleton, providing vital transport and shipping of our industrial materials and products daily. The importance of the railway infrastructure is undeniable central to the numerous industries in our community, as they are a key to the economic stability and development of this community. Our fire department has come to know and value Norfolk Southern very highly as we gratefully have received two recent grants from Norfolk Southern to upgrade our HAZMAT capacities in the most safe and efficient manner possible. In return in early 2025, we were able to successfully suppress a brush fire that was directly threatening the Norfolk Southern tracks in our community. Our partnership with the railroads has been and will continue to be a high priority for the West Hazleton Fire Department as our need to protect the infrastructure of the rail system in our area is considered vital to our community's continued success.

As the proposed Union Pacific-Norfolk Southern merger would bring continued investment to rail infrastructure and bolster public safety directly for our residents, we strongly advocate for this merger. By creating national continuity for the rail system and the emergency responders who vow to protect it, this merger can only serve to strengthen local communities and partnerships with local fire departments like us-a win/win situation. The West Hazleton Fire Department respectfully requests the Surface Transportation Board to approve this merger in a timely manner as it can only create enhancements to safety, partnerships, and numerous economic developments. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the Westshore Technical Rescue Team, I am writing to express our strong support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Railway. As a regional emergency response organization serving the Westshore communities of northeast Ohio, we recognize the critical importance of strong and coordinated infrastructure in safeguarding our residents and environment. Norfolk Southern has demonstrated a long-standing commitment to emergency preparedness and responder safety through its grant program and public safety partnerships.

Our team has been fortunate to receive Norfolk Southern grant funding on two separate occasions. The first grant enabled us to purchase a thermal-imaging drone, which has greatly enhanced our aerial search, situational awareness, and hazardous environment operating capabilities. Most recently, Norfolk Southern's support allowed us to acquire self-contained breathing apparatus (SCBA) units for hazardous materials response operations. These investments have significantly improved responder safety, streamlined operations, and increased our ability to protect the public during complex emergency events.

These contributions represent more than equipment—they reflect a meaningful and effective partnership that strengthens community resilience and supports the readiness of first responders. We believe the continued collaboration and expanded safety initiatives that will result from this merger will provide long-term benefits to emergency response organizations nationwide.

For these reasons, the Westshore Technical Rescue Team respectfully urges the Surface Transportation Board to approve the merger between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern. We look forward to the continued advancements in safety, emergency coordination, and public-private collaboration that this partnership will bring.

This merger represents a transformative opportunity for the railroad industry and its workforce. We recognize that this merger presents an opportunity to strengthen long-term stability, expand opportunities for our members, and protect quality jobs for the future.

RE: Support for the Proposed Merger Between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern

Dear Chairman Fuchs:

On behalf of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, I offer our support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Corporation. This merger represents a transformative opportunity for the railroad industry and its workforce. We recognize that this merger presents an opportunity to strengthen long-term stability, expand opportunities for our members and protect quality jobs for the future.

The Boilermakers union was born out of the Industrial Revolution in 1880, and the rail industry has been integral to our craft since our earliest days. Today, members repair and rebuild diesel locomotives and weld railroad tracks. Boilermakers' skilled craftsmanship ensures that locomotives and infrastructure operate safely and efficiently, which is essential to maintain fluid rail operations and deliver reliable service to customers.

Recently, the Boilermakers union and Union Pacific entered into an historic agreement that protects our members' jobs for the length of their careers following the merger transaction. We believe the commitments already in place – and the shared understanding reflected in our agreement – lay the groundwork for a stronger, more resilient and more opportunity - rich future for every union Boilermaker serving the railroad industry.

We understand that regulatory review is an important part of this process, and we encourage the relevant authorities to recognize Union Pacific's commitment to protecting its workforce and bear in mind the positive impact this merger will have on labor and the broader economy.

Thank you for your consideration of our perspective. We look forward to the continued growth, innovation, and partnership this merger will bring.

As the President of the National Conference of Firemen and Oilers (NCFO), I write to express my support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Corporation. This merger represents a transformative opportunity for the railroad industry and its workforce. We recognize that this merger presents an opportunity to strengthen long-term stability, expand opportunities for our members, and protect quality jobs for the future.

Re: SMART-TD Statement in Support for the Proposed Merger Between Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern, STB FD 36873

Dear Chairman Fuchs,

As the president of the nation's largest railroad union, I write on behalf of SMART-TD to express support for the proposed merger between Union Pacific Railroad and Norfolk Southern Corporation. SMART-TD evaluates every merger on how it will impact members' jobs, livelihoods, and long-term stability. While a unified, transcontinental railroad has the potential to support sustained investment in infrastructure, expand network capacity, and improve service reliability, past mergers have not always delivered greater job security or long-term stability for railroad workers. That history shapes SMART-TD's approach to this transaction.

In September, following extensive discussions, SMART TD and Union Pacific reached a historic agreement, that provides extraordinary job protections for members in train and yardmaster service. Under that agreement, Union Pacific guaranteed these employees job protection for the length of their careers following the transaction, committing that these employees of both Union Pacific and Norfolk Southern will not face involuntary furloughs. This commitment is unprecedented in modern rail consolidations. For our members, many of whom have lived through previous mergers marked by job loss and uncertainty, these protections are both significant and rare.

This agreement is the product of sustained and constructive dialogue between SMART-TD and Union Pacific about the needs and concerns of front-line railroad workers. It demonstrates that genuine engagement between labor and management can produce solutions that support operational goals while safeguarding the livelihoods of the employees who make rail service possible.

SMART-TD recognizes that regulatory review is essential to determining whether the proposed merger serves the public interest. As part of that review, SMART-TD respectfully encourages the Board to consider the significance of these job-protection commitments and the stability they provide to thousands of working railroaders and their families. The agreement offers a model for how major transactions can proceed without placing undue risk on the workforce and represent a positive development for both industry and labor.

Thank you for your consideration of the perspective of SMART-TD on behalf of the members we represent. We remain committed to ensuring that any merger is carried out safely, in the public interest, and with the interests of railroad workers firmly protected.

Sincerely,

Jeremy Ferguson
